Why It Pays To Trade With Firms That Advertise
Advertising creates sales. The modern business man knows this; he also knows that it is based upon many sales with a small profit rather than on a few with big profits. The world knows the firm that advertises must use out-of-date methods.

Here's New Warm Barn

Can Be Built of Straw Bales at Very small Cost

Animals well housed can be brought thru the winter on one-third less feed than if they are simply allowed to "rough it," says one member of the animal husbandry department at Iowa State college. About one-half of the feed goes to maintain an animals body heat; a cold barn therefore means more feed needed.

Even with corn at one dollar a bushel, those farmers who have formerly fed their stock in the open will find that they can winter their stock just as cheaply as at former feed prices if they house them in good, warm sheds.

And good shelter does not necessarily mean expensive buildings. Excellent results may be secured from the use of temporary shelters of bales of straw. The walls are made by placing the bales flatwise one on top of the other, breaking the joints as in laying brick. Windows and doors can be arranged by leaving out a sufficient number of bales. Ordinary windows may be inserted in the openings which are to be used for that purpose. Poles covered with straw, held in place by woven wire, make a suitable roof. Lining the shed with a fine meshed woven wire will keep the animals from eating the straw. Stakes should be driven in to keep the lower bales in place. Such a shed is not only cheap, but very warm and comfortable. It can be used for horses, cattle, sheep, hogs or poultry.

TROPHY FOR HANCOCK COUNTY CORN

The farmers of Hancock county are to have the opportunity of winning a beautiful silver trophy on their corn this winter. At the State Corn and Small Grain Show at Iowa State college, Ames, January 29th to February 9th the lucky man is to be picked.

Through the generosity of the Commercial State Bank of Britt this cup has been provided for the exhibitor of the best ten ears of corn shown from Hancock county at the State Show. The winner is to have his name engraved on the trophy and has the privilege of keeping the cup a year. Then it is to be passed on to someone else, for the rules of the contest state that he is eligible to win.

C. A. Hartwig won the trophy last year. Each sample sent in to compete for the trophy will be examined by a competent corn judge and a written report of the good and poor points of the sample attached to it. This may be of some help to the exhibitor in choosing other samples later on.

If other information concerning the trophy is desired it may be had by writing to the Iowa Corn and Small Grain Growers' Association, Ames, Iowa.

More Money to Cream'ry

Test Association Means Money to Creameryman as Well as to Milker

That a co-operative cow testing association means not only more money to the man who milks but incidentally more money to the man buys the milk, is the conclusion reached by Henry Bachous, secretary of the Manly Creamery at Manly, Iowa, who has recently gleaned some facts from his creamery books that are interesting.

In 1914 the Progressive Cow Testing association was formed among the farmers about Manly. At the end of this year, Bachouse, to satisfy his curiosity as to the value of the test association, from the standpoint of increased milk production, looked in his books to compare the 1914 fat receipts with those of the year 1913 when no test association existed. He chose four farmers who had not only the same number of cows but the same number of cows which they had had in 1913 before the association was formed. Here is what he found:

1914—H. Doble	13	2570.6
1913—H. Doble	13	1956.5
1914—H. Backhouse	12	2305.8
1913—H. Backhouse	15	1670.2
1914—H. Benjegerdes	20	3639.8
1913—H. Benjegerdes	20	2600.7
1914—Logeman	9	1858.2
1913—Logeman	9	1361.2

These farmers, simply because they had found thru tests that they were feeding an unbalanced ration began to supplement their common farm feed with oil meal and cotton seed meal and thus thru better feeding increased their fat production 2,705 lbs. And the farmers wasn't the only ones to gain thereby, says Bachouse who boosts that increase.

FARMERS TAKE NOTICE

I sold my iron, about two hundred ton, and will give you farmers another chance to bring in your iron until the 15th of January, 1917. This is your last chance to sell your iron. Old iron dropped $3.00 per ton, but I will pay you the same as before, $6 per ton or 30 cts per hundred.

Henry Lau & Son will weigh and pay you for your iron.

BELT GROWN INTO FLESH

Once, When Bulging With Gold, It Held Serbian Owner at Bottom of Harbor.

Omaha, Neb.—As a tree grows over a horseshoe that is carelessly hung on a branch when the tree is young, so the flesh of Ziva Ross, a Serbian now living in this city has grown partly over a great steel and leather belt this man has worn since he was a boy in his teens.

The police of the South Side put him on the table in the station a night or two ago and removed the belt after laboring over an hour with pincers, pliers, file and pinch bars. The belt, which for years had been too small for the man, had cut deeply into his body, and rolls of flesh and skin on the man's back and abdomen had grown down half way over the 6 inch width of the belt. Thus this belt, for the second time in the Serbian's career, had nearly cost him his life.

The belt with great buckles was socked upon his person in Serbia many years ago. It contained compartments where gold could be stored. That was the original purpose of the belt.

When he landed in New York three years ago from Europe he carried $4,000 in gold coins with him in the belt. Now this sum in gold coins takes a considerable weight. Coming down the gangplank he slipped and fell into New York Bay. He went to the bottom and did not arise again. Officers on duty looked for him to bob up, but he did not. A life crew was summoned. The men found him lying flat on the bottom of the bay, unable to move. They dragged him to the surface and pumped the water out of him. It was found on examination that it was the weight of the gold that had held him down.

Today the $4,000 in gold is gone. The Serbian is penniless. He was arrested on a warrant here for some petty crime, and it was then that the belt was discovered. It was then, also that he told the story of his narrow escape from death at the bottom of New York Bay.

The huge buckle of the belt had rusted so that it could not be worked, and the leather had grown extremely hard, almost like a board.

Minus Red Tape

The formality of arranging for your farm mortgage loan is just an ordinary business transaction in this Bank.

We handle so many such loans during the year that we long since eliminated all the unnecessary fuss and red tape and have reduced the transaction to the few actual requirements.

An application to be filled out, term, rates and interest dates pre-arranged, examination and approval of title, the papers signed and acknowledged—and the money turned over to the borrower. And all this, without inconvenience to the man who seeks the loan.

We have ample funds to loan on improved farms in this locality.

AMERICAN GOLD IS RETURNED BY ALLIES

Money Sent to Paris In 1904 Comes Back With Seals Unbroken.

New York, Dec. 28.—The largest single day's importation of gold into this country was recorded today with the deposit of $32,000,000 by J. P. Morgan & Co., in the New York and Philadelphia assay offices. Of this amount $25,000,000 deposited here was in the form of American eagles, being the identical gold which was shipped to Paris in April, 1904, during the Roosevelt administration by this government as part of the payment of $40,000,000 made to the old French Panama Canal company for its equities in the canal.

It was brought back to this country in the same boxes in which it was sent abroad and in which it has been kept for nearly 13 years. This gold represented the first importation in the form of American gold eagles since the present movement began.

Today's consignments bring the total gold importations for the year up to $678,000,000, exceeding by several hundred millions the inflow for any previous year.

NEBRASKA NEWS NOTES

NEBRASKA CORN SHOW AT LINCOLN JANUARY 15

Lincoln, Neb., Dec. 29.—Farmers who think they have better corn than their neighbors will have opportunity to test their judgment this winter by sending samples to the Nebraska state corn show to be held at Lincoln, January 15 to 18.

This show is an annual affair conducted by the Nebraska Corn Improvers' association. Indications point to a much larger entry list this year than ever before. Three hundred dollars are offered in cash prizes as well as a large amount of machinery and several trophies. A manure spreader is to go to the grand champion 10 ears in the entire show. A corn planter and a riding lister are also included in the premium list

GREAT STRIDE IS MADE IN SURGERY

Carrel Method of Counting Germs Employed In French War Service May Revolutionize Practice.

New York, Dec 29.—Great as have been the surgical achievements in the course of the present war, there has been as yet no single discovery that has rivaled Dr. Alexis Carrel's method of the treatment of septic wounds as the most notable addition to surgical science, according to a senior surgeon of the American ambulance hospital at Neuilly, near Paris, who has just returned to this country. "The French hospitals are slowly adopting the Carrel method," he said, "and in the American ambulance hospital we have been using it for several months with gratifying results which seem to show that Dr Carrel has proved his thesis.

"The reduction of septic wound treatment to an almost mathematical basis is a feature of the Carrel method that suggests the fanciful thought of the possibility that the day may come when a surgeon's work will in some respects be like that of a train dispatcher. Having brought to him from day to day the microscopic count of the germs in a given wound, the surgeon may perhaps figure with preciseness the day on which the wound will be in shape to close completely. The two-hourly irrigation of the wound by the Dakin or other solution, is a highly important feature of the Carrel method, but the most interesting factor is the daily microscopic count of the germs These germs are taken from given areas of the wound, placed under a microscope and counted, and from this count the progress of the healing is gauged. There are perhaps less germs today than yesterday, so many less tomorrow; and so the rate of the diminishing suppuration is established. The surgeon, almost without looking at the wound, can determine, when the count gets down to a given number, that it is safe to close it.

"The American Ambulance hospital is the best single thing which America can do for France," he said. "The hospital has been at all times since its establishment two years ago one of the best hospitals in the world; It enjoys the confidence of the French sanitary service to such a degree that it ordinarily receives only the most difficult cases. The most severe shell wounds are constantly encountered. There are scores of young American surgeons who, from time to time serving at the hospital, have become familiar with these phases of surgery. They may rarely have occasion to use this knowledge in their ordinary civilian practice at home, but should the United States be at war within the next generation it will find that many of its surgeons in civilian practice are acquainted with every sort of wound now known in warfare. At the hospital, further, there has been constant cooperation between the surgeons and dentists. An ordinary operation is that of grafting bone cut from the tibia or shin bone into the lower jaw. I have seen young soldiers so frightfully wounded in the face that had they been my sons I should have almost preferred they should have died, but it is not for the surgeons to let the spark of life be extinguished through neglect of surgical science.

"The appreciation, gratitude and entire simplicity of the wounded French soldier is something that 'gets one' absolutely. I have never seen the slightest resemblance to anything that could be called bravado in his makeup. The American surgeons feel that they cannot be kind enough to the soldiers."

[illegible] KILLED

Seven Members of Family Seated at Table When Explosion Occurs.

Des Moines, Ia., Dec. 27.—Three are dead, three more probably dying and 10 are very seriously injured as a result of an explosion which wrecked the home of John Faaborg, three and one-half miles northwest of Elkhorn, Ia., shortly before noon yesterday.

The dead and injured were buried in the wreckage of the Faaborg home which was lifted 30 feet into the air by the explosion and which was literally reduced to kindling wood.

Held Family Reunion.

The injured are terribly mangled and burned. The Faaborg family was holding a holiday reunion and 15 of the victims of the explosion were gathered about a table exchanging family reminiscences when the explosion occurred.

The dead are:

JOHN NELSON, aged 37, Kimballton.

IDA FAABORG, aged 24, daughter of John Faaborg.

CHRISTINA FAABORG, aged 6, daughter of Chris Faaborg.

The probably fatally injured are:

Anna Faaborg, aged 17, daughter of John Faaborg; both feet amputated, internally injured.

Axel Faaborg, aged 22; both legs broken, badly burned.

Mrs. Mads Faaborg, aged 34, Olden Neb., splinter of wood thrust through lungs.

The seriously injured are:

John Faaborg, aged 66; both legs broken.

Mrs. John Faaborg, aged 44; both legs broken.

Anton Faaborg, Nysted, Neb.; arm broken, badly burned.

Mrs. Anton Faaborg, Nysted, Neb.; badly burned and cut.

Lydia Faaborg, aged 12, daughter of John Faaborg; leg broken.

Otto Faaborg, aged 7, son of John Faaborg; leg broken, one arm burned.

Knud Faaborg, aged 13, son of Soren Faaborg; leg broken, one eye torn out.

Infant son of Anton Faaborg, aged 18 months; both arms broken.

John Faaborg is a farmer, quite wealthy, and his home was one of the most substantial in the vicinity of Elkhorn. It was lighted by an acetylene gas plant, and it was noticed that the odor of gas was general in the house. John Nelson, of Kimballton, an electrician and expert in the operation of gas plants, was called to the Faaborg home to inspect the machines. He and Axel Faaborg had just started downstairs to look over the plant when the explosion occurred. It is believed that when the door to the basement was opened the gas was ignited from the kitchen stove.

Seated Around Table.

About 16 members of the Faaborg family were seated about a big table in the dining room of the Faaborg home when the house blew up. Not one of them escaped serious injury, it is reported.

Most of the victims were caught in the ruins of the house. The explosion shook the neighborhood and rescuers rushed to the scene from every direction, but it was two hours before the last of the occupants of the house were removed from the ruins.

Nelson was terribly burned and mangled and is believed to have been instantly killed. Axel Faaborg, who was with Nelson in the basement, was burned and mangled until almost unrecognizable, but will recover. Ida and Christina Faaborg were buried in the wreckage, and died before they could be rescued despite frantic efforts on the part of the workers to reach them.

Convert House Into Hospital.

The home of Nels J. Andersen, a few rods away, was converted into a temporary hospital, and doctors were summoned. Eight physicians and surgeons worked all of the afternoon performing operations and setting fractured limbs.

It is known that no less than 13 compound fractures are reported to have been treated. Five of the injured were removed to the Atlantic hospital tonight. Several are too seriously injured to be moved.

The Faaborg family had gathered for a family reunion over the holidays, two sons with their families having come from Nebraska. Others came to the reunion from about Elkhorn and Kimballton. Most of them have farms.

SIOUX CITY WOMAN SELECTED.

Cherokee, Ia., Dec. 27.—Miss Margaret Montgomery, principal of one of the ward schools in Sioux City, was by the convention of presidents of school boards from all of the townships in the county.

She will succeed Lew McDonald, who resigned following his election as county attorney.

SENATOR TERRY DEAD.

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Dec. 27.—Former State Sen. John M. Terry is dead here, aged 81.

MARSHALLTOWN—Caught in the fast revolving fly wheel of a gasoline engine, Arthur Fink, aged 22, of Garwin, is in a hospital, literally scalped and with his nose split in two lengthwise, bone and all. Fink, who was employed by Henry Thede, a farmer, five miles east of Gladbrook, was preparing to shell corn with a gasoline engine. The belt needed tightening and Fink went to see that it was fixed. His coat caught in the fly wheel and he was thrown into the engine, head foremost STRUBLE—A man who gave the name of Thompson and claimed to be a German, solicited orders for liquor here and got over $300 in one day. He said he represented a Sioux Falls house. He gave his customers a small sample bottle on an order for five to 10 gallons at $3 per gallon. He collected in full for all his orders.

CENTERVILLE—Frank Smith, who shot and killed his cousin, Alex Gerlach, at Unionville last May, thereby terminating a long family feud, was sentenced to life imprisonment.

DES MOINES—Iowa City officials have appealed to the Iowa railroad commission to compel railroads to deliver coal now on their lines to relieve a fuel famine which threatens that city.

BURLINGTON—Louis Brooker, aged 21, was instantly killed when the gas plant at his father's farm, near Yarmouth, exploded.

Benjamin Witzberger, a stogie maker of Wheeling, W. Va., has rolled 2,251,600 stogies with tools which cost him less than $1. He says he has rolled an average of 187,000 a year and for the last 12 years has used a board which cost him 75 cents and two knives that cost him 25 cents.

The "clean-up-and-paint-up" movement which was started in St. Louis two years ago is said to have extended to 5,000 towns and cities.

PLANT OF SUPERIOR STEEL COMPANY SOLD

Big Carnegie Works Transferred For Consideration of $11,500,000.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 30.—The sale of the plant of the Superior Steel company at Carnegie to a group of New York and Philadelphia bankers has been announced here. The price paid was $11,500,000, of which $6,000,000 will be paid in cash, and the balance in stock of the new organization which will be known as the Superior Steel corporation, chartered under the laws of Virginia.

It was not announced whether the financial institutions behind the deal are acting for themselves or for a larger steel concern that intends to make the Superior plant part of a new independent organization.

The following banking firms are concerned in the deal, according to the announcement.

Cassatt & Co., and Frazier & Co. of Philadelphia, and Merrill, Lynch & Co., and White, Veld & Co., of New York. The new concern will have a capital stock of $17,000,000.

The Superior plant manufactures hot and cold rolled strip steel for hardware, automobiles and metal furniture It has a capacity of 115,000 tons a year and employes 1 700 men

MACKENSEN OPENS NEW ONSLAUGHTS

Germans Driving Toward the Interior of Rumania and Menacing Bessarabia—Attack at Verdun.

The opening of what may prove to be an important offensive by the Teutonic forces along the Moldavian western frontier is revealed in the current Berlin statement. Apparently it is the Austro-German purpose to break through the mountain region here and force the Russo-Rumanian lines back along the lower Carpathian barrier into interior Rumania.

Several heights were captured in the effort, which evidently is made in conjunction with the northward thrust of the Teutonic armies from Wallachia, to the east of this line, the southern flank of which is thus threatened

From Wallachia northward Field Marshal von Mackensen's advance has been pressed on the west nearly 15 miles north of Rimnik-Sarat and new progress also has been made near the Danube, where Braila, a grain and rail center, is the next important point in the line of the Teutonic progress

The Petrograd statement reveals that Rumanian troops are again in the field in northeastern Wallachia and the indications are that resistance of a most stubborn sort is being offered to Von Mackensen's thrust towards the Sereth line, which runs northwest through Central Moldavia from a point on the Danube just north of Braila. The Germans, however, have taken 1,400 more prisoners from the Russians, together with three cannon.

In Dobrudja, opposite Braila and Galatz, the Bulgarian-Turkish-German force has closed in further upon the Matchin bridge head, taking the town of Ratchelu, on the Danube, 10 miles across the northwestern neck of Dobrudja from Matchin and opposite the Bessarabian shore.

The apparent hope is to clear Dobrudja completely of Russians and effect a permanent junction with the Teutonic forces in Wallachia at a point where the lower Danube will be closed completely to Russian uses and the way opened north of the river for possible advance into Bessarabia, just beyond which lies Odessa.

Paris today reports the repulse of an attack in force by the Germans between Hill 304 and Deadman Hill, northwest of Verdun, admitting penetration of but one French trench south of the latter eminence. Berlin claims that German troops transferred from the Somme front penetrated into the second and third French lines, captured more than 200 prisoners and seven machine guns, and repulsed several counter attacks.

Paris, Dec. 29.—German troops last night delivered an attack in strong force on a three-kilometer front between Hill 304 and Dead Man's hill, northwest of Verdun, the war office announced today. The French infantry and machine guns fire broke the attack, but in one of the French trenches south of Dead Man's hill, Bavaria penetrated and this only by a few hostile troops. The attack was delivered after long and violent artillery preparation

North of Verdun on the right bank of the Meuse, a strong German reconnaissance was dispersed east of Hardaumont.

ALLIES TO BE DELIVERED NOTE NEXT WEEK

Important Document Will Be Made Public In Paris Wednesday—Answer Given Soon.

SATISFACTORY FORECAST

Allied Note Will Meet Approval In Washington—Rumored Austria May Ask Separate Peace.

London, Dec. 30.—As a result of the conferences which have been in progress for several days, the entente reply to the German note is now completed it could go forward today or tomorrow, except for the necessary formality of transmitting it to all the allies before final delivery. This means that the delivery will be made early in or the middle of next week, perhaps on Wednesday.

The delivery will be made at Paris after which the communication will be forwarded to Germany through American channels. The reply is a very long document, much more lengthy than the German note. This point has been one of the matters of discussion during the conference, the objection having been raised that it is too long and should be short and terse. But there were so many points for elucidation, and such a complete difference of conception of the objects and purposes for which the two sides were at war, that it was found desirable to extend the note to considerable length. The presence here of Alexandre Ribot, the French finance minister, permitted the French ministry to be represented during the conferences.

Unusual optimism is shown here as a result of the final form which the reply has taken, which is believed to be such that it will meet with satisfaction at Washington.

The reply to the American note will follow in a few days after the delivery of the reply to Germany.

Claimed Austria Plans to Ask Separate Peace

London, Dec. 29.—Recent reports from Switzerland have represented the internal conditions in Austria-Hungary as so serious that those governments are prepared to negotiate direct with Great Britain and France, preferring a humiliating peace to what has been termed inevitable bankruptcy and ruin.

The Morning Post's Budapest correspondent, writing December 22, records opinions to the foregoing effect as being prevalent in some quarters in Austria-Hungary, but in no wise confirms the view that they are favored by the Austrian and Hungarian governments. On the contrary, the correspondent contends that however much a separate peace may be desired it is certainly for the present impossible. He concurs with the Swiss reports as far as saying that the young emperor is eager to work for peace.

"It is generally recognized," says the correspondent, "that the emperor, after he has been crowned king of Hungary and taken the oath to the constitution in the Austrian parliament, will try and reestablish peace. There is little doubt that he will use his influence on Germany in as friendly a way as is possible, and if this influence should fail, will use other kinds of pressure on Germany which Germany will be unable to endure for long."

POSITION OF SWISS.

Bologna, (via Paris), Dec. 29.—President Schulthess, of Switzerland, has explained the part played by his country in the recent steps in favor of peace in an interview with Signor Qualich, editor of the Reste Del Carlinou. President Schulthess is quoted as saying:

Switzerland had nothing whatever to do with President Wilson's note. The federal council got into communication with the American government in order to learn if the latter intended to do anything in favor of peace and simply received a copy of the note at the same time as the belligerents. The council has decided to support the note inspired by an ardent desire to see a termination rapidly put to the sufferings caused by this terrible war, of which the Swiss people has daily evidence in the shape of interned invalids and civilians from places ordered evacuated.

"I do not know what will be the fate of the neutral proposals, and in any case Switzerland has no intention of interfering with the affairs of the belligerents, but she considers it her duty to make known to them that she is ready to help to exchange views, in the event of its seeming desirable."

JOIN IN PEACE NOTE.

London, Dec. 29.—The Scandinavian countries have sent a joint note to belligerents supporting the peace note of President Wilson.

A Reuter dispatch from Copenhagen says the Danish, Swedish and Norwegian governments have instructed their legations at the belligerent countries to note in which the Scandinavian governments, according to the note of President Wilson, encouraging measures to be adopted for facilitating a durable peace, declare they would consider themselves as failing in their duty toward their respective peoples and toward humanity as a whole if they did not express their most profound sympathy with every effort which may contribute to bring about an end to the suffering, both moral and material, which the war is causing in consequence [illegible] governments cherish the hope that the initiative taken by President Wilson will lead to a result worthy of the generous spirit which prompted his action.

ITALY'S MOVE BY POPE.

LLOYD-GEORGE PREMISES

London, Dec. 29.—Ambassador Page called on Premier Lloyd-George, in Downing street this morning. It was a call of courtesy, offering the American representative his first opportunity of seeing Mrs. Lloyd-George since he became premier.

BULL MOOSERS LOSE STANDING AS PARTY

Vote Too Light to Entitle Them to Further Recognition—Offices Closed.

New York, Dec. 30.—Owing to the failure of the progressives in New York state to poll the necessary votes in the recent elections to entitle their ticket to a place on the ballot, the party lost official recognition in this state and the doors of the progressives headquarters here—state and national—have been closed.

At the offices of George W. Perkins, chairman of the executive committee of the progressive national committee, the only statement of an explanatory nature forthcoming, was that "there is no longer a progressive organization in this state."

SHORTAGE OF MEN TO EMPLOY MONEY

Will Be Better to Send Gold to Europe Than Bring Laborers to America, Says Roberts.

Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 29.—The four national sociological and economics societies, which have been meeting here, were holding the final sessions of their convention today at Ohio State university, where problems likely to arise in this country following the war in Europe, and labor problems, were being discussed by men of national reputation.

The organizations in session here are the American Economic association, the American Sociological society, the American Statistical association, and the American Association for Labor Legislation.

"We shall have capital after the war, but we shall not have labor enough to employ it," George E. Roberts, of the National City bank of New York, said in speaking before the economic association regarding the situation of the United States at the close of the European war, with reference to the gold supply.

"The labor of Europe and the capital of America will have to be brought together. Conditions seem to favor the transfer of capital in the form of gold to Europe rather than the removal of the population from Europe to America."

Mr. Roberts criticized the new federal act, saying:

"In their anxiety to decentralize the banking business the authors of this act neglected to central the gold reserves, which is the most requisite of a reserve system. The result is that while the country's stock of gold has increased from January 1 to November 1, by approximately $400,000,000 the federal reserve bank of New York, on which the demand for gold export must inevitably fall has gained less than $60,000,000 and all the federal reserve banks together have gained less than $132,000,000.

The general monetary situation, the transfer of gold to the bank reserve of the United States and other countries and the increased use of paper money in Europe undoubtedly has and will continue to have an influence for higher prices, Mr. Roberts said.

GOVERNOR NEVILLE GIVES OUT PLUMS

He Reappoints Hall as Adjutant —Capitol Occupants Displeased.

Omaha, Neb., Dec. 29.—Governor-elect Keith Neville has announced a number of appointments to state offices, which he will make immediately after his inauguration:

Labor commissioner, George Norman, of Omaha.

Adjutant general, P. L. Hall, jr., of Lincoln, reappointed.

Deputy adjutant general, Walter E. Steele, of Omaha.

Chief clerk, governor's office, Anton Sagl, of Wilber.

Stenographer, governor's office, Anna Tracy, of Omaha.

Chief clerk, banking board, J. V. Johnson, of Lincoln, reappointed.

Fire wardens, Thomas Healy, of North Platte; Clint McCreary, of Hastings, and M. G. McCune of Schuyler.

Governor Neville's selections for the various positions at the statehouse do not meet with the unqualified approval of everybody under the capitol roof. This is especially true where present office holders were not reappointed. Norman, selected as head of the labor bureau, was formerly an inspector, but was discharged by the present commissioner because of incompetency. Commissioner Coffey says he did so because the man seemed unable to understand simple instructions of how to make out reports and expense accounts. He is a machinist active in Omaha politics.

The influence of Senator Hitchcock is seen in the naming of McCune, of Schuyler, as a fire warden. McCune is a son of a member of the World-Herald staff, of Omaha, who was recently appointed collector of customs at Omaha. Miss Tracy, named as the governor's stenographer, was employed in the senator's campaign headquarters.

Adjutant General Hall, reappointed, is a son of Dr. P. L. Hall, big party chief. His assistant, George Steele, of Omaha, is not a member of the guard. He went with the Third regiment to Chickamauga in 1898, but was sick all the time. The law says that he must be recommended by the adjutant general, but the governor evidently did not know of this provision.

NO INDICTMENTS IN FOOD PRICE INQUIRY

TERMS TO WILSON

President Already Knows What Germany Proposes and the Allies Will Submit an Early Reply.

FACTS ARE KEPT SECRET

Administration to Divulge Nothing Until Proposals Are Assembled—Notes to Play Small Part.

Washington, D. C., Dec 30.—Secret and subsurface peace moves are now the order of the day, with Washington a great center of activity. Rumors and gossip of all sorts are current. Through soundings at foreign capitals the president is getting important confidential information.

He has been made aware, through Ambassador Gerard, of the general nature of Germany's terms. Though not officially confirmed, the report persists that Germany will give up the idea of buffer states between her and Russia if she can get back her own colonies.

The president is understood to have information from Vienna that Charles Francis, the new emperor, wants peace and is influenced to this in part at least by the serious internal condition in Austria. This may make the solution of the problem of Serbia easier.

To Know Terms of All.

Apart from anything said in formal notes, President Wilson expects to have in his hands a general outline of the peace terms of all the leading belligerents. This was asserted here in well informed quarters in connection with the fact that it has been given out both at the state department and the White House that the lid is on concerning news of peace negotiations save for such announcements as it is seen fit to make from time to time.

The sudden policy of secrecy is causing much wonderment. The explanation which is unofficially given is that the administration is already being acquainted with many facts from the different capitals as to peace demands and conditions relating to peace and is getting these in confidence and that it is the desire of the president to make Germany and other nations feel the American government will be a safe channel through which to pursue confidential exchanges and soundings.

To Make No Comment.

In many quarters the official attitude was construed as indicating that secret exchanges were expected to follow if they did not precede the formal answers to the entente nations to the notes of President Wilson and the central powers. Because of the highly confidential nature of any such negotiations it is pointed out the intermediary would be obliged to refrain from admitting even that they were in progress.

So far as the entente governments are concerned, it is understood that little, if any, confidential information has reached here to shed more light on their attitude than has been given publicly in the speeches of their premiers and the comment of their press. Consequently, there is no disposition here to doubt that the allies unanimously will refuse to enter any sort of peace conference until Germany has indicated clearly on what conditions she will stop fighting.

On the Teutonic side, while the reply to President Wilson's note is regarded by the German embassy as complying with President Wilson's suggestion in offering a method of procedure, Germany is said to be willing to consider other suggestions regarding methods from any quarters, including her enemies.

Turkey's reply to President Wilson's peace note was received today at the same as Germany's and Austria's.

SOCIALISTS URGE ACTION.

Paris, Dec. 29.—A resolution has been adopted by the socialist congress calling upon the government to pursue a more vigorous policy both in military and in economic action so that the usual resources of the country may be brought into play and the war terminated more speedily. The resolution is predicated on the assertion that the replies of the central powers to President Wilson's note leave no doubt that the offer of peace negotiations was a snare.

Deputies who met German and other foreign socialist delegates at the conference in Switzerland supported a motion in favor of resumption of international relations among socialists. This proposal was defeated by a small majority after a long and heated discussion.

UP TO BRITAIN, HE SAYS.

London, Dec. 29.—The Times military correspondent today calls for greater British effort in the war. He contends that although the French are still strong their reserves are less numerous than could be wished for. Russia, he adds, will bring new armies into the field in 1917, but their usefulness depends on their being placed with heavy guns, airplanes and mechanical efforts while Russia's poor railway systems and other causes point to the necessity of not exaggerating what Russia can do. Italy, says the correspondent, cannot easily increase her forces appreciably.

MADRID IS AROUSED.

Paris, Dec. 26.—(Delayed.)—A Havas dispatch from Madrid says the Spanish cabinet after consideration of the torpedoing of Spanish vessels has decided to take energetic measures to avoid the constant diminution of the country's merchant marine. Another meeting will be held to give precise form to these measures, the nature of which has not been disclosed.

GOVERNMENT BOND ISSUE IS FAVORED

The President Has Tentatively Agreed to Issuance of New Securities Valued at $180,000,000.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 30.—President Wilson has tentatively agreed with administration leaders in congress on a bond issue to meet part of the treasury deficit which confronts the government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, estimated at about $180,000,000. With Secretary McAdoo the president is working on other plans for raising additional revenue.

The president has pointed out that he believes a bond issue should be used only to meet temporary and emergency expenditures. Many of these have been caused by the Mexican situation.

"The treasury already has authority by previous acts of congress to issue panama canal bonds and about $240,000,000 of these are available. They would bear 3 per cent.

Plans for raising the other revenue are understood to concern the income tax, an inheritance tax and special taxes on internal revenue and imports.

The deficit figures differ, according to congressional and administrative viewpoints. Secretary McAdoo estimated in his annual report the actual deficit in the working balance of the treasury on June 30, 1918, at $185,582,000, which accounts for appropriations unexpended combined with the lapsed over balance. The congressional appropriations committees basing their estimates upon the actual appropriations without regard to whether the executive departments spend all or part of the appropriations figure $313,269,654 as the deficit.

The outstanding interest bearing debt of the United States, June 30, last, as reported to congress by Secretary McAdoo amounted to $971,562,590. Exclusive of postal savings bonds, one year treasury notes and conversion bonds, this is made up of $118,489,900, 4 per cents; $63,945,460, 3 per cents, (due in 1918), $636,259,550, 2 per cents, (due in 1930); $84,331,980 Panama bonds, bearing 2 per cent, and $50,000,000 Panama 3 per cents, similar to those to be issued.

RUSSIAN LINER SINKS; ALL BUT THREE SAVED

New York, Dec. 29.—The Russian steamship Kursk, while bound from Archangel, Russia, for New York, with 126 passengers aboard, hit a mine on November 29, off Kirkwall, Scotland. One passenger and two members of the crew were drowned while life boats were being launched.

Part of the Kursk's stern was torn off by the explosion and she was later towed into Kirkwall by English patrol boats. Her passengers and crew, however, drifted all night in open boats before being picked up.

News of the accident was brought here today by the rescued passengers who arrived on board the steamer Lapland, from Liverpool.

STRICT MARRIAGE LAWS ARE SOUGHT BY WOMEN

Chicago, Dec. 29.—Passage of laws which would eliminate all illegitimacy were urged by the Illinois Woman's congress in session here today. Remedial suggestions made by the speakers by an automatic marriage bill, which provides that the birth of a child shall automatically marry the parents, and the passage of a law which would give a child born out of wedlock its father's name and provision for its support.

Need of a constitutional convention to revise the basic state law, a health certificate as a prerequisite to marriage and abolition of the double standard of morals also were discussed.

ROBBERS BLOW SAFE, ESCAPE WITH $5,000

Sherman, Tex., Dec. 29.—Five robbers blew open the safe of the Hagerman State bank at Hagerman, early today and escaped in an automobile with $5,000.

HOLD STRIKE PROMOTERS.

Virginia, Minn., Dec. 29.—Six Industrial Workers of the World were arrested for distributing strike hand bills in the attempts to picket the Virginia and Rainy Lake lumber mills and yards here last night.

BRITISH GOVERNMENT MAY CONFISCATE BARS

Move on Foot to Take Over Drink Trade During War Times.

London, Dec. 30.—The purchase of the drink trade in Great Britain by the state is believed to be imminent, says the Daily Express, today. "The matter has been closely considered by the liquor control board during the last fortnight," continues the newspaper. Several members of the board have long advocated the purchase and the change in the government has brought about a renewal of their argument.

HANDS OFF WARNS SWISS PRESIDENT

Schulthess Surprised By Rumors That Belligerent Powers Contemplate Invasion of Territory.

Bologne, Dec. 30, (via Paris)—President Schulthess said that he was astonished at the rumors of fears of the violation of Swiss neutrality.

"I cannot conceive," he said, "that any of the belligerents harbor the idea of passing through our country. It would not be to their advantage. In addition to the great difficulty of terrain, they would be confronted with the vigorous resistance of the Swiss army and the whole people. My country knows only one form of neutrality—absolute neutrality. Let there be no mistake—In the presence of external danger, no matter from what side it comes, Switzerland will be united, notwithstanding differences in race and language."

BROTHERHOOD MEN TO DECIDE NEXT ACTION

Special Circulars to Be Sent Out Regarding Policy In 8-Hour Day Fight.

New York, Dec. 29.—The 400,000 railroad employes affiliated with the four trainmen's brotherhoods, will decide the next step which will be taken by their authorized committee which is handling their side of the controversy over the operation of the Adamson act, it was announced here today by the brotherhood chiefs.

The brotherhood leaders, after a conference here this afternoon gave out a statement indicating their fear that the pending litigation together with possible future legal steps on the part of the railroads would delay indefinitely the investigation by President Wilson's special committee headed by George W. Goethals.

The statement of the brotherhood chiefs says:—"The entire situation is to be placed before the members by special circular."

HIGH POSTAL RATES TO PREVAIL ON SUBMARINES

Berlin, Dec. 28, (via London, Dec. 29).—The merchant submarine Deutschland and her sister ships will carry on future voyages special mail at rates recalling those of the transcontinental post in the days of the forty-niners. A special charge of two cents for a post card or letter not exceeding 20 grams in weight will be levied in addition to the regular international postage. A similar charge will be made for each further 20 grams up to a maximum weight of 60 grams. As letters sent by the ordinary route take many months in transit, six months being not unusual, it is expected the submarine post will be in heavy demand.

SHAFT AT WEEHAWKEN.

New York, Dec 29.—The spot on the heights of Weehawken, N. J., where Alexander Hamilton fell in a duel with Aaron Burr will be marked by a memorial to be erected by the Alexander Hamilton institute it was announced today.

CALLS ON LAWSON TO SUBMIT PROOF

Boston Speculator Asked to Reveal "Leak" By Which He Gained His Information About Peace Note.

Washington, Dec 30.—The controversy which has followed Congressman Wood's resolution for investigation of whether any member of President Wilson's official family profited in the stock market because of "inside information" on the president's peace note, got into semiofficial form today when Chairman Henry, of the House rules committee, telegraphed Thomas W. Lawson, of Boston, to come to Washington and substantiate his published statements that he knew of the so called leak and his prediction that there would be another.

"Put up or shut up," said Chairman Henry's telegram. "Cease slandering and libeling congress and public officials or make good your charges."

Mr Henry announced that he would reintroduce his bill next Tuesday to regulate the New York stock exchange.

"If Mr Lawson states the truth about Wall street and an alleged leak," he said, "it conclusively shows that the bill introduced by me in the Sixty-third congress to regulate the New York stock exchange should be speedily passed and should even be made more drastic.

"This short session should find a way to protect the American people against such crimes as the one just perpetrated by Wall street, if Mr. Lawson is anywhere near the truth."

RECORD PRICE PAID FOR CRUDE PETROLEUM

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec 29.—The highest price ever quoted for Pennsylvania crude oil was announced by the principal purchasing agencies today when through an advance of 10 cents a barrel, the quotation reached $2.85. Other grades were each advanced 5 cents as follows:

Mercer black, $2.30; Corning, $2.25; Cabell, $2.22; Somerset, $2.05.

There was no change in Ragland, which continued to sell at 95 cents.

The advance was brought about by the continued demand of refiners, who declare there is an abundance of oil above ground, but producers are holding for still higher prices. Some of them are quoted as declaring that not until $3 oil has been reached will they release their stocks.

HISTORIANS SUPPRESS AMERICAN DISASTERS

Cincinnati, Ohio, Dec. 29.—Frederick L. Huidekoper, founder of the Army League of the United States, in an address before the American Political Science association here today charged that "almost without exception historians and writers of American school books have suppressed, with studied care, the disasters which we have so often suffered and the blunders we have committed owing to a total absence of a proper military policy."

BRAZILIAN POLICE, IN REVOLT, ATTACK TROOPS

Rio de Janeiro, Dec. 29.—Dispatches from Belem, capital of the state of Para, say three battalions of police revolted and attacked the palace of the governor, Enas Martins, who took refuge in the quarters of the federal regiment. President Braz telegraphed the commandant of the military region, ordering him to dispatch forces to the aid of the governor. It was later announced that Governor Martins had been reinstalled in his palace and that order had been restored.

THE ROADS OF 1917

It will be but a short time now until the rigors and storms of winter will be past and the problems of a new year will be before us for solution.

One of the most important of these problems will be, "What of our country roads in 1917?"

The year 1916 witnessed the greatest impetus to road building that has ever been known in our history. Government, state, county and municipality all awoke and attacked the problem with vigor, and the results in many instances were most gratifying.

But there was, the past year, another element in the solution of the good road problem that heretofore had been lacking - that of community co-operation. In many parts of the country the importunities of the good roads advocates had their effect, and the PEOPLE awoke to the live fact that the roads were TAEIR roads, and that THEY were individually responsible for their maintenance. And this was just the added force needed to give to the movement an impetus that nothing could stop.

It is this feature of community co-operation that must be fostered i our roads are to be made what we would have them. Each and every citizen must be fully aroused to HIS responsibilty—not merely to pay his taxes and give his few days work each year, but to shoulder his full share of responsibility and never let up until every road in his community is a GOOD road.

Many communities have worked up a sentiment that each and every citizen shall give one day out of each month to voluntary labor on the roads. This is an auxiliary to all other road working facilities. And the plan as carried out in these communities has worked splendid results in the improvement of the highways.

If all communities will organize on this plan, work it up to a maximum of efficiency, and keep the enthusiasm at white heat, it will be only a short while until they awake to the fact that their road problem has been solved.

OUR MISTAKEN CHARITY

The season is again with us when "Sweet Charity" dons her glad rags and ambles forth on her mission of so-called mercy. "Mission of curs-y" would be a more appropriate term.

Nine-tenths of the charity of the age in its present form is a curse to the recipient rather than a blessing.

Three classes of undiluted charity can be warranted to cure the most perfect case of self respect and leave in its place the most abject case of syncophancy that could be desired.

Seriously, our system of charity is dead wrong. Any system of promiscious giving that does not require some equivalen in service—except in cases of physical or mental disability—is just so much toward the eternal destruction of self respect and self reliance.

The man of Gallilee said in effect to and of the multitudes that followed him: "Ye followed me for the loaves and fishes." Thousands of charity-made medicants are today on the same quest.

Why is the hobo? Why is the medicant?. The answer is simple. Self respect is dead. And in thousands of cases misplaced charity has been its slayer.

Effective charity should help the recipient to be help himself, and this should be accomplished in such a manner that he may retain his self respect and independence as a man.

The relief associations of our land should give to the down-and-out not money, food or raiment but WORK whereby money, food and raiment may be EARNED.

Every medicant, made so by mistaken charity, is a liability to society. Every unfortunate placed on his feet and again ser going by furnishing him the means by which his own efforts may restore him, is an asset to society.

Any city or town with the proper foresight can provide for its down-and-outs work sufficient for their maintenance. This should be done, and absolutely nothing dispensing without some return in service—except, as we have stated, in case of the mentally and physically disabled.

THE COST OF HIGH LIVING

The success attending the boycott on eggs and turkeys serves to remind us of the remark of a recent Writer who ventured the opinion that it was not so much the high cost of living as it was the cost of high living that was troubling the country at this time.

That writer placed his finger on one of the sorest spots in our domestic economy.

We are the most extravagant people on earth.

Fifty years ago our fathers would have sworn mighty but righteous oaths had any been guilty of our extravagence. They lived in a manner that we of this day would consider the extreme of hardship.

Our grandmothers, could they come back, would be thoroughly scandalized at our profligate extravagence, and yet the strange thing to us is that they managed to extract about as much happiness from life as we do—if not a little more. It has been said that the luxuries of one generation are the necessities of the next.

If this is true the outlook in a few generations is truly appaling, Given all of our luxuries as their necessities, with proportionate luxuries of their own of which we have not yet even dreamed, to what gigantic extent will extravagence have reached?

The picture is not a promising one. In fact, it is by no means attractive.

It has been said that a European peasant's family would live in comfort on what the avgrage American kitchen consigns to the swill barrel. And we haven't a doubt of the truth of the assertion.

Here's the American pace: Mr. and Mrs. B. worth half a million, aspire to live on the same scale as Mr. and Mrs. A, who are worth a full million. And Mr. and Mrs. C, worth only a quarter of a million, would keep pace with the B's, who have half a million, and so on down the line.

Really, isn't it time for the sober, intelligent citizenship of the country to call a halt on the useless, senseless and even idiotic extravagence of the age?

There is an end to every string, and the American people are a mighty long way from the beginning.

HEAD STUFFED FROM CATARRH OR A COLD
Says Cream Applied in Nostrils Opens Air Passages Right Up.

Instant relief—no waiting. Your clogged nostrils open right up; the air passages of your head clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffling, blowing, headache, dryness. No struggling for breath at night; your cold or catarrh disappears.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic, healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or swollen mucous membrane and relief comes instantly.

It's just fine. Don't stay stuffed-up with a cold or nasty catarrh.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

PLAN TO RESUME RAILWAY INQUIRY AFTER MARCH 4TH

Postponement Forced by Press of Congressional Business.

COUNTRY DEMANDS ACTION

Shippers, Investors and Representatives of All Branches of Business Demand Unification of System of Railway Regulation—Roads Ask Fewer Masters.

Washington, Dec. 18.—The Congressional Joint Committee on Interstate Commerce, which has been conducting the inquiry into government regulation and control of transportation last week decided to suspend its hearings on the subject and adjourned, subject to the call of the chairman, because of the pressure of other work before Congress. According to the resolution creating the committee, it is required to submit a report by January 8th next. It is understood that before that time the committee will ask for an extension of time and that the hearings will be resumed at a later date, when some of those who already have appeared before the committee will be questioned further and a great many others will be heard. It is probable, however, that the hearings will not be resumed until after adjournment of Congress on March 4th. In addition to regular routine business the commerce committees of the two houses are charged with the important duty of preparing and presenting the legislation asked for by President Wilson to make impossible a railroad strike without previous investigation. This will leave little or no time for the consideration of the general questions of railway regulation.

Country Wants Something Done.

Members of Congress and others who are interested in the inquiry undertaken by the Newlands Committee insist that there is no intention of abandoning it.

It seems doubtful, indeed, if the country would permit the matter to be dropped if there were evidence of a desire on the part of Congress to do so. The nation-wide evidences of interest evoked by the initiation of the Newlands inquiry show that the people of the country—shippers, consumers and investors, as well as railway men themselves—are alive to the fact that the railway situation is highly unsatisfactory and that steps must be taken without unnecessary delay to make it possible for the railroads to meet the growing needs of the nation.

From reports received here it seems as though almost every commercial organization and business interest in the country were engaged in studying the railroad question. The Chamber of Commerce of the United States has been conducting an elaborate inquiry into various phases of the subject for many months past. Many local and state commercial bodies in every part of the country have committees engaged in study of the problem and have indicated a desire to come here and present their views. National organizations of manufacturers, lumbermen, coal operators, wholesale and retail dealers, have expressed through resolutions their desire for the unification of the system of railway regulation. The National Industrial Traffic League, speaking from the viewpoint of shippers using the railways, has indorsed exclusive federal regulation providing it is accomplished in such a way as to give full protection and prompt adjustment in matters relating to transportation within the states.

Many Interests Studying Problem.

All these organizations represent primarily the shippers of the country, but they are not the only ones who are taking a hand in the discussion. The investors of the nation, through their own associations and through committees representing the savings banks and other financial organizations, are preparing to show the necessity of improving railroad credit and protecting the rights of those whose money is invested in railway securities. Finally the railroads themselves, being vitally concerned in the improvement of existing conditions, are planning to submit their views through their executives, operating officials and traffic experts and to assert their willingness to accept far-reaching federal regulation along lines that will enable them to attract capital and to provide the facilities needed for the prompt and efficient handling of the country's transportation business.

Main Trouble Is Too Many Masters.

Not all of these interests are in accord as to the remedies that should be adopted. There seems to be a general agreement, however, that many of the difficulties which confront the railroads and which make it impossible for them to meet the requirements of the nation's commerce promptly and satisfactorily arise from the haphazard and often conflicting measures of regulation that have been adopted from time to time by the federal government and the forty-eight states and that what is needed is a well ordered, systematic scheme of federal regulation that shall cover the whole country and make it possible for the railroads to provide the extensions and improved facilities so badly needed, while at the same time protecting fully the public interests.

A Powerful Bird

"No," said Mrs. Viddles, authoritatively, "the turkey is not appropriate for Christmas. The turkey is the Thanksgiving bird. At Christmas time the goose or young pig is the proper thing."

"I would consider the matter very carefully before I invested in a goose," observed Viddles. "Whenever I feel that I would like to invest in a goose I remember the experience of poor, dear, old Mutsky two years ago.

"A goose my dear, is mostly feathers. Mrs. Mutsky reminded Mutsky of that fact when he first proposed goose for the Christmas dinner. He wouldn't listen to her. He made up his mind to have one, and he did. He bargained with a farmer to bring it in alive as he said he would pick the feathers off it himself.

"Poor, dear, old Mutsky allowed himself lots of time, but not time enough. He told me afterward that there were nine barrels of feathers on that goose. They were light and airy feathers and as soon as they were plucked they soared in the air. People in the neighborhood thought it was snowing. But there were feathers still left on the goose after old Mutsky had worked hard harvesting them for eight hours.

"He finally gave up and sent the piece de resistance into the kitchen with plenty of feathers still ungarnered. He had an awful backache.

"And that wasn't all. When the goose was brought onto the table there wasn't a knife on the place that could scratch the hide of it. So Mutsky gathered up all the knives and took them down into the basement, got out his tools and proceeded to sharpen them before making another attack.

"It so happened that Mutsky had had trouble with his neighbor the day before on account of their different opinions about the war——"

"There wasn't any war two years ago Christmas!" snickered Mrs Viddles.

"Well-er-I allude to the Mexican war," explained Viddles. "As I was saying they had a misunderstanding or two and when the neighbors happened to glance thru Mutsky's basement window saw him sharpening all those knives so intently, he thought there was about to be an uprising or a massacre. Christmas day became a day of horror to that neighbor of Mutsky's.

"But altho Mutsky sharpened those knives to a razor like fitness, they made no more impression on the goose than water would have made on its back if it had been alive and well."

Hints.

"The magazines are full of Christmas hints," remarked the opulent woman patient.

"Yes, they are," remarked the trained nurse. "But for my part I prefer to publish my own hints. My two nieces purpose to have their pictures taken and give them away for Christmas presents. It seems to me that you might as well send a person some of your own poetry for a present as a photograph of yourself.

"So when I heard the girls threatening to give me photographs I told them I didn't want anything to stand on a mantlepiece. I told them, too, that no one who sent me things to stand on a mantel would get any earrings or ornaments of any kind from me. I said that all photos were excess baggage and that people who distributed them were vain enough without any encouragement in the shape of gewgaws for their hair and necks.

"'The people who get jewelry from me,' I said, 'will be the ones who give me sensible things. I have it fixed with the jeweler on the corner and he knows what to do as soon as I phone him.

"'I have needed a new black silk petticoat for a long time' I said, 'and they are on sale at Stillings' now for $3.75. I always need stockings, size 7. And next summer I will need a couple of light weight union suits, size 6, and you can get them at Dippy's for $1.25. He is having a sale now. And I need about six nurse's aprons.'

"The only way you can get what you want is to let your wants be known. If you want a rocking chair say so. If you don't, say so again. There is no need of getting what you don't want at Christmas time.

"I hated to be rough, but I would get photographs for Christmas sure, if I hadn't rebelled at the prospect. It was a severe blow to the girls, they did so want to have their pictures taken."

"Then why not give them photographs of themselves for your gift to them?" asked the opulent woman patient. "Let your nieces get their pictures taken and keep them all themselves. You could give them a half dozen apiece for about $18."

Humor in Catechism

There must have been some curious specimens of Scottish humor brought out at the examinations that the ministers of the flock conducted before administering the communion, says the Youth's Companion. Thus, a clergyman asked one parishioner, "What kind of man was Adam?"

"Ou, just like other fouk" he replied.

The minister insisted on a more accurate description. "Weel," said the catechumen, "he was just like Joe Simmons, the horse couper."

"How so?" asked the minister.

"Weel, naebody got anything by him and mony lost."

A lad had come for examination previous to receiving his first communion. The pastor knowing that his young friend was not very profound in his theology, and not wishing to discourage him or keep him from the table unless compelled to do so, began by asking what he thought a safe question So he took the old Testament and asked him how many commandments there were. After a little thought the lad put his answer in the modest form of a supposition, and replied cautiously "Perhaps a hunner." The clergyman was vexed, and told him such ignorance was intolerable, and that the youth must come back for another examination when he had learned more.

As he went away he met a friend, and on learning that he too, was going to the minister for examination, the young fellow asked

"Weel, what will ye say if the minister speers hoo mony commandments there are?"

"Say? Why, I shall say ten, to be sure."

To which the other rejoined with great triumph: "Ten! Try ye him wi' ten! I tried him wi' a hunner, and he wasna satisfied."

A better example of an answer to catethetical examination was offered in the very conclusive reply made by an old body to the minister who proposed the question of the shorter catechism. "What are decrees of God?"

Wisely the old man replied, "Deed, sir, He kens that best himself."

Another answer from a little girl was shrewd and reflective. The question was, "Why did the Israelites make a golden calf?" and she replied.

"They hadna as muckle siller as wad mak a coo."

His Fat Friend.

The greatest dandy and fop of modern times was George Brummel, known as Beau Brummel. He lived a life delicate and leisured, and since he was ever his living depended upon the favor of the court. The court at that tie was represented in the set where the Beau's influence was felt by the Prince of Wales, who was, if truth must be told, not a slender man. It happened that the Prince and the Beau quarreled.

To be a dandy is not generally considered the first mark of being a brave man, but Beau Brummel gave instant proof that he was not only a great dandy but a great man as well. The details of the story are somewhat vague, but the main facts are certain Brummel knew that his quarrel with the Prince would mean an end of his prestige, but he refused to yield, and on the day following the quarrel went walking with a friend said to have been Sheridan.

The news of the rupture between the Prince and the dictator of fashions had spread and there were not a few who gathered in the hopes of seeing a passage at arms between them.

It happened that Sheridan and Brummel met the Prince and his party. With princely outentation the royal personage called Sheridan aside and spoke to him, pointedly ignoring Brummel, who stood by. Brummel did not flinch. In the crisis he was the only person who seemed to be indifferent. Then Sheridan returned.

With a gesture of indifference Brummel lifted his glasses to his eyes and indicating with a slight wave of his hand the person to whom he referred, he asked in a clear but languid voice the famous question.

"Sherry, who's your fat friend?"

Brummel spent the greater part of the remainder of his life at Calais, an outcast, a broken man. But with the memory of his great rebuke, it can hardly be said that in the crisis he was found wanting.

The Reason Why.

Old Doctor—"Now when your patient asks you for a tonic, what are you going to do about it?"

Young Doctor—"Find what she really needs and prescribe it."

Old Doctor—"Wrong! No success in that method. Whenever your patient has diagnosed her own case and tells you she needs a tonic, you prescribe a tonic every time!"

Young Doctor—"Why?"

Old Doctor—"Don't you guess why? Because she will then have to see that you know almost if not quite as much about medicine as she does."—Judge.

A Cautious Answer

The caution of the New Englander in giving a direct answer to a direct question is proverbial. Two natives of a New Hampshire town met after the funeral, and the first asked: "Was not your father's death very sudden?"

Slowly drawing one hand from his pocket and pulling down his beard, the other replied thoughtfully:

"Waal, rather sudden for him."

"The Woman in the Case."

From Life

Jack Borroughs's dog broke from him and made a sudden dive down the first opening. The usual clear whistle made no impression. "Jim" was off. Jack quickly followed, and to his relief saw a big Irishman patting "Jim's" head, "Jim", with unmistakable signs of delight, jumping up and down and rubbing against the man.

That started the strange friendship between Jack Borroughs, lawyer, sportsman, and Dennis O'Sullivan.

Dennis lived in the last house on "Grasshopper Hill." It was a little less ramshackle, a little more independent looking than the rest of the row that faced on a small bluff above the railroad tracks, and its garden bloomed like a rose. Dennis himself was large, burly, rather red faced but with the twinkling blue eyes and the genial courtesy of the true son of Erin.

Later Dennis brought out to the almost palatial suburban home of Jack Burroughs rare bulbs and old fashioned flowers; Jack got Dennis to help him in making his own garden beautiful.

As the war dragged its fearful way along they, strange to say, never even mentioned it, until one day in June suddenly Jack said: "Dennis, I have written to a cousin in England to know if it's possible for me to get a commission in the English army."

Dennis looked up from the border he was working and demanded:

"For why and I should like to know?"

"Well, Dennis, you see my great-grandfather was an Irish patriot, and came over here during Emmet's rebellion, but now Ireland needs me, and I'm going."

"From what part of the ould country was your grandfather?"

"Oh, from near Lough Neagh."

"Are ye maning County Antrim, Misther Burroughs?"

"Sure, Dennis."

"Thin I'm yer boy, and will go with ye."

Jack was rather startled, but on second thought he decided to take the risk.

"Dennis, will you sign the pledge if I take you?"

Dennis's blue eyes twinkled, and with a comical smile he lifted his cap from his fiery head and said, "Shure, yer honour."

Both gardens bloomed gaily in the June sunshine; both men talked and worked and planned in secret for their swift going. At last the letter came.

Jack, as gay as a boy went first to Dennis. "Come out to the house tonight, Dennis and we will make our final arrangement."

"Ye can count on me, and I will be that grateful to ye for the whole o' me life."

With his letter held high, Jack with "Jim" at his heels, gaily waved it to a sweet girl that he caught a glimpse of on a neighboring porch.

"Can I come in, Eleanor?" he called.

The blue eyes gave him welcome He sat on the lower step and, leaning against the post looked up at the girl

"Eleanor, I am off to the war!"

The smile froze on the sweet lips the slender strong hands clenched but the girl's voice was quiet as she answered:

"I hardly understand, Jack"

Then he eagerly explained how his cousins in England, with the same strain of Irish blood in their veins, were fighting—nay, some dying—on the battlefields in France, and call had come to him and he must go.

He stood tall and straight, his gray eyes flashing—those eyes she so loved—his head thrown back. Ah, The girl felt he would lead his men even unto death. He gave his warm, merry smile; surely she would understand.

"Sit down, Jack, dear. Yes, I understand," she smiled into those eager eyes, but you do not understand. No wait, please—you are an American, Jack, first, last and all the time; and now soon, only too soon, your country might need all such men as you. You cannot desert your country now! You cannot, cannot, Jack, dear!"

And Jack understood.

How to tell Dennis. how to break the news to him; what was he to say?

As later he saw the big man walking slowly up the path Dennis touched his cap to Jack.

"Will ye pardon me pipe, Misther Burroughs, being that low in me mind I kinnot spake without it?"

Jack smiled.

"I am a bit low meself, Dennis."

"Well, I had best out with it like a man, Misther Burroughs. I went to spake to me Nora, and she said, 'Dennis O'Sullivan, have ye lost the little bits o' wits ye be blessed with? Not one foot do ye stir from your own country. Did ye not become an American citizen this five years back?' And there, Misther Burroughs, 'twas how the word she spake!"

And Ingenious

Bing—"I understand that Shmelts is lazy."

Biff—"Lazy! You bet! Why, when he spanks his child he lays a carpet over the kid, so that he can do two jobs at once!"

THE WORD CATARRH
HAS NO DEFINITE MEANING.
As an example: In nasal catarrh one form, hypertrophy, enlarges the structures and more or less closes the breathing space. Another form, atrophy, causes too much opening. Both are catarrh but need different treatment.
Chronic Rhinitis, Adenoids, Oezena, Polypi, Deviated Septum, Septal Spurs, Sinuitis are catarrhal factors and headaches, deafness, dizziness, bad breath are some results They are curable with proper treatment. What is necessary is proper treatment for that particular form you are afflicted with.

CHAPTER XV

Meantime Gordon was speeding away to another part of the city by the fastest time an experienced chauffeur dared to make. About the time they turned the first corner into the avenue, two burly policemen sauntered casually into the pretty square in front of the house where lived the chief of the secret service. There was nothing about their demeanor to show that they had been detailed there by special [illegible] and three men who hurried to the little park across the street from the house could not possibly know that their leisurely and careless stroll was the result of a hurried telephone message from the chief of police headquarters immediately after his message from Cordova.

The policemen [illegible] the house glanced each other [illegible] walked on around the square across the little park. They eyed the three men sitting idly on a bench, and passed leisurely on. They disappeared around a corner, and to the three men were out of the way. The latter did not know the hidden places where the officers took up their watch, and when an automobile approached and the three stealthily got up from their park bench and disposed themselves among the shrubbery on the walk they knew not that their every movement was observed with keen attention. But they did wonder how it happened that those two policemen seemed to spring out of the ground suddenly just as the auto came to a halt in front of the chief's house.

Gordon sprang out and up the steps with a bound the door opening before him as if he were expected. The two grim and apparently indifferent policemen stood outside like two stone images on guard while up the street with rhythmic sound rode two mounted police also coming to a halt before the house as if for a purpose. The three men in the bushes hid their instruments of death, and would have slunk away had there been a chance, but turning to make a hasty flight they were met by three more policemen. There was the crack of a revolver as one of the three desperadoes tried a last reckless dash for freedom, and failed. The wretch went to justice with his right arm hanging limp by his side.

Inside the house Gordon was delivering up his message and as he laid it before his chief and stood silent while the elder man read and pondered its tremendous import it occurred to him for the first time that his chief would require some report of his journey and the hair-breadth escapes that had made him a whole day late in getting back to Washington. His heart stood still with sudden panic. What was he to do? How could he tell it all? What right had he to tell of his marriage to an unknown woman? A marriage that [illegible] for that cause. He could not know what the outcome would be until he had told the girl everything. As far as he himself was concerned he knew that the great joy of his life had come to him when she consented to be his wife, but could she be happy in the knowledge that [illegible] would be his good name [illegible] If she should be such a [illegible] as that she should consent to [illegible] with him and be his wife he must [illegible] let her find out know but what the marriage had been planned long ago. It would not be fair to her. It would make life intolerable for them both either together or apart. And while he might be [illegible] doubtless was perfectly safe in confiding in his chief and asking him to keep silence about the matter still he felt that even that would be a breach of faith with Celia. He must close his lips upon the story until he could talk with her and know her wishes. He drew a sigh of weariness. It was a long hard way he had come, and it was not over. The worst ordeal would be his confession to the bride who was not his wife.

The chief looked up.

"Could you make this out, Gordon?" he asked, noting keenly the young man's weary eyes, the strained tense look about his mouth.

"Oh, yes, sir. I saw it at once. I was almost afraid my eyes might betray the secret before I got away with it."

"Then you know what you have saved the country and what you have been worth to the service."

The young man flushed with pleasure.

"Thank you, sir," he said looking down. "I understood it was important and I am glad I was able to accomplish the errand without failing."

"Have you reason to suppose you were followed except for what you saw at the station in this city?"

"Yes, sir. I am sure there were detectives after me as I was leaving New York. They were suspicious of me. I saw one of the men who had been at the dinner with me watching me. The disguise and some circumstances threw him off. He wasn't sure. Then there was a man—you know him, Baliter at Pittsburgh?—"

"Pittsburgh?"

"Yes, you wonder how I got to Pittsburgh. You see I was shadowed almost from the first, I suspect, for when I reached the station in New York I was sure I recognized this man who had sat opposite me a few minutes before. I suppose my disguise, which you so thoughtfully provided, bothered him, for though he followed me about at a little distance he didn't speak to me. I had to get on the first train that circumstances permitted, and perhaps the fact that it was a Chicago train made him think he was mistaken in me. Anyhow I saw no more of him after the train left the station. Rather unexpectedly I found I could get the drawing room compartment, and went into immediate retirement, leaving the train at daylight where it was delayed on a side track, and walked across country till I found a conveyance that took me to a Pittsburgh train. It didn't seem feasible to get away from the Chicago train any sooner as the train made no further stops, and it was rather late at night by the time I boarded it. I thought I would run less risk by making a detour. I never dreamed they would have watchers out for me at Pittsburgh, and I can't think yet how they managed to get on my track, but almost the first minute I landed I spied Balder stretching his neck over the crowd. I bolted from the station at once and finding a carriage drawn up before the door just ready for me I got in and ordered them to drive me to East Liberty station.

"I am afraid I shall always be suspicious of handy closed carriages after this experience. I certainly have reason to be. The door was no sooner closed on me than the driver began to race like mad through the streets. I didn't think much of it at first until he had been going some time, fully long enough to have reached East Liberty, and the horse was still rushing like a locomotive. Then I saw that we were in a lonely district of the city that seemed unfamiliar. That alarmed me and I tapped on the window and called to the driver. He paid no attention. Then I found the doors were fastened shut, and the windows plugged so they wouldn't open.

"I discovered that an armed man rode beside the driver. I managed to get one of the doors open, after a good deal of work, and escaped when we stopped for a freight train to pass, but I'm satisfied that I was being kidnaped and if I hadn't got away just when I did you would never have heard of me again or the message either. I finally managed to reach East Liberty station and jumped on the first train that came in, but I caught a glimpse of Balder stretching his neck over the crowd. He must have seen me and had Hale and Burke on the watch when I got here. They just missed me by a half second. They went over to the restaurant didn't expect me on a special, but I escaped them, and I'm mighty glad to get that little paper into your possession and out of mine. It's rather a long story to tell the whole but I think you have the main facts."

There was a suspicious glitter in the keen eyes of the kind old chief as he put out his hand and grasped Gordon's in a hearty shake, but all he said was:

"And you are all worn out—I'll guarantee you didn't sleep much last night."

"Well, no," said Gordon. "I had to sit up in a day-coach and share the seat with another man. Besides I was somewhat excited."

"Of course, of course," puffed the old chief coughing vigorously, and showing by his gruff attitude that he was deeply affected. "Well young man this won't be forgotten by the department. Now you go home and take a good sleep. Take the whole day off if you wish and then come down tomorrow morning and tell me all about it. Isn't there anything more I need to know at once that justice may be done?"

"I believe not," said Gordon with a sigh of relief. "There's a list of the men who were at the dinner with me. I wrote them down from memory last night when I couldn't sleep. I also wrote a few scraps of conversation which will show you just how deep the plot had gone. If I had not read the message and known its import I should not have understood what they were talking about."

"H-m! Yes. If there had been more [illegible] started I might have told you all about it. Still, it seemed desirable that you should appear as much at your ease as possible. I thought it would be best accordingly [illegible] knowing nothing of the import [illegible] seeing when you first met the [illegible]

"I suppose it was as well that I [illegible] more than I did. You are a great [illegible] sir." I was deeply impressed [illegible] with that fact as I saw how wonderfully you had planned for every possible emergency. It was simply great, sir."

"Pooh! Pooh! Get you home and to bed," said the old chief quite brusquely.

He touched a bell and a man appeared.

"Jessup, is the coast clear?" he asked.

"Yessah," declared the darkey. "Dey [illegible] fired a couple o' shots in de alley an' now dey tuk de villains off to de police station. De officers is out dar waitin' to escort de gemman."

"Get home with you, Gordon, and don't come to the office till 10 in the morning. Then come straight to my private room."

Gordon thanked him and left the room preceded by the gray haired servant. He was surprised to find the policemen outside, and wondered still more that they seemed to be going one in front and the other behind him as he rode along. He was greatly relieved that he had not been called upon to give the whole story. His heart was filled with anxiety now to get back to the girl and tell her everything, and yet he dreaded it more than anything he had ever had to face in all his life. He sat back on the cushions and, covering his face with his hands, tried to think how he should begin, but he could see nothing but her sweet eyes filled with tears, think of nothing but the way she had looked and smiled during the beautiful morning they had spent together in the little town of Milton. Beautiful little Milton. Should he ever see it again?

Celia at her window grew more and more nervous as an hour and then another half hour slipped slowly away, and still he did not come. Then two mounted policemen rode rapidly down the street following an automobile, in which sat the man for whom she waited.

She had no eyes now for the men who had been lurking across the way, and when she thought to look for them again she saw them running in the opposite direction as fast as they could go, making wild gestures for a car to stop for them.

She stood by the window and saw Gordon get out of the car, and disappear into the building below, saw the car wheel and curve away, and the mounted police take up their stand on either corner, heard the clang of the elevator as it started up and the clash of its door as it stopped at that floor, heard steps coming on toward the door, and the key in the latch. Then she turned and looked at him, her two hands clasped before her and her two eyes yearning, glad and fearful all at once.

"Oh, I have been so frightened about you! I am so glad you have come!" she said, and caught her voice in a sob as she took one little step toward him.

He threw his hat upon the floor, wherever it might land, and went to meet her, a great light glowing in his tired eyes, his arms outstretched to hers.

"And did you care?" he asked in a voice of almost awe. "Dear, did you care what became of me?"

He had come quite close to her now.

"Oh yes, I cared! I could not help it." There was a real sob in her voice now, though her eyes were shining

FAITH IN THE TRENCHES

Rudolph Fischer in Student Letter, Published in Germany

I believe you think life in the trenches is nothing but misery and anxiety. Certainly life here is not as life in a drawing or school room, where everything is warm and comfortable; but under the circumstances we are considerable enough as long as the enemy leaves us in peace. For what we have lost in home comforts we are amply compensated by seeing nature as it is in reality. What a grand sight when on outpost duty you stand on lonely watch and look up to the stars in heaven, the moon sending its mellow light down upon you. Your thoughts go up to the Creator, who has made heaven and earth. A silent prayer goes up to God to protect you from harm, and I am fully repaid for the loss of home comforts by having found God on the lonesome watch.

Today was one of the happiest since I have donned the field gray uniform. Today I received what every soldier longs for, the Iron Cross, and what is more, the kaiser himself pinned it on my breast.

War is terrible and death is our daily companion wherever we go. Many a friend has fallen; many more will follow. Who knows but that the next bullet may lay me low. But freely will I give my life for home and fatherland.

Hunger and Privation.

From the Montgomery Advertiser

The Advertiser would emphasize the plea of the committee of ladies, for aid for destitute negroes living in the country as made in Saturday's Advertiser. The need of many negroes in the country is keen and pressing; the Christmas spirit, at this time and under conditions as they exist, can find no worthier objects upon which to express itself than upon the cold and hungry negroes, who are undergoing privations which negroes never knew before in middle Alabama.

As early as last August the Advertiser, in its editorial columns, drew attention to the inevitable results of the failure of the cotton crop. The landlords, without returns from their farms and plantations, were themselves without resources. Any number of them in recent weeks have had for the first time, to mortgage their lands to get food and clothing for their own families and to prepare for a new crop year. The advances made to the negroes for the crop year just closed were gone for good, in general such advances were complete losses. Perhaps some of the landlords were generous enough and able enough to feed and supply the negroes living on their places until next fall.

But in most instances, with the farmer and the planter no better off in a financial way than the negro tenant, all the mules, the hogs, the corn and whatever resources there may have been were collected to meet pressing obligations. In most instances this year's adversity has completely stripped the negro. He and his family know hunger which can not be satisfied; they have come face to face with the bitterest privation.

There is no sensationalism, no exaggeration in this presentation of the case. In the cabins on the farms and plantations, the negroes are going hungry and cold. There is no hope among them of having anything for Christmas; they have now not even the expectation of being fed and clothed warmly.

So far, the only practical effort to relieve the privation and destitution among the unfortunate negroes is represented in the efforts of a committee of ladies composed of Mrs. A. B. Garland, Miss Nimmo Green and Miss Estelle Mitchell. These ladies have already done much for some of the unfortunates—but the need is so general, the privation so pressing that it offers a field for the aroused charity of the city. What has been done is only a beginning; the sufferings can not be relieved in any general way unless there is an awakening in the city to the repellant fact that on the farms about the city human beings are experiencing the gnawing pangs of hunger and men, women and children are facing freezing weather in a bare rags.

Do you feel the impulse to help the hungry and the suffering? The time and the opportunity are here.

The President Arises Early.

From the Louisville Courier-Journal.

President Wilson has a well defined schedule mapped out for his daily work when in Washington. He sticks to this schedule closely. It calls for his arising at the early hour of 5 o'clock. Then he has his bath and is in his study by not later than 5:30 o'clock.

Usually the president is met in his study by his stenographer, Charles Swem. "Charlie," as he is known about the White House, takes dictation until 8 o'clock, which is the president's breakfast hour. Breakfast over, Mr. Wilson is accustomed to return to his study to continue his morning dictating, or to study some matter which requires his immediate attention, such as the selection of a commission or the approval or disapproval of acts of congress, when it is in session.

About 9:30 o'clock in the morning the president receives a list of appointments which Secretary Tumulty has made for him at the executive offices. These engagements never begin until 10 o'clock. Few of them are for longer than half an hour. These engagements run up to about 12 o'clock, the president always leaving the office building for the White House for luncheon not later than 1 o'clock.

Usually the president's afternoons have been given over to recreation. Of course, this was impossible for the two weeks prior to the adjournment of congress, with the exception of short motor rides. The president played golf but a few times during the railroad crisis. He then only did so because Dr. Grayson thought it advisable for him to get a little outdoor exercise. On the motor rides and at the golf matches Mrs. Wilson was always his companion.

The motor trips are usually over by 6 o'clock, so there is ample time to prepare for 7 o'clock dinner. Most of the president's evenings have been devoted to work.

For the last few months there has been a great mystery about the White House. It has to do with one of the means which the president employs to relax from his presidential duties. This form of amusement is nothing more than the good old game of pool, or, speaking in more polite terms, pocket billiards.

When the conditions are normal at the White House the president has two means of relaxation other than playing billiards. He takes great delight in reading poetry aloud. The other form of amusement is the reading of detective stories. There is a government employe in Washington who considers it his especial duty to keep the president supplied with the latest detective stories.

President Wilson does not believe in going to keep the midnight oil burning. Therefore, the hour of 11 o'clock usually finds him in bed. More often it is before 11 o'clock that he retires. This is necessary because of his early risings.

The following sign could properly be posted upon the door of the White House office:

"Office hours, 8 o'clock in the morning until 11:30 o'clock at night."

Long Trip to Sunday School.

From the Washington Post.

Hamilton, Pa.—J. Binney Kenell, who has not missed a session of Sunday school for 19 years, recently traveled 60 miles in order to maintain an unbroken record.

Kenell is secretary of Trinity Reformed Sunday school, and when he learned of the edict closing all Sunday schools in Pennsylvania he decided to go to Maryland. Arriving in Baltimore on an early train he found all the city schools closed but undismayed, he went to the country and after searching for hours found a school in session six miles from Baltimore, which he attended.

SAFE FARMING

MAKE MORE FROM YOUR FARM POULTRY.

By PROF. P. G. HOLDEN.

Practically all farmers raise poultry. No other class of live stock is so widely distributed.

We "take care of" our horses, our cows, and our pigs, but we "keep" chickens.

It isn't much trouble to keep chickens. They can roost most any place—on the fence, in the barn or pig pen, or even in the trees. They can live on most anything—bugs, worms, waste grain, litter, or table scraps—and if they chance to wander into the garden where the eating is good, they are "shooed" or stoned out. They can drink water or eat snow.

The average farmer considers poultry raising a "side issue"—a job for women and children—a sort of necessary nuisance in order to provide fresh eggs and a toothsome roast or fry.

Yet this "necessary nuisance," this "side-issue" branch of farming, nets an annual return in the United States of more than half a billion dollars—enough to build two Panama canals every year.

Farm Hens Big Producers.

Only a very small portion of this vast sum is produced by the commercial poultrymen of the country. Ninety per cent of it is earned by the little, often neglected, flocks ranging at liberty on the farms of the country.

Farm poultry is profitable because the investment is small, the cost of labor low, feed is cheap, the chickens utilize the waste products of the farm, and they destroy weeds and insects.

A Profitable Kind.

Increase your profit by producing more eggs. The average farm hen produces sixty eggs; she should produce one hundred and twenty. Profit depends on surplus production.

Good housing and proper feeding will increase your profit.

A hen will not lay eggs unless she is comfortable and has a variety of food with plenty of water, grit and oyster shell.

Handle and market your eggs better. Market the kind of eggs you would want to buy if you were a consumer. Produce infertile eggs, keep the nests clean, gather the eggs daily, keep them in a cool, dry place, and market them twice a week.

Improve your flock. Cull out the poor stuff; begin now to build a better flock, and ultimately keep one breed only.

A henhouse is not always a hen's home. The former may be cold, dark, and damp; the latter is always light, clean, cheery, and comfortable.

Make Hens Comfortable.

The poultry house should be convenient. It should be close to the other buildings, and easy to clean. A low house is hard to work in; a high house is hard to keep warm. Have plenty of light in the house—sunlight is a good germ destroyer. Leave all or a part of the south side open to keep the house dry and well ventilated. Allow no drafts. Keep the house clean and free from vermin.

A good house does not necessarily need to be an expensive house. A cheap house, built along the right lines and kept clean, will serve just as well as an expensive house.

If you want winter eggs, duplicate spring conditions. Variety is important in the winter ration. Eggs cannot be produced unless the feed contains the material from which eggs are made. An egg is about ten per cent fat, fifteen per cent protein, seventy-four per cent water, and one per cent ash, chiefly lime.

Grain, especially corn, furnishes the carbon and starch—the heat and fat making foods; mill feeds, with milk or beef scrap, furnish the protein. Some green food is necessary in winter to furnish succulence and bulk.

Give the hens all the water they will drink; warm it, if possible. Furnish grit to grind the food, oyster shell for making the egg shell, and charcoal as an aid to digestion.

The Lavas of Hawaii.

None of the island possessions of the United States exhibit more notable point of interest for the observant traveler or the naturalist than the Hawaiian islands. The natives are typical of the race inhabiting many island groups of the south Pacific, the plant life has the attractive features of insular development in semitropical latitudes, the marine life of the warm waters is wonderful, but perhaps the most fascinating, instructive, and awe-inspiring of all the natural phenomena of Hawaii are furnished by its active volcanoes. The whole group of islands, extending in a chain for many hundred miles, is of volcanic origin, though some of the islets and reefs are but the wave battered remnants of volcanoes whose fires have long since died out.

Approaching Honolulu by steamer from San Francisco, the traveler has the evidence of volcanic action plainly before him in the first land he sees, in the ash cone of Koko Head and the well preserved craters of Diamond Head and the Punch Bowl, which are in the outskirts of the city. The high mountains of the island of Oahu are also made up of black lava—basalt—but they are largely covered with vegetation and one must go to the largest island of the group, Hawaii, for the wonderful demonstration of the process by which all these island mountains have been built up from great ocean depths. Kilauea, one of the most active, and Mauna Loa, one of the largest volcanoes in the world, are showing just how lava builds up mountains. Both of these volcanoes are included in the newly created Hawaii national park.

Since the time of Captain Cook the Hawaiian islands have been visited by geologists and others interested in the problems of volcanoes, and much has been written concerning them.

Professional Paper 15, "Lavas of Hawaii and Their Relations," by Whitman Cross, of the United States geological survey, Department of the Interior, presents a summary of what is now known concerning the lavas of all the islands. This paper is largely technical in its character, for it is intended primarily to serve as a basis for future study of the rocks by geologists.

It appears that there are many other kinds of lavas in Hawaii besides basalt, and many facts of association of the different lavas are of interest to students of the minor history of volcanoes. While much is yet to be learned concerning the lavas of these islands, Mr. Cross shows that present knowledge of the rocks is sufficient to throw light on some of the most vexed questions pertaining to the origin and relations of the igneous rocks of the earth. The chemical relations are discussed with particular thoroughness. Petrologists will find valuable material in this report, bearing on many problems.

Unite Nation With Song.

Thomas W. Surette in Atlantic Monthly.

Any one who has compared town and city life in this country and in Europe can see what a pleasure and what a civilizing influence music may become when it is properly taught in childhood, must realize how great a loss our people sustain by the neglect of singing.

We are only now beginning to realize how long it takes to weld a diverse people into one by means of an intellectual conception of nationality. The thin band of self interest the advantage of "getting on" in the world—these keep us together in ordinary times, but in a great crisis such bonds break. The heaven of sentiment is needed. We want a common sympathy; we want above all some means of expression for that sympathy.

There have been of late numerous great meetings at which the feelings of men and women have expended themselves in shouts, in cheers, in the clapping of hands and in other inarticulate methods of expressing emotions. What would not a song have done for these thousands—a song they all knew and loved? Are we forever to be dumb?

Do You Hike?

From the Outing Magazine.

Probably everybody knows that there is an increased amount of walking lately in New York city because of the anemic but much advertised car strike. It is needless to add more than the fact that as a whole, the descendants of Father Knickerbocker do not enjoy it.

Regardless of how we may feel about walking on pavements, it is true that "hiking" is growing in favor again. There is no better time for it than autumn. Summer dust is largely gone because of the freshened and stiffer winds of the season, and the colors of fading trees and flowers are entrancing beyond description if one will only keep his eyes away from his feet. Vistas are not so extensive as in spring because of the haze that shrouds the hilltops and even the prairies, nor are they so green.

We are learning, however, that the far pastures are not always so attractive as distance and false teaching have made them seem. The home things and the simple things easily within reach are the best things after all. Plain clothes of simple make but rough enough to withstand a few briars if we wander from the beaten way, heavy shoes for restfulness, and a camera instead of rosemary for remembrance are the 20th century requirements of the Ponce de Leon who wants the fountain of youth.

Flood Light Successful.

Electric light, cleverly applied, helped a Kansas City realty firm to establish a record in the leasing of a block of 44 apartments in 30 days.

A visit to the east by the manager of the apartments developed into a scheme for flooding the buildings with light from an electric projector lantern, according to the Electrical World.

The result of the flood lighting was almost instantaneous. One of the apartments was leased the first night; in the first two weeks 27 were leased, and in three weeks 36. In fact, all but a few of the flats on the side street were leased within the month. The real estate agent took care of 15 to 20 people every evening, practically all of whom had come in automobiles.

Except for lights in one or two of the hallways, all the buildings were dark inside. Many leases were closed on the first view of the interiors and people moved in at once.

England Free of Gypsies.

London.—The last remnants of a gypsy band, that has wandered aimlessly about England for years, was rounded up in Sheffield recently, one man being mustered into the army and three others imprisoned for petty thefts. The Scotland Yard men, who trailed and finally caught the wanderers, believe they have put an end to the gypsy nuisance at least for the duration of the war.

JOHN PHILIP SOUSA IS CONTENTED AT 62

From the Boston Globe.

"No man in the world I envy; I am satisfied with my calling—I would rather be a composer than anything else."

John Philip Sousa, the "march king," smiled as he spoke these words. It was without an ingenuous, youthful smile for a man of 62, who has been half a century before the public.

Only the white that has crept into his pointed beard betrays the advance of his years. His person is as lithe as ever, his voice as musically clear, his eye as bright and sure.

"I beat them all at Philadelphia October 12 in a trapshooting match," he said, laughingly, when the matter of age came up. "I broke 98, which isn't so bad for 12 years past the half century mark."

Trapshooting and horseback riding are Mr. Sousa's recreations. When he is "on the road"—as he is at present, with the big Hippodrome show—he gets little time for either.

Three Months for Play.

"I get my exercise while here by walking in the Back Bay and the Fens," he said. "My shooting average will fall back to 80 or so this winter, I suppose. By the time I get back to 95 next summer I shall have to drop the gun and take up the baton again. I get three months in the year for play."

Mr Sousa talked of his play, and of his work, with the enthusiasm of youth. To talk with the man two minutes is to get a hint of his great power for creative work. The thousands who think of him only as the leader of a band are dealing with but one side of a many sided character.

He ranks among the first composers of his day. Besides his scores of marches that have won him a place shared by no rival, he has produced not less than 10 operas, besides a variety of lesser works, and has also written a history of the world's national music, many less ambitious works on music, and a novel.

"I had a pleasant surprise the other day," said Mr. Sousa, "when a friend sent me this book as a birthday present."

The work is a recent history of music. "The surprise was in the way I found myself mentioned in it," the composer explained. "The author gives the notable names in musical history for 600 years. There are but 700. I find my name among them, and also this statement: 'He has done one particular thing better than any other man.'"

Composed March at Sea.

Asked what he considered his best march, the composer answered quickly, "'The Stars and Stripes Forever.'" He then illustrated his statement regarding the power of inspiration by telling how his most successful march was composed.

"It was conceived on board the Atlantic liner Teutonic," he said. "I had been in England, and had been homesick. Like all returning Americans, I found the fire of patriotism burning strong within me as the ship headed homeward.

"I conceived the title and form of the composition while pacing the steamer's deck, and in the course of the voyage the march played itself in my brain fully 500 times. Before I landed in New York it was perfected. No change was ever made in it."

One interesting fact about Mr. Sousa was developed in the course of the interview. It is that though he has composed music that has set millions of feet into joyous motion, he does not dance. In this he is like the great composer of waltz music, Strauss.

But he believes dancing one of the greatest forms of exercise and mental tonic.

"Two of the greatest things for the world in this generation," he says, "are the growth and development of dancing and of golf."

Look for Mexican Joan D'Arc.

From the Los Angeles Express.

A Mexican Joan of Arc, a pretty girl hardly out of her teens, is being sought by agents of the United States government in connection with a plot to overthrow the regime of Gov. Estaban Cantu in Lower California and replace it with a republic.

News of the great conspiracy became known following the arrest of Fortunato Tenorio, an alleged leader of the insurgent revolution, charged with violating the neutrality laws by recruiting soldiers in Los Angeles.

It was through the apprehension of Tenorio, officers says, that they learned of the leading part taken in the conspiracy by the girl who fancied that she was the humble instrument of a higher power through whom the sufferings of her people were to be relieved.

Like the "Maid of Orleans," who delivered France from her English foes, this Joan of Arc sprang from the peasant class. She worked in a small restaurant kept by her mother until recently, investigators say, but her present whereabouts is known. Government officers assert their belief that she has departed with one of the chieftains of the revolution with whom she is said to have been infatuated and who is said to have promised her a command in the "army of liberty."

The mysterious beauty is said to have fallen under the dominance of this leader, a handsome Frenchman, expatriated, who played upon her credulity and patriotic zeal until she aided him. Tenorio and others in distributing propaganda among the hotspurs of the younger Mexican element and in other phases of their recruiting activity.

It is said that men were recruited for the revolutionary army in the Plaza and at various gathering places of Mexicans in the vicinity. The girlish leader was a frequent speaker at recruiting meetings and her fiery eloquence and beauty won many soldiers. The absolute faith she manifested that she was selected by a higher power to save her people greatly influenced the superstitious Indians.

Died to a Martial Air.

A battalion of French chasseurs stationed in the Vosges was attacked and a short but lively battle ensued. The commander, favorably known for many brave deeds in action, was riding before the front of his battalion; by his own example inspiring his men on to greater valor. He was mortally wounded. When it was discovered that his case was hopeless and life was ebbing away, he was asked if he had any wish.

"Yes, let the buglers come," said the dying officer. "Sound the march of Abd-el-Kader."

The buglers placed themselves around the dying chief and sounded the glorious march while life was going out, and he died while the strains of the martial march were on the air.

The name of "Abd-el-Kader" was given to that march in commemoration of the desperate defense offered by a brave companion of the chieftain of the Mascagna column, attacked by Abd-el-Kader during the Algerian conquest on September 23 and 24, 1845. Most of the 60th column were massacred. The survivors took refuge in the mosque of Sidi Brahim, a nearby village, where they held out, without food or water, for two days and then cut their way back to the French camp.

Why Marshall Knows Shakespeare.

From the Birmingham Age-Herald.

"I see where Vice President Marshall quoted Shakespeare in his congratulatory message to the president."

"I'm not surprised at that."

"No?"

"The vice president is one of the office holders in this country with ample leisure for cultivating the classics."

Why That Lame Back?

Morning lameness, sharp twinges when bending, or an all-day backache, each is cause enough to suspect kidney trouble. Get after the cause. Help the kidneys. We Americans go it too hard. We overdo, overeat and neglect our sleep and exercise, and so we are fast becoming a nation of kidney sufferers. 72% more deaths than in 1880 is the 1910 census story. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. Thousands recommend them.

An Iowa Case

"Don't Do Any Talking Story."

W. H. Simmons, Fort Dodge, Iowa, says: "My back pained as though it were being pulled apart. Often sharp, knifelike pains darted through me, making me almost helpless. Mornings I could hardly get out of bed and to stoop took all my strength. The first box of Doan's Kidney Pills did me so much good that I kept on. I took four boxes in all and since then my back has never bothered me."

WINTER THE TIME TO WALK

Exercise in the Cold Air Will Be Found Both Enjoyable and Beneficial.

"Winter weather diminishes greatly the time spent in the open air by those who ride in motorcars. It comes near putting bicycles out of use. From steamboats to canoes there is almost entire cessation of water outings.

All of which means that more walking instead of less ought to be done in cold weather. There is no other way of moving about in the open air, which keeps a healthy person's feet so warm and brings such a glow of warmth from the body itself. If the pedestrian is properly clad, especially in respect to keeping dryshod, all of the effects of winter walking should be beneficial.

With a little care and discretion such exercise can be made as agreeable as it is wholesome. Rightly timed and kept within bounds, winter walking is a good precaution against the ill effects of sedentary life and too much indoor air.

GIVE "SYRUP OF FIGS" TO CONSTIPATED CHILD

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing at once. When peevish, cross, listless, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad, has sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.—Adv.

Church Gave Away Apples.

The big red Western apple was the text of a recent sermon by the Rev. Christian F. Reisner in Grace Methodist Episcopal church, New York. Twelve hundred apples were given away to the congregation.

Doctor Reisner used the apple to illustrate that as sunshine, proper nourishment and care will grow fine apples so will clean living, good government and religion develop fine citizens. He praised the efforts of Billy Sunday, and said the evangelist has been so successful that he has even got Boston awake and interested in his form of religion.

THE ONLY REAL EXPLANATION

On the heels of the "wild horse" purchased by Iowans and its a ring which revealed that a goodly number of Iowa people of large or smaller means had "invested" in wild horses "as they run" to find that they had been swindled with, their own greedy assistance comes the announcement of the failure of another Idaho orchard scheme which bites into Iowans in a painful fashion. It would be interesting if it could be known just how much Iowa money has been lost in such "investments" within the last five years—interesting and astonishing. The birthrate for suckers doesn't seem to fall off.

Of course Iowa's prosperity is more or less to blame for the prevalence of "easy marks" in Iowa. The sucker and his money can not be separated unless he has the money. And all the suckers have money in Iowa because money may be had by any who will work for it in Iowa.

So the orchard scheme, the wild horse graft, even the "department x" that advertises "a gold watch worth $60.00, a beautiful and accurate timepiece" for $3.39 get the money. We send it out of Iowa to all manner of bald fakers in sums from dimes to thousands. If the postoffice and the banks were to keep a list of the drafts and orders they have drawn to the credit of outside grafts the total would gravel half the highways of the state.

The astonishing thing about it all is that the "investors" should hold such perfect confidence in the promoter or broker or grafter they do not know anything about and so little in the home manufactories and home investments that they know all about.

If the money on hopeless errands outside of the state never to return were invested annually in manufacturing establishments Iowa would be a leading manufacturing state in ten years.

It's a pity; but it goes right back to the wisdom and observation of that wise guy who noticed that a fool and his money are soon parted. That's the only real explanation of it.

MOVING TO TOWN

He was a young man and he wanted to move to town. The life of a renter did not appeal to him. He had no trade, no money and no experience—except at farming. That fellow, if he follows out his idea, will receive a rude awakening. There is no room in town for him. There is always room in the country for a man with energy and push but no room in town. He can work fifty years in town at day jobs, and at the end of the fifty years stand just where he started. But in country he can advance. We have never known a farmer who moved to town and went to work at day labor without capital and without experience, who made a success of it. We have never known a farmer who farmed consistently and well who did not succeed. "Cobbler, stick to thy last." It is a good maxim. Farmer stick to thy farm.—Humboldt Republican.

Overfeeding and Underfeeding are responsible for many failures in hog raising and for many of the hog diseases, according to H. C. Dawson, breeder and prize winner. Underfeeding is less common and and more easily remedied, as it is easy to mind up the underfed hogs.

Overfeeding, besides producing uneven herds, causes many digestive diseases and is no doubt responsible for more so-called cholera and swine plague than is the real cholera germ itself. Much of the so-called cholera is bad digestion.

Overfeeding causes scours and ricketis and leaves the hog liable to infection by every disease that affects hogs. Care should be taken especially not to overfeed brood sows, as bad results are sure to follow. Sour and fermented seeds should not be fed to brood sows, and little high protein feed should be given

By keeping the stomach in shape to properly digest the feed by always keeping Standard Hog Regulator before the hogs in a self feeder, many of the evil results of overfeeding can be avoided.

We will supply you with Standard Hog Regulator and give you a Self Feeder.

The Old Way

Before the advent of the Automatic Washers, in 1908, practically all family washing was done either by hand or by hand-operated machies.

The Automatic was the FIRST dolly family washer ever built to be operated by POWER, either engine or electric.

The Automatic was RIGHT in 1908, and with the addition of PROVEN conveniences and improvements, it is equally RIGHT TODAY.

The AUTOMATIC Washer has never been equalled.

Install A Modern Refrigerating Plant

J. P. Larson & Sons commenced the erection of a modern refrigeratoring system the latter part of the week.

The plant will contain three rooms, one for general service, another for storage purposes and a freezing room The last named room will be at a freezing temparature the year round. The engine and ammonia -mixer will be installed in the basement.

When this improvement is completed they will have one of the best equipped meat markets in this part of the state and it is seldom indeed that you would find one as well equipped in a town the size of Klemme.

J. P. Larsen & Sons have owned the meat market for nearly three years and during that time have made many improvements and adding equipment to enable to take care of their increasing patronage. This last move will insure their customers that all meats will be in good condition regardless of weather.

They will continue to put up ice for the benefit of their trade and for their own use outside the shop.

J. P. Larsen & Sons can always be found among Klemme's best boosters and we wish them continued success

A Very Sad Case

Mrs. Marcus Danielson of Eagle Grove, Iowa, was in Belmond last week Wednesday, consulting the County Attorney regarding the necessary steps to bring to justice her recreant husband. She filed an information charging her husband with desertion of his wife and family, and a warrant was issued for his arrest. She told a pitiful story of trouble and hardship. She and her family of five children for several days had only a few crusts of bread to eat and absolutely no money. In fact she was compelled to ask a loan of a dollar to make the trip to see the County Attorney. She alleges that her husband deliberately deserted her and that he has been employed at good wages at Valley Junction, Iowa, working at his trade of boiler maker. If the charges are true he should get all the law allows.—Herald Press,

Move To Oklahoma

Chas. Bredlow and family are leaving this week for their new home at Vinita, Oklahoma, near where they own a large tract of land, but upon their arrival at Vinita will live in town while a set of buildings are being erected. Mr. Bredlow came here from Wisconsin 26 years ago and has been one of our most prosperous and progressive farmers and the family have a host of friends who are loath to see them depart for Oklahoma, but who will wish them continued health and prosperity in their new home. Mr. Bredlow has promised to let his many friends know how they like their new Southern home through the columns of the Times.

James Hawes Dead

James Hawes died at Eagle Bend, Minnesota, last week after being sick for some time. He was married while living here a few years ago to Miss Ellen Palmby and besides her, leaves three small children to mourn the loss of a loving father and husband. We understand Mrs Hawes will make her home with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. Palmby near Eagle Bend. The bereaved have the sincere sympathy of a large number of friends at this place.

Very Critically Ill

John and F Gruetzmacher departed Monday for Minneapolis in response to a message announcing the serious illness of Raymond Gruetzmacher, their nephew and a son of their brother Charles. Raymond has been ill for some time but took a turn for the worse a few months ago and not much hopes are held out for his recovery. He is a former Klemme boy and will be remembered by our older citizens. The many friends of the family extend the hand of sympathy and hope that something can be done to alleviate his suffering and hope that Raymond will be able to enjoy a permanent recovery.

GETS NEEDLES FROM PATIENT

Doctor Finally Solves Mystery of Woman's Illness.

Seneca Falls, N. Y.—After baffling all the skilled physicians for six weeks, Dr. Fred Lester of Seneca Falls has cleared up the mysterious illness of Mrs. Homer Wyer by removing five sewing needles from her left side. Seven more needles are known to be somewhere in Mrs. Wyer's body. They will be removed by the aid of electricity.

Six weeks ago Mrs. Wyer accidentally swallowed a paper of needles which she placed in her mouth in order to take care of her baby. Nothing more was thought of the incident. A week later, she was taken ill and complained of severe pains in her left side. It was diagnosed as pleurisy at first, but this theory was later given up and her condition baffled all physicians that were called.

An examination by Dr. Lester disclosed the points of two needles protruding thru the skin on her left side, which recalled to Mrs. Wyer the swallowing of the paper of needles. The physician removed in all five needles and the remainder will be extracted by the aid of strong magnetic current.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Until quite recently the stalk from which the cotton had been picked has been regarded as worthless. Now however, this waste of material is done away with through the discovery that cotton stalks can be made into excellent paper pulp. The strong fiber of the stalk, which is able to withstand the nitrite process, makes it valuable in the manufacture of guncotton. A second discovery in connection with the cotton plant is the value of its roots, from which artificial silk can be produced.

W. L. HARDING IS INAUGURATED AS STATE EXECUTIVE

Sioux City Resident Outlines Policies of Administration Before the General Assembly.

OPPOSES U. S. AIDED ROADS

New Governor Favors Military Training In Public Schools and Upholds Principles of Direct Primary.

Des Moines, Ia, Jan 11 —Speaking to the house and senate of the Iowa general assembly in joint session, Gov W. L. Harding of Iowa today outlined the purposes and plans of his administration, declaring himself to be in favor of legislation which would bring about better housing conditions, the resubmission of the constitutional amendment providing for statewide prohibition, economy, both in the manner of appropriations and in the limiting of the number of state employes, and fewer laws.

In the opinion of many however, the feature of the governor's remarks was his declaration against federal aid in the matter of road building, his declaration in favor of the national guard and military training in the public schools, and his upholding of the principles of the direct primary

He said

In a spirit of humility and reverence, the duties and responsibilities of chief executive of this commonwealth are today assumed Mindful of personal limitations and and counsel of the Eternal Builder of the universe is earnestly sought The confidence of the electorate so generously bestowed is gratefully acknowledged

In assuming this first responsibility and in performing this first and pleasant duty I trust I shall not lose sight of the fact that I am speaking to a co-ordinate branch of the government, wisely protected in the performance of its functions from undue influence and interference by its peers In what I shall say therefore I do not presume to outline a complete leg. I have program but to you as best I may, as the representative head of the whole people a conception of how we may best accomplish that which will redound to the benefit and happiness of the whole people

There are not here as in many commonwealths natural geographical or artificial trade conditions by force of which one section of the state is arrayed in interest against others We are a homogeneous people with no problem or condition in any section or among any class, which does not exist equally in all and legislative action for the benefit of any interest in the state need work no injury to the whole people

"In the wealth of material things we are rich beyond belief in empire of thriving cities and smiling farms, and of its wealth and of the happiness and future of its people you are the chosen guardians. In your action lies the possibility of opening highe field of endeavor in which shall ripen the golden grain of individual effort into a glorious harvest of social justice

Government a Necessity.

"Government is not an ideal but a necessity, and representative government was instituted among men for the purpose of protecting the individual in the enjoyment of the fruits of his toil and skill, and for carrying, by united effort common burd as too heavy for individual strength

"Governments may properly notice economic conditions which exert such pressure of material necessity upon the individual that he has no real choice as to the conditions under which he shall labor for his bread In the past we have made legislative effort to afford men a safe place in which to work Might we not well look to see if we may, by the same means, afford him and his family a decent place in which to live" We have said by law that the rent for money cannot justly be more than 8 per cent, that its use can have no greater value than that Why should we permit this same money, invested in a shack, to produce 100 per cent in rent for its use? We spend millions to care for the derelicts these places launch but we do practically nothing to prevent the conditions which produce them

The home is the rock upon which the whole structure of society rests If it shall be driven, by greed to the hovel and the tenement, none shall be safe from the plague which will rise and spread, from those depths

We have done something in a related matter The spread of tuberculosis has been checked, but not stopped, by the machinery which was employed against it a few years since The existence of this disease, both human and bovine, is a serious menace to health and property, the extent of which it would not be proper to enlarge upon here I would urge upon you that you be selfishly generous in appropriating funds to carry on the work of eradication, taking care, however, that no elaborate machinery, or new functionaries, shall be created, and that no color be given for petty oppressions or arbitrary action

"By operation of law, you have before you a proposed amendment to the constitution, prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors.

Pledged to the People.

"By token of the platforms of the political parties of the state, in one of which all of us have membership, we are pledged to a submission of this amendment to a vote of the people.

"I recommend that you proceed at once to take such steps as shall insure the submission of this amendment to such a vote.

"I urge upon you, in this connection, the gravity of the matter, involving, as it does, the fundamental law of the commonwealth, and that you surround the passage of this amendment through your body, and its submission to the people with every safeguard and precaution necessary to avoid any technical defect or irregularity, and to secure a free and fair expression of the will of the people.

"Recent events have demonstrated our total lack of preparedness to withstand assault from without. Every male citizen, without reference to his station in life, should be made to understand that he has a duty to his country, and should be trained to perform that duty well. The burden of defense should not rest wholly on the shoulders of those who shall volunteer, nor should we depend upon that accident to secure the training necessary to discharge that burden efficiently. Might it not be possible to make our present common school system the agency by which this may be accomplished, in connection with the national guard, which should be preserved?

"The fires of patriotism cannot be lightly too early nor fed too frequently. Might not the public school system adopt a course by which the impulses, which make efficiency in this respect a glad duty, would be inculcated in the breasts of the youth?

"It has been seriously proposed by some that the primary principle be abandoned by this comonwealth, and that election laws embodying that principle be repealed. The same proposal has been made touching the same principle as applied to the non-partisan selection of the judiciary.

"When the fathers drew the Declaration of Independence and framed the constitution, upon which our liberties rest, they declared a new confidence in the individual, and in the capacity of the average man to have his share of power and responsibility in framing the laws of his government, and in choosing the men who should administer them.

"Since those great days in the history of freedom, every piece of machinery which has been designed to enlarge that participation by the people, has justified itself, by the capacity which it has developed in the people for its employment to that end, and the force of public opinion is a vital one in just the degree that such machinery has been developed for its exertion.

"The primary principle is fundamental. By it, the unit for the expression of public opinion has been reduced from the mass meeting to the individual, and no man's voice need be drowned by the crowd. His right to be heard, and to be counted, has been transferred from the will of the presiding officer to the quiet protection of the ballot box, and this right to be so heard in the preliminary selection accomplished by the primary is as sacred to the individual, and as valuable to the commonwealth, as the major right of suffrage.

"The arguments for repeal are fundamental, and of great antiquity Their base is the distrust which the Troy of all ages has felt of the populace. That feeling has made war upon every enlargement of the franchise. It is the essential belief of those who hold that the people must be trusted, that a confession that they cannot be is a confession that our form of government is doomed. This does not assert that the people make no mistakes, but that they learn to use power rightly by being given it to use Primary a Solution.

"The use of the primary will better it Even now, there speaks for its retention, one great fact which outweighs all objections made—that it is better for the state, that those who administer its affairs cannot know with dangerous exactness where their redeemer liveth—that he is best guarded against giving what he has in trust, to satisfy a sense of obligation, who is obliged to unknown thousands.

"If you shall feel, as I do, that the preservation of this principle is vital, I am sure you will, no more than I, hear with patience, pleas for saving money by abolishing the machinery by which it is given play.

"No saving of money which involves curtailing the liberty and power of the individual citizen is an economy.

"A statement that one favors "good roads" is no contribution to political thought, and no guide to solving the problem of how best and most economically to get them. We all want the best roads we can pay for. We all want every dollar of our money to produce a dollar's worth of permanent betterment in road conditions.

"In the recent campaign which has resulted in our occupying our respective stations in the public service, one issue was dominant, and the voice of the people as to it had no uncertain tone That issue was whether the state or any of its governmental divisions, should enter into any long time indebtedness under any guise, for extensive work in experimental road building The verdict of the electorate was unmistakably against any such course, and for making our road improvements out of funds previously raised by normal taxation, and in such manner and to such extent as should be determined by those who must furnish the money to pay for them.

"To the extent that I have power in my office, it shall be employed in all legitimate ways to enforce this program for which I believe the people have spoken -and I hope for your co-operation

"There are honest differences as to the details of the legal machinery which shall be employed to that end, and the adjustment of these differences is essentially a legislative function, to be performed by you without interference by the executive, unless your adjustment of them shall violate these principles, to which I conceive this administration to be pledged

"With this thought, I am content to leave this problem, for the present, for your patriotic endeavor, and with confidence that it will be solved by you with a decent regard for the convictions of the people whose servants you are, rather than by consulting the dictum of theorists and irresponsible publicists, whose inspiration is less a secret than a scandal

Against Federal Aid.

"Congress has appropriated moneys from the federal treasury, to be used, under certain conditions, by states and smaller governmental divisions for the improvement of highways, and these funds may be secured by the states, or its agencies, when they shall have raised for themselves certain other sums, to be applied upon the same work. This is called "federal aid." In my opinion it is a form of lottery for the extraction of money from the pockets of the people under conditions only temporarily painless. It is a sedative, administered to the taxpayer, under the influence of which he pays for the prize out of his own pocket.

"To the extent that permitting our public agencies to participate in the distribution of these funds is an encouragement to further activities of this sort by the federal government, or by the state, accepting such aid is a dangerous expedient, while not availing ourselves of it involves the patent injustice of contributing to a fund from which we get no benefit. Our choice, therefore, lies between two evils, and I trust to your wisdom to choose a course in this respect which will not lend encouragement to this wasteful form of appropriation and expenditure, while securing to ourselves some crumbs from the feast we have been forced to spread.

"Ours is a government of laws, and bottomed on a profound and just distrust of vesting large discretion in any executive officer. Least of all, should there be discretion in any one charged with the duty of enforcing the policy of the state, deliberately embodied in its statutes by its representatives in legislative assembly.

"Euphonious phrases, used to qualify law enforcement, are but excuses, lacking humility, employed by those charged with sacred trust, to divert attention from their lack of courage. The term, 'law enforcement,' cannot be qualified.

"An executive officer has no proper concern with possible reaction occasioned by honest and uniform enforcement of law To say that to enforce a law may lead to its repeal is put to say that we live in a republic, and that the citizen is sovereign.

"You will be responsible for the existence of every statute which shall be in effect when you adjourn, and as fully so as if you had enacted it originally.

"The question of law enforcement rests primarily with this legislature; for, so far as it lies in the power of this administration, no officer shall usurp the power of repeal, by inaction, or resolve any doubts against the wisdom or virtue of any law which shall remain upon the statute books when you shall have adjourned.

"You will be derelict in your duty, therefore, if you do not vest in those charged by the constitution, and yourselves, with the duty of carrying your will into effect, every power necessary to discharge that duty.

"The method by which you shall accomplish this is, under the constitution, for you to determine. I have but to say that real law enforcement will be worth whatever it shall cost, and to urge you to let no false economies stand between you and the accomplishment of this prime purpose of government.

Too Many Laws.

"If I have any skill to read the public mind, it seems to me that men and women in every walk of life feel heavily the burden of our too many laws, and that there is practical unanimity against the tendency which has filled our statute books with hastily drawn and half digested measures of every sort. There is a feeling that governmental activities touch the individual almost daily, in innumerable petty ways, without having produced any substantial betterment in living conditions, or in standards of conduct.

"What the people of this state want is fewer laws, plainly written, easily understood, and well enforced. They expect you to reduce the number of laws; expect you to put them in such shape as that the average man may read as he runs, and patriotically obey. This is a task too large for a single session. I therefore recommend that a body be provided by this legislature, to report to the succeeding one, in harmony with this thought, their findings for action.

"When our laws shall be reduced to readable limits, they will be understood, and respected, and, so, easily enforced.

"In the same way, and evidenced in the same way, is a demand for reduction of public expenditures, and for economies in the expenditure of such funds as shall be necessarily expended.

"They expect you to reduce the number of persons employed in governmental activity, wherever possible, and to reduce, or at least to not increase, the present burden of taxation.

"Legislation during the past few years has resulted in an enlargement of the activities of the state government. There are instances in which the same powers are being exercised by representatives of the central government and by the local governing bodies The limit of the activities of these officers should be well defined In the interest of economy there should not be two sets of officers to perform a single function I suggest this subject for your consideration and that you correct this condition where you find it.

"Public attention has been drawn to the system by which the printing and binding for the state is being done. In my opinion, based upon some study of the matter, the present system is an improper one. It is asserted, not only that the system is wasteful and unduly costly, but that abuses of it exist, resulting in further loss to the state. I suggest that you take steps to inform yourselves thoroughly in this matter and to check any waste, and to improve the system.

"There is a defect in our present system, of taxation through which an increase of valuation has resulted in putting into the public treasury millions of dollars not contemplated by the levies which produced the money.

No Tax Unless People Say.

"No dollar of money can be raised by taxation in this state without your express permission and authority. You are responsible, therefore, for the total expenditure in the state, and I recommend such change in our laws in this respect as shall insure that no permission to raise money by taxation shall be given, by the legislature, to any governmental agency until the legislature shall have before it in dollars and cents the total amount of proposed and necessary expenditure to be made by such agencies. The rate of levy should be gauged by that estimated, and be required to be made upon a valuation then fixed

"The provision of our constitution that legislative, judicial and executive power shall not be exercised by the same officer or tribunal is not a mere phrase or dogma, but a fundamental principle of representative government. I recommend that you go carefully over the laws creating our various public agencies, and remedy this condition wherever you find it in any degree.

"A legislative assembly is a deliberative body, and can perform real service only by a close study of existing law, in connection with such new ones as shall be proposed, and the measure of its service is not the number of bills passed, but the care with which those that pass shall be drawn and the consideration and study they shall receive before passage, and the benefit they may be to all the people. In this view, and in the present state of the public mind to which I have referred, the distinction of having introduced the most bills in this session will not be an enviable one.

"The people of this commonwealth expect this legislature to do a few big things and then adjourn. You will not, if you desire to regard the opinion of the people, be here more than 70 days."

How Our Language Grows.

Arthur Rarig in The Republic.

Johnnie ——, a little boy four years of age shows how the English language may be used freshly, crisply, directly—white-hot from the forge of thought

He and his father were playing pretty roughly; the father was whirling his fist in the air and letting it fall with appreciable reality. Johnny soon got enough and ran to his mother crying:

"Mama, papa fisted me."

When the wind is blowing, as we grown ups say in indirection, Johnnie revises:

"See, it's winding today," or

"The paper winded away."

Father and son were traveling up a steep hill on a country road. Johnnie was in the wagon, his father walking

Johnnie, singing:

"I like to ride up hills in wagons when horses are pulling;
I like to ride up hills in wagons when horses are pulling."

The two were traveling the country road, the father pushing a wheelbarrow on which Johnnie rode with feet hanging and face toward the back so that he could look directly down at the ground.

Johnnie, singing:

"The earth goes sliding past,
The earth goes sliding past."

The father says that Johnnie's ideas and language have helped him to understand that the aphorism, "Thou must be born again," applies to language as well as to morals.

Women Artists Shear Hair.

From the New York Herald.

Men musicians with long hair have no advantage of Mme. Ethel Leginska, pianist; Miss Evelyn Starr, violinist, and Miss May Mulke, 'cellist, who jointly gave a concert at the Harris theater a few nights ago. They all wear their hair short, cut after the latest "Buster Brown" style. It is the fashion nowadays for women artists.

But aside from their hair cut, critics say, all of the young artists have much to offer of a musical nature that is worth attention.

SENATORS FAVOR PRIMARY CHANGES

Kimball Bill, to Be Brought In Tuesday, Is Getting Strong Support.

Des Moines, Ia., Jan. 13.—Senator Kimball, of Pottawattamie, will introduce his bill on Tuesday calling for amendments to the present primary law, which will take out from under its operation the election of state officers below the governor.

The bill will meet with the approval of a majority of the committee on elections, to which it will be referred.

Six members of the committee named have expressed themselves as opposed to the law as it now stands and in favor of changes practically identical with those of Senator Kenyon's bill.

Chairman Proudfoot is not yet ready to declare himself entirely in favor of taking all of the state offices out from under the primary.

Calls Laws "Lemons."

"I favor taking state officers under governor from the operation of the primary law," said Senator Coburn, of Cherokee county. "The presidential preference primary law is a 'lemon,' and the nonpartisan judiciary law is another. I would repeal them both"

Senator LeCompte, of Wayne county, believes that all three of the primary laws should be repealed, the general primary for the sake of economy He anticipates repeal of the presidential preference primary and the nonpartisan judiciary and amendments to the general primary.

"I am still open to conviction on parts of the primary law," said Senator Whitmore of Wapello county, another member of the committee on elections, "but it does need amendments. The old county caucus system was rotten, but I do not believe there is any necessity for a primary for all state officers. A county convention with delegates elected in a primary might be a good thing. The presidential preference and nonpartisan judiciary laws should be repealed"

Finds Favorable Sentiment.

Senator Kimball declared that he believes a general sentiment exists among the legislators for action such as is proposed in his bill.

Senator Byington of Johnson county believes that the primary principle should be retained for governor, lieutenant governor, United States senator, for county and township officers and for delegates to the conventions but should be limited to that extent.

"The presidential preference primary demonstrated its uselessness in the only election in which we have used it," he said "It should be repealed. On the nonpartisan judiciary law I am not yet ready to express an opinion but results of its operation have been disappointing."

Senator Thompson of Des Moines county thinks that little change should be made in the present law.

BILL TO PROTECT FARMERS FROM THE "SEED GRAFTERS"

Des Moines, Jan 13—Senator Harry C White, of Garrison, is after the seed corn grafters of Iowa He is considering a bill which will provide for the prosecution of seed companies selling seed not up to the guarantee, in the counties in which the sales are made.

The necessity of a statute to protect the farmer from poor seed corn, was impressed on Senator White through a personal experience Last spring he purchased seed corn which was guaranteed at 95 per cent.

Only 67 per cent germinated The senator protested and the firm refused to refund the money paid or make good the difference in value of the seed.

Efforts to prosecute the company were not successful, the senator says, because the seed operators are prominent men in their own communities, and it is almost impossible to convict them here

WOMEN RULE A TOWN.

Umatilla, Ore., Jan. 10.—The Umatilla, government was turned over to women when Mrs. Laura J. Starcher, wife of the retiring mayor, whom she defeated at the last election, took her office along with a woman recorder, treasurer and four council women. Her inauguration address was a sharp satire on "mere man" and she began her regime by saying the "petticoat government would not appoint a marshal, as the town had no need of one.

In the appointment of committees Mrs. Starcher named only women, leaving the holdover male members of the council entirely out.

RMERS NOT GETTING SHARE OF PROSPERITY

presentative Dorsey Asserts Car Shortage the Cause— To Investigate.

incoln, Neb., Jan. 13.—Nebraska mers are not getting their share of sperity due to high prices for what y produce, because they cannot sell, presentative Dorsey told the house, n that body took up the car shortsituation. He said they cannot sell use there are no cars to ship their duce to market.

he house appointed a committee posed of Dorsey, Anderson, of lps, and Auten to investigate. This be done in spite of the report made the house by the railroad commisn that there is nothing that can be e about the car shortage.

Condition Is National.

The commission report set out that shortage is national in character: t eastern terminals are filled with s that cannot be unloaded because re are not enough warehouses to re their cargoes and not enough ps to carry those whose contents are tined for point abroad, and that the mmission has moved every stone to section and results.

t set forth that the beginning of the in movement found the railroads rt of equipment, much of which had ne east under the abnormal movent of other commodities and which nd on side tracks where they are d as warehouses for storage. The 16 crop was somewhat below normal, d the railroads did not anticipate e sudden movement that high prices grain precipitated.

Want Bill Repealed.

The house was asked to go on record as desiring the representatives in ongress to take suitable steps to secure the immediate repeal of the bill roviding for federal aid to states in e construction of rural post roads. afoe, who introduced it, said each ommunity knew best what roads it anted, and should have the right to etermine their character.

New Bills Introduced.

Among the new bills introduced are ese: Providing for a minimum wage r women; requiring all deeds and ortgages to state their true considertion; fixing standard size for grape askets and fruit and vegetable conainers; distribution of freight cars beween railroad divisions, stations and hippers on the basis of volume of usiness done yearly; requiring election officers to report results to county clerk.

She is at the home of her brotherinlaw, Thomas Jones, where she was taken Tuesday night when found asleep in a shed The young woman has received threatening letters, it is said, and the physicians believe this may have something to do with her condition.

FEARS THAW TOOK SLOW SURE POISON

Physicians Say If He Did Not, He Will Be Out Within Two Weeks — Detectives Guard Him.

Philadelphia Pa., Jaun 13 -Harry K. Thaw who slashed his throat with a razor and cut an artery in his wrist in an attempt to commit suicide here yesterday, will be able to leave the hospital within two weeks unless he also swallowed poison tablets, according to statements of his physicians early today Several poison tablets which produce a slow death were found in his pockets and, if he took any of them, it may be 24 hours before symptoms manifest themselves, doctors say.

Detectives are on guard at Thaw's bedside and a warrant for his arrest is ready to be served the moment he is consideerd out of danger. Assistant District Attorney Black was expected here today, to make arrangements to have him taken to New York as soon as possible.

Thaw's attempt at self destruction was the climax to a search for him which began here on Tuesday He is wanted by the New York authorities on charges of kidnaping and assaulting Frederick Gump, jr, a 19-year-old boy of Kansas City, Mo

Dr Kirby said he found Thaw's mind still somewhat hazy this morning as though he were suffering from the after effects of a drug or liquor

Whether the family will contest the efforts of the New York authorities is not definitely known here A conference of members of the Thaw family and close friends will be held later.

According to private detectives in the employ of the Thaw family the Gump charges are based upon an attempt to blackmail.

COMMITTEE MAY COMPEL LAWSON TO REVEAL NAMES

When Democrats Join Protest of Republicans Who Heard Testimony House Resubmits Wood's Resolution.

MEMBERS BELIEVE REPORT

Author of the Probe Resolution Also Says He Has No Apology to Make For His Actions.

Washington, Jan 13—Taunted by republicans who charged they did not dare investigate further the charges of a "leak" to the stock market on President Wilson's peace note, the House democrats today abandoned their plans for closing the inquiry and recommitted the Wood resolution to the rules committee for further action without a vote

After Representative Cantrill of Kentucky, a democrat, dissenting from the views of his colleagues, had requested that the rules committee recall Thomas W Lawson, Chairman Henry asked unanimous consent that the Wood 'leak' resolution be recommitted and that the committee be directed to cite "Lawson for contempt if he continued to refuse to answer questions." The sudden turn in the situation precipitated a parliamentary tangle, with the prospect that Lawson would be recalled.

Still Believes in Leak.

Representative Wood, of Indiana, author of the resolution, addressed the House, declaring he had no apology to make for his action.

"I was compelled to introduce the resolutions," said Wood, "because everywhere both in and out of congress, there were reports that men in high places had profited on the stock market through advance information There still is a general belief throughout the country that there is something wrong somewhere That there was a leak every member of his House believes To deny it would be ridiculous. As to whether it was caused purposely or not there may be an honest difference of opinion among us."

Representative Campbell, republican, opposed the majority report The evidence had shown, he said, that F. A Connolly & Co., a local brokerage house, had a private wire to Wall street. Testimony had been given, he said that the "leak" came from Washington, over a private wire. A full investigation, he contended, would give opportunity for investigation of what wire the leak traveled over and he urged that should be done. The Connolly firm is the one in which R. W. Bolling, a brother of President Wilson's wife, is a partner

ALLIES DEMAND DEFINITE REPLY

Greek Answer to Ultimatum Fails to Fix Time and the Blockade Will Be Continued.

London, Jan 12—The reply of Greece to the entente ultimatum not being entirely satisfactory, the Greek government will be informed that, although its response is gratifying, as far as it goes, a more definite acquiescence is necessary. For example, the immediate release of Venizelist supporters was demanded. The Greek reply agreed to the release, but did not stipulate when it should take place.

There is no question of a 15 days' delay regarding the carrying out of the demands, as has been reported in some quarters and there is no intention to raise the blockade until the demands are conceded in full, it is declared.

VON TARNOW STARTS FOR U. S.

Berlin, Jan. 11, (via London), Jan. 12. —Count Aram Tarnowski von Tarnow, the new Austrian ambassador to the United States left Berlin this morning on the first stage of his journey to the United States. A safe passage has been guaranteed the ambassador by the entente allies.

URGES AMERICA TO JOIN IN WAR FOR CIVILIZATION

French Paper Asks What U. S. Waits For After Reading Reply of Entente Peace Terms Request.

TEUTONS ARE REASSURED

Now That Germans Know the Terms Will They Be Equally Frank, Press Asks—War to Finish, It Means.

Paris, Jan. 13 - Commenting on the reply of the entente allies to President Wilson's note, the radical organ Evenement, says

"It will confirm sentiment all over the world that our cause is as noble as is our will energetic"

The Excelsior says

"The note will strike the world with the clearness of its terms and the serenity of its accent Germany dodged the question The allies, on the other hand, replied frankly"

Gustave Herve's socialist newspaper, La Victoire, says

"Do the American people find our cause holy and that it is a war of liberation we are sustaining" Then, what are they waiting for to take up arms and march to the aid of right, civilization and humanity"

London, Jan 12.—The Globe says

"We are sure the German people will receive the note in a spirit of welcome and that now the (entente) allies objects are known, their longing for peace will be more than ever manifest The Germans now know that none of the allies' dreams of that extermination which they have been taught to expect What has the individual German to lose by acceptance of the allies' terms? Such reorganization will enable him in common with the rest of Europe to live in security and peace"

The Evening Standard says

"The note for the first time impresses on the public mind the true nature of the allies' task After all, the main obstacle to peace at this moment is the impossibility of reaching an agreement with undefeated Germany, for the allies' avowed terms cannot possibly be accepted by the enemy so long as he is able to resist The terms imply defeat of long cherished ambitions which can only be accepted at the point of the sword"

The Manchester Guardian says the reply of the allies to President Wilson is a boldly conceived statement of the position of the allies which goes a long way towards satisfying President Wilson's request for specific information as to the objects for which they are persisting in the war. In this respect, the Guardian says, the note is conceived in a wholly different spirit from Germany's reply. It believes the reference to the right of all peoples, small as well as great, to security for free economic development refers especially to "the vital need of Russia for free use of the passage to the Mediterranean through the Dardanelles as well as the corresponding need of Serbia and Montenegro of free access to the Adriatic"

This newspaper sees the final break up of the Ottoman empire in the demand for expulsion of the Turks from Europe, and asks

"Would Americans, who have watched with horror the massacres of which the Turk has been guilty, think that would be a misfortune to the world?"

MUST VANQUISH GERMANY.

Paris, Jan. 12—The morning papers are unanimous in their approval of the reply of the allies to President Wilson's note, the only difference being in the terms of expression. Alfred Capus, editor of the Figaro, says

"The principal value of the note is the clear and solemn declaration of the allies as to their objects in pursuing the war. Either they will be fully attained or Germany will be a continued menace to Europe, and on the first opportunity will again turn it into a field of carnage. Our enemies are now in possession of our true aims. They can compare them with their own and deduce therefrom the degree of our resistance and our implacable resolve to vanquish them"

Note a New Charter.

"We have spoken for the world," says the Petit Parisien. "President Wilson, whose fine sense of justice is known, cannot fail to be struck by our eagerness to meet his views. The special note addressed to him by Belgium, so dignified and so calm, will confirm the judgment which his conscience has already pronounced. It is now plainly shown the entente has nothing to hide. Will our adversaries be equally as frank."

The Matin calls the note a new charter whereby the allies seek to create a stable and definite regime under which people, great and small, can prosper in peace.

HARD PRESSED, CONFIDENT.

London, Jan. 12.—The Morning Post in an editorial on the Guild Hall meeting and the entente reply to President Wilson say they show that Great Britain is beginning the new year in the right spirit, that of a warrior hard pressed, yet confident.

The Daily Graphic, referring to the restitution of territory as mentioned in the entente reply, says that this means the restoration of Alsace-Lorraine to France and of Trentino and Trieste to Italy, the constitution of the Slavonic provinces of Austria into a separate state, the transference of Transylvania from Hungary to Rumania, the restoration of the ancient kingdom of Bohemia, the creation of a united Poland under a Russian protectorate and in addition to the expulsion of the Turks from Europe, the liberation of the Armenians, Arabs and Syrians from Turkish rule.

Should Please United States.

The Times believes that the entente allies' reply to President Wilson must command the assent and approbation of the great nation across the Atlantic who have inherited, assimilated and developed the best principles and traditions of western civilization.

The Daily Telegraph contends that the entente allies' reply is in complete contrast with Germany's, differing from it fundamentally and gravely to the latter's disadvantage. It says that the German answer contained no hint of terms, as suggested by President Wilson, and was nothing less than a refusal to entertain the American suggestion, while the allies' response accepts President Wilson's suggestion and acts upon it.

BOLD, BAD ROBBER STOLE COED'S STOCKINGS

Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 12.—Screams of girls of the Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority house, 1701 L street, at midnight, frightened away a robber who had reached into a downstairs bedroom window. The man escaped with $5 and a pair of silk stockings belonging to Edith Martin of Sidney.

PORK, NOT P. O. CLERKS, GETS MONEY—KENYON

Iowa Senator Replies to Pay Raise Petitions From U. S. Employes.

Washington, D C, Jan 13 - In response to petitions and letters from federal employes of all kinds in Iowa including postal clerks, rural route carriers and the like for higher salaries, Senator Kenyon has sent out a letter saying there is little money to give poorly paid employes, because congress, under a democratic regime, is lavishing too much on pork through river and harbor bills and otherwise

SUB MENACE INCREASED; TAXES BRITAIN'S INDUSTRY

London, Jan. 12.—"The submarine menace to the merchant ships is far greater now than any prior time, and it requires all of our energy to combat it," says Admiral Sir John R. Jellicoe, first sea lord, in a speech at a luncheon given in his honor in London today.

Admiral Jellicoe said the menace must and would be dealt with. Of that he was confident, but the British would have to make good their inevitable losses, and in order to do so were dependent upon the ship building industry of the country, to which he appealed to put forth its best efforts continuously and ungrudgingly to maintain the strength of the mercantile marine.

Referring to Germany's boasts concerning occasions when the German fleet searched the North sea for the British admiral, Jellicoe said:

"Our enemies on only one occasion have ventured sufficiently far with their main fleet to give us an opportunity of engaging them. No vessels, neutral or British, have sighted the German fleet far from its ports on other occasions."

"The approximate number of vessels of all classes comprising the British navy today is nearly 4,000. There is no part of the world where the navy has not duties and responsibilities in connection with this war."

ANARCHISTS PLAN DEATH OF JOHNSON

Letters Seized In Berkman's Office Reveal Plot to Destroy Government In California, Cunha Says.

TO "BLOW UP" THE STATE

District Attorney Reveals Contents of Papers In Plea That He Be Given Access to Others.

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 12—Anarchist plots to assassinate Gov. Hiram W. Johnson, United State senator elect from California were revealed in letters seized in the office of Alexander Berkman several weeks ago, Dist. Atty. Edward A. Cunha told Judge Franklin A Griffin, in the Mooney murder trial today

"I found evidence in those letters," Cunha declared, to prove that Berkman and others conspired to destroy government, blow up California and kill Governor Johnson."

He was pleading with Griffin not to permit the defense in the Mooney case to have access to letters which the court has empounded.

SHELLS WORTH FOUR MILLIONS DESTROYED

Half Million Shells For Russian Government Destroyed By Fire and Explosions.

New York, Jan. 13.—The 80-acre ammunition plant of the Canadian Car & Foundry company, near Kingsland, N. J., is a scarred and blackened ruin today, swept by flames and plowed by bursting shells. The fire that started late yesterday still smoldered in spots, but the firemen who stood at a safe distance last night, watching the explosion of 500,000 three and six-inch shells, closed in on the ruins cautiously. There have been no official reports of loss of life and if all of the 1,400 employes of the plants escaped, their safety is due, possibly, to the fact that a short time intervened between the discovery of the fire and the moment when the flames reached the stored ammunition. The loss, estimated at more than $4,000,000, is accounted for almost entirely by the destruction of shells which the company loads at this plant for the Russian government

Investigation today disclosed nothing to indicate that the origin was other than accidental, it was announced. Further inquiry is to be made and it is understood that the Russian commission agents for the purchase and delivery of approximately 1,500,000 shells awaiting shipment from the plant to Europe, will participate in this inquiry.

DRASTIC PROHIBITORY BILLS ARE PROPOSED

Revenue Stamps on All Liquors, and Pen Sentence For Bootleggers, Is Bill.

Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 12.—The first prohibitory law to show up was introduced in the senate by Bushee, of Kimball, today. The principal feature of it is the requirement that revenue stamps must be used on all booze consumed in the state. No restriction is placed on the amount that may be ordered for domestic use, but a second conviction for bootlegging is made a penitentiary offense.

Other new bills provide a four-year term for county officers, the right of injured persons to elect to take under the compensation law or sue at law and the revocation of licenses to convicted speeders.

Both houses paid tribute to the memory of Colonel Cody by appointing three members, who, with the governor, will represent the state at the funeral in Denver Sunday. A joint committee was formed also to investigate the car shortage.

Attack at Darkest Hour Preceded by Week's Fire

With the British Armies in France, Jan 13. Through rain, mist, fog and deep mud the British army is continuing day by day to pound the German line. Although there has been no spectacular action recently, daily and nightly trench raids and the drumming of the artillery have continued. These operations have yielded an inflow of prisoners and have kept the casualty lists growing. According to the stories told by the prisoners, the British tactics have harassed the German troops almost beyond endurance.

The last week has witnessed some typical so called minor operations, culminating with an attack before dawn today north of Beaumont-Hamel. This action brought the total of prisoners taken in the area in the last three days to 300 and placed in British hands some important sections of trenches. On Tuesday night the British attacked a desired sector of the German lines which was taken with 140 prisoners.

A Week's Bombardment.

The operations this morning drove the Germans from a position which they held for some time and from which they could observe part of the British line. The attack was preceded by the usual artillery preparation, which, as a matter of fact, had been going on for nearly a week but had grown particularly severe in the last 48 hours

Just before dawn the British "went over." Ahead of them, in the darkest hour before the sun rose, was the fiery curtain of shells from the guns far in the rear. The sudden stretch of No Man's Land over which they plodded was lighted by the glare of the exploding shells. As the barrage crept forward the men followed it so closely that the spectator momentarily expected them to be smashed by the fire from their own guns.

Red rockets from German trenches flashed signals for aid to the defending guns in the rear, but the counter barrage failed to check the advance. The German gunnery in this instance was described by the attacking officers as weak and erratic.

Prisoners Exhausted.

The British soldiers encountered little resistance when they entered the shell torn trenches. The Germans had taken refuge from the terrible shell fire in the dug outs and communicating trenches. The prisoners taken in this engagement had been in the front line for a long while and appeared very much dejected. As soon as the captured trenches had been cleared of the last hostile fighter, squads of engineers were sent in to consolidate and repair the new positions and before night the regular booming of the big guns told that the battle had once more settled down into its customary routine.

WILL EUROPE LEGALIZE POLYGAMY?

The enormous slaughter of men has started the sociologists to debating the question of whether or not, at the close of hostilities, Europe will be forced to legalize polygamy or resort to some other such expedient to provide mates for its millions of unmarried women.

Although perhaps not generally known, precisely such a condition was faced in Europe at the end of the Thirty Year war, and it was met by legalizing polygamy until a relative balance of the sexes was again established, when the laws were repealed

It is estimated that should the war continue for two years longer there will be in the countries involved not less than twelve million females in excess of males. Hence it can be plainly seen that the problem confronting those countries is serious indeed.

[illegible] material losses which [illegible] cost [illegible] or commerce, is [illegible] and serious check to civilization. Possibly no other condition would so retard the march of progress as a return, either by choice or necessity, to this degrading practice

The twentieth century mind revolts at the idea of polygamy Not only is this true of Americans, but of Europeans as well This being true, what effect would it have upon the people should such a practice be revived?

To a race familiar with and accustomed to the practise it may appear justifiable and right. But to a people who for centuries have been taught to regard it as contrary to the laws of nature the effect is certain to be demoralizing to character. Even those who would be constrained to practise polygamy would by force of their previous training be compelled to regard themselves as living in adultery.

How truly should every American thank his God that our land has been spared the horrors that face our cousins across the water, and how firmly each should determine that, come what may, we will never be dragged into the conflict and participate in that slaughter except in actual defense of our own shores.

America today is the white hope of civilization. The destiny of the race lies in the American hand to shape as it will. That we may be true to our highest ideals is the earnest prayer of every intelligent soul within our borders.

Polygamy could never be considered in this country.

WHY RURAL LIFE IS DULL

Rather, we should have said, why SOME rural life is dull. Not all rural communities are dull. Many are just teeming with social life and interest.

Do you realize why some communities are lacking in social life and "snap?" Simply because you, yourself, are deficient in these qualities. And your neighbors are very likely in the same condition.

Suppose you wake up and take an interest in matters that tend to the betterment of the social side of your community, especially of your immediate neighborhood. Soon your neighbor will come to life and join you. Then others will come trooping along, and you will have the ball rolling and it will surprise yuo how rapidly everybody will step into line and march to the tune of greater life and happiness.

Many communities think that if they have their farmers' meeting, preaching occasionally, and prayermeeting once a week, they have fulfilled the social laws. But not so. To be content with these is like living on a heavy diet of corn bread and meat. The human animal is a fun-loving creature by nature, and with his work he must mix a reasonable amount of play if he is to retain his mental and physical faculties unimpaired,

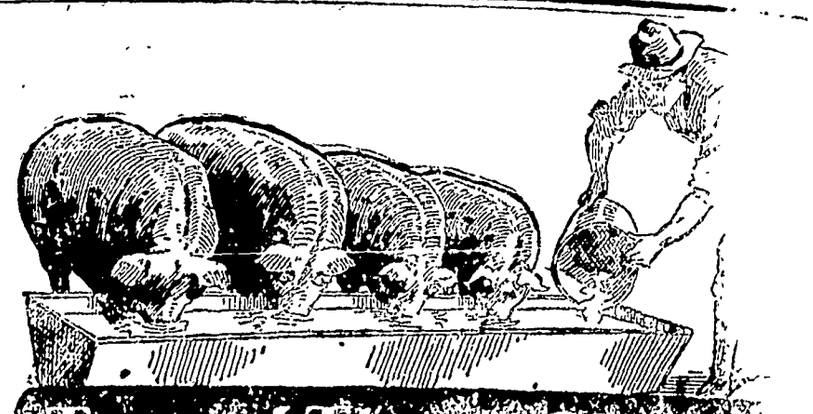
If your community has not a good social club, organize one. Have singings and debates, musicals and concerts, atheletic sports and other healthy forms of amusement. Put the young people of the community to work in the line of entertainments. You will be surprised at the amount of really good talent that will come to the front.

But above all things, take an active interest in these affairs one. You may be the very person who in time will develop the "snap" that breeds success.

Community life is just what the people of the community make it, and YOU are one of the people.

Do your part before asking others to do theirs.

Have you ever wondered what the result would be if all of the people of this town and community thought and said nothing but good of each other for thirty or sixty days? Think! It would work a revolution in both mind and body. People who are constantly nagging would have lost the habit. The best that is in each one would have unconsciously forced its way to the fore, and nobility of character would of made rapid strides toward supplanting the ignoble and vicious in man and womankind. Our town might not be a garden of Eden, but it would come nearer to it than any other spot on earth. And it wouldn't cost us a penny.



Two Of These Shoats Gained 36 Lbs. More Than The Other Two in 90 Days

Listen to a fellow Indiana farmer—H. Vandolah, of English, down in Crawford County, says to you:

"I used Avalon Farms' HOG-TONE on two shoats taken from the sow in good shape. Fed them with two others of the same litter. Gave each the same amount of feed.

"I got 36 pounds more gain on the two treated with HOG-TONE over the two not treated. In 90 days' feeding! And got the nicest meat I ever saw on the treated ones. Could tell the difference at sight on the pole or cut up. Did not find a worm, neither stomach nor kidney worm in the treated ones."

And—figured roughly—treating those two shoats for 90 days cost less than 25 cents! For you can treat one hog from the time it is 6 weeks young until it is 8 months old and keep it free—absolutely and entirely free—from worms with HOG-TONE for 20 cents. That means 31 weeks' (217 days') worm protection at a total expense of two dimes. Figure it out for yourself.

Then come in and talk to us about this great, new vermifuge and hog conditioner that is death to all worms—worms in the stomach, bowels, lungs, liver, kidneys.

A WONDROUS LAND

The Yellowstone Region as James Bridger Saw It.

AND HE WAS A TRUTHFUL MAN

His Adventure With an Elk at the Famous Obsidian Cliff and the Effect of a Ride Through Alum Creek—Story of the Mountain That Was Cursed.

As a teller of tales Munchausen had a worthy rival in James Bridger, the celebrated hunter, trader and guide, whose name and career are part of the pioneer history of the west. Bridger was thoroughly familiar with the region now comprised in the Yellowstone park as far back as 1830.

In his book, "The Yellowstone Park," the author, Hiram Martin Chittenden, brigadier general United States army, retired, sets down some of the yarns Bridger told about that land of wonders. Many of the Yellowstone country tales ascribed to Bridger have survived to this day, probably because they have never been capped. The first story General Chittenden tells relates to the celebrated Obsidian cliff, a mass of black volcanic glass with which all the tourists are familiar. Its discovery by Bridger was the result of a hunting trip, and it happened in this way:

"Coming one day in sight of a magnificent elk, he took careful aim at the unsuspecting animal and fired. To his amazement the elk not only was not wounded, but seemed not to have heard the noise of the rifle. Bridger drew considerably nearer and gave the elk the benefit of his most deliberate aim, but with the same result as before. A third and fourth effort met with similar fate. Utterly exasperated, he seized his rifle by the barrel, resolved to use it as a club, since it had failed as a firearm. Rushing madly toward the elk, he suddenly crashed into an immovable vertical wall which proved to be a mountain of perfectly transparent glass, on the farther side of which, still in peaceful security, the elk was quietly grazing.

"Stranger still, the mountain was not only of pure glass, but was a perfect telescope lens, and, whereas the elk seemed but a few yards off, it was in reality twenty-five miles away."

Another of Bridger's discoveries was an ice cold spring near the summit of a lofty mountain, the water from which flowed down over a long, smooth slope, where it acquired such velocity that it was boiling hot when it reached the bottom. This, a later investigator of the Firehole river found, was a case in which a hot spring discharged into the river bed.

Alum creek, a tributary of the Yellowstone, received its name from an accidental discovery by Bridger. One day he forded the creek and rode out several miles and back. He noticed that the return journey was only a small fraction of the distance going and that his horse's feet had shrunk to mere points which sank into the solid ground so that the animal could scarcely hobble along. Seeking the cause, he found it to be in the astringent qualities of the water, which was saturated with alum to such an extent that it had power to pucker distance itself.

Bridger also found a fine place to fish: "Somewhere along the shore an immense boiling spring discharges its overflow directly into the lake. The specific gravity of the water is less than that of the lake, owing to the expansive action of heat, and it floats in a stratum of three or four feet thick upon the cold water underneath. When Bridger was in need of fish it was to this place that he went. Through the hot upper stratum he let fall his bait to the subjacent habitable zone and, having hooked his victim, cooked him on the way out!"

The visitor to the region of petrifications in the northeast corner of the park and to various points in the hot springs districts will have no difficulty in discovering the base material out of which Bridger contrived the following picturesque yarn:

"A mountain in the park was once cursed by a great medicine man of the Crow nation. Everything on the mountain at the time of this dire event became instantly petrified and has remained so ever since. All forms of life are standing about in stone where they were suddenly caught by the petrifying influences, even as the inhabitants of ancient Pompeii were surprised by the ashes of Vesuvius. Sagebrush, grass, prairie fowls, antelopes, elks and bears may there be seen as perfect as in actual life. Dashing torrents and the spray mist from them stand forth in arrested motion as if carved from rock by a sculptor's chisel. Even flowers are blooming in colors of crystal, and birds soar with wings spread in motionless flight, while the air floats with music and perfumes silliceous, and the sun and moon shine with petrified light!" It is denied, though, that Bridger was responsible for the story that even the laws of gravitation were petrified in the region.

Uncontrollable Curiosity.

"I don't see how it is that Mrs. Jerwag has so many friends. She gossips terribly."

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne. "Everybody seems willing to take a chance on being talked about for the sake of hearing what she says about the others."—Washington Star.

"Why, I don't know. Couldn't we get along without announcements? You can explain to your intimate friends, and the others won't ever remember the name after a few months—we'll not be likely to meet many of them right away. I'll write to my chief and tell him informally leaving out the date entirely. He won't miss it. If we have announcements at all we needn't send him one. He wouldn't be likely ever to see one any other way, or to notice the date. I think we can manage that matter. We'll talk it over with your—" he hesitated and then smiling tenderly added, "we'll talk it over with mother. How good it sounds to say that. I never knew my mother you know."

Celia nestled her hands in his and murmured "Oh, I am so happy—so happy! But I don't understand how you got a wedding trip without telling your chief about our marriage."

Easy as anything. He asked me if I would mind running across the water to attend to a matter for the service and tend to a matter for the service and said I might have extra time while there for a vacation. He never suspects that vacation is to be used as a wedding trip. I'll write him, or phone him the night we leave New York. I may have to stay in the city two or three days to get this Holman matter settled, and then we can be off. In the meantime you can spend the time reconciling your mother to her new son. Do you think we'll have a very hard time explaining matters to her?"

"Not a bit," said Celia, gaily. "She never did like George. It was the only thing we ever disagreed about, my marrying him. She suspected all the time I wasn't happy and couldn't understand why I insisted on marrying him when I hadn't seen him for 10 years. She begged me to wait until he had been back in the country for a year or two, but he would not hear to such a thing and threatened to carry out his worst at once."

Gordon's heart suddenly contracted with righteous wrath over the cowardliness of the man who sought to gain his own ends by intimidating a woman, and this woman so dear, so beautiful, so lovely in her nature. It seemed the man's heart must indeed be black to have done what he did. He mentally resolved to search him out and bring him to justice as soon as he reached New York. It puzzled him to understand how easily he seemed to have abandoned his purpose. Perhaps after all he was more of a coward than they thought and had not dared to remain in the country when he found that Celia had braved his wrath and married another man. He would find out about him and set the girl's heart at rest just as soon as possible, that any embarrassment at some future time might be avoided. Gordon stooped and kissed his wife again, a caress that seemed to promise all reparation for the past.

But it suddenly occurred to the two that lovers did not wait for lovers long loitering, and with one accord they went to work. Celia of course had very little preparation to make. Her trunk was probably in Chicago and would need to be wired for. Gordon attended to that the first thing, looking up the number of the check and ordering it back to New York by telegraph. Turning from the telephone he rang for the man and asked Celia to give the order for lunch while he got together some things that he must take with him. A stay of several weeks would necessitate a little more baggage than he had taken to New York.

He went into the bedroom and began pulling out things to pack, but when Celia turned from giving her directions she found him standing in the bedroom doorway with an old fashioned velvet jewel case in his hand which he had just taken from the little safe in his room. His face wore a wonderful tender light as if he had just discovered something precious.

"Dear," he said, "I wonder if you will care for these. They were mother's. Perhaps this ring will do until I can buy you a new one. See if it will fit you. It was my mother's."

He held out a ring containing a diamond of singular purity and brilliance in quaint old fashioned setting.

Celia put out her hand with its wedding ring, the ring that he had put upon her finger at the altar, and he slipped the other jeweled one above it. It fitted perfectly.

"It is a beauty," breathed Celia, holding out her hand to admire it, "and I would far rather have it than a new one. Your dear little mother!"

"There's not much else here but a little string of pearls and a pin or two. I have always kept them near me. Somehow they seemed like a link between me and mother. I was keeping them for—" he hesitated and then giving her a rare smile he finished: "I was keeping them for you."

Her answering look was eloquent, and needed no words which was well, for Henry appeared at that moment to serve luncheon and remind his master that his train left in a little over two hours. There was no further time for sentiment.

And yet, these two, it seemed, could not be practical that day. They idled over their luncheon and dawdled over their packing, stopping to look at this and that picture or bit of bric-a-brac that Gordon had picked up in some of his travels, and Henry finally had to take things in his own hands, pack them off and send their baggage after them. Henry was a capable man and rejoiced to see the devotion of his master and his new mistress, but he had a practical head and knew where his part came in.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The journey back to New York seemed all too brief for the two whose lives had just been blended so unexpectedly, and every mile was filled with a new and sweet discovery of delight in one another, and then, when they reached the city they rushed in on Mrs. Hathaway and the eager young Jeff like two children who had so much to tell they did not know where to begin.

Mrs. Hathaway settled the matter by insisting on their going to dinner immediately and leaving all explanations until afterward, and, with the servants present, of course there was little that could be said about the matter that each one had most at heart. But there was a spirit of deep happiness in the atmosphere and one couldn't possibly entertain any fears under the influence of the radiant smiles that passed between mother and daughter, husband and wife, brother and sister.

As soon as the meal was concluded the mother led them to her private sitting room, and, closing the door, she stood facing them all as half breathless with the excitement of the moment they stood in a row before her.

"My three dear children!" she murmured. Gordon's eyes lit with joy and his heart thrilled with the wonder of it all. Then the mother stepped up to him and, placing her hand on his arm, led him over to the couch and made him sit beside her, while the brother and sister sat down together close by.

"Now, Cyril, my new son," said she, deliberately, her eyes resting approvingly upon his face, "you may tell your story. I see my girl has lost both head and heart to you and I doubt if she could tell it connectedly."

And while Celia and Jeff were laughing at this, Gordon set about his task of winning a mother, and incidentally an eager eyed young brother who was more than half committed to his cause already.

Celia watched proudly as her handsome husband took out his credentials and began his explanation.

"First, I must tell you who I am, and these papers will do it better than I could. Will you look at them, please?"

He handed her a few letters and papers.

"These papers on the top show the rank and position that my father and grandfather held with the government and in the army. This is a letter from the president to my father congratulating him on his approaching marriage with my mother. That paper contains my mother's family tree, and the letters with it will give you an idea of the honor in which my mother's family was held in Washington and in Virginia, her old home. I know these matters are not of much moment, and say nothing whatever about what I am myself, but they are things you would have been likely to know about my family if you had known me all my life, and at least they will tell you that my family was respectable."

Mrs. Hathaway was examining the papers, and suddenly looked up, exclaiming: "My dear! My father knew your grandfather. I think I saw him once when he came to our home in New York. It was years ago and I was a young girl, but I remember he was a fine looking man with keen dark eyes, and a heavy head of iron gray hair."

She looked at Gordon keenly.

"I wonder if your eyes are not like his. It was long ago, of course."

"They used to say I looked like him. I do not remember him. He died when I was very young."

The mother looked up with a pleasant smile.

"Now tell me about yourself," she said and laid a gentle hand on his.

Gordon looked down, an embarrassed flush spreading over his face.

"There's nothing great to tell," he said. "I've always tried to live a straight, true life and I've never been in love with any girl before," he flashed a wonderful, blinding smile upon Celia.

"I was left alone in the world when quite young and have lived around in boarding schools and college. I'm a graduate of Harvard and I've traveled a little. There was some money left from my father's estate, not much. I'm not rich. I'm a secret service man, and I love my work. I get a good salary and was this morning promoted to the position next in rank to my chief, so that now I shall have still more money. I shall be able to make your daughter comfortable and give her some of the luxuries if not all, to which she has been accustomed."

"My dear boy, that part is not what I am anxious about—" interrupted the mother.

"I know," said Gordon, "but it is a detail you have a right to be told. I understand that you care far more what I am than how much money I can make, and I promise you I am going to try to be all that you would want your daughter's husband to be. Perhaps the best thing I can say for myself is that I love her better than my life, and I mean to make her happiness the dearest thing in life to me."

The mother's look of deep understanding answered him more eloquently than words could have done, and after a moment she spoke again.

"But I do not understand how you could have known one another and I never have heard of you. Celia is not good at keeping things from her mother, though the last three months she has had a sadness that I could not fathom, and was forced to lay to her natural dread of leaving home. She seemed so insistent upon having this marriage just as George planned it—and I was so afraid she would regret not waiting. How could you have known one another all this time and she never talked to me about it, and why did George Hayne have any part whatever in it if you two loved one another? Just how long have you known each other, anyway? Did it begin when you visited in Washington last spring, Celia?"

With dancing eyes Celia shook her head.

"No, mamma. If I had met him then I'm sure George Hayne would never have had anything to do with the matter, for Cyril would have known how to help me out of my difficulty."

"I shall have to tell you the whole story from my standpoint, and from the beginning," said Gordon, dreading now that the crisis was upon him, what the outcome would be. "I have wanted you to know who and what I was before you knew the story, that you might judge me as kindly as possible, and know that however I may have been to blame in the matter it was through no intention of mine. My story may sound rather impossible. I know it will seem improbable, but it is nevertheless true, everything that I have to tell. May I hope to be believed?"

"I think you may," answered the mother searching his face anxiously. "Those eyes of yours are not lying eyes."

"Thank you," he said simply, and then gathering all his courage he plunged into his story.

Mrs. Hathaway was watching him with searching interest. Jeff had drawn his chair up close and could scarcely restrain his excitement, and when Gordon told of his commission he burst forth explosively:

"Gee! But that was a great stunt! I'd have liked to have been along with you! You must be simply great to be trusted with a thing like that!"

But his mother gently reproved him: "Hush, my son, let us hear the story."

Celia sat quietly, watching her husband with pride, two bright spots of color on her cheeks, and her hands clasping each other tightly. She was hearing many details now that were new to her. Once more, when Gordon mentioned the dinner at Holman's Jeff interrupted with:

"Holman! Holman! Not J. P.? Why, of course—we know him! Celia was one of his daughter's bridesmaids last spring! The old lynx! I always thought he was crooked! People hint a lot of things about him—"

"Jeff, dear, let us hear the story," again insisted his mother, and the story continued.

Gordon had been looking down as he talked. He dreaded to see their faces as the truth should dawn upon them, but when he had told all he lifted honest eyes to the white faced mother and pleaded with her.

"Indeed, indeed, I hope you will believe me, that not until they laid your daughter's hand in mine did I know that I was supposed to be the bridegroom. I thought all the time her brother was the bridegroom. If I had not been so distraught, and trying so hard to think how to escape, I suppose I would have noticed that I was standing next to her, and that everything was peculiar about the whole matter, but I didn't. And then when I suddenly knew that she and I were being married, what should I have done? Do you think I ought to have stopped the ceremony then and there and made a scene before all those people? What was the right thing to do? Suppose my commission had been entirely out of the question, and I had had no duty toward the government to keep entirely quiet about myself, do you think I ought to have made a scene? Would you have wanted me to for your daughter's sake? Tell me, please," he insisted, gently.

And while she hesitated he added:

"I did some pretty hard thinking during that first quarter of a second that I realized what was happening, and I tell you honestly I didn't know what was the right thing to do. It seemed awful for her sake to make a scene, and, to tell you the truth, I worshiped her from the moment my eyes rested upon her. There was something sad and appealing as she looked at me that seemed to pledge my very life to save her from trouble. Tell me, do you think I ought to have stopped the ceremony then at the first moment of my realization that I was being married?"

The mother's face had softened as she watched him and listened to his tender words about Celia, and now she answered gently:

"I am not sure—perhaps not! It was a very grave question to face. I don't know that I can blame you for doing nothing. It would have been terrible for her and us and everybody and have made it all so public. Oh, I think you did right not to do anything publicly—perhaps—and yet—it is terrible to me to think you have been forced to marry my daughter in that way."

"Please don't say forced, mother," said Gordon laying both hands earnestly upon hers and looking into her eyes, "I tell you one thing that held me back from doing anything was that I so earnestly desired that what I was passing through might be real and lasting. I have never seen one like her before. I know that if the mistake had been righted and she had passed out of my life I should never have felt the same again. I am glad, glad with all my heart that she is mine, and—mother!—I think she is glad, too!"

The mother turned toward her daughter, and Celia with starry eyes came and knelt before them, and laid her hands in the hands of her husband, saying with ringing voice:

Yes, dear little mother, I am gladder than I ever was before in my life."

And kneeling thus, with her husband's arm about her, her face against his shoulder, and both her hands clasped in his, she told her mother about the tortures that George Hayne had put her through, until the mother turned white with horror at what her beloved and cherished child had been enduring, and the brother got up and stormed across the floor, vowing vengeance on the luckless head of poor George Hayne.

Then after the mother had given her blessing to the two, and Jeff had added an original one of his own, there was the whole story of the eventful wedding trip to tell, which they told by solos and choruses until the hour grew alarmingly late and the mother suddenly sent them all off to bed.

The next few days were both busy and happy ones for the two. They went to the hospital and gladdened the life of the little newsboy with fruit and toys and many promises; and they brought home a happy white dog from his boarding place, whom Jeff adopted as his own. Gordon had a trying hour or two at court with his one time host, the scoundrel who had stolen the cipher message, and the thick set man glared at him from a cell window as he passed along the corridor of the prison whither he had gone in search of George Hayne.

Gordon in his search for the lost bridegroom, whom for many reasons he desired to find as soon as possible, had asked the help of one of the men at work on the Holman case, in searching for a certain George Hayne who needed very much to be brought to justice.

"Oh, you won't have to search for him," declared the man with a smile. "He's safely landed in prison three days ago. He was caught as neatly as rolling off a log by the son of the man whose name he forged several years ago. It was trust money of a big corporation and the man died in his place in a prison cell, but the son means to see the real culprit punished."

And so Gordon, in the capacity of Celia's lawyer, went to the prison to talk with George Hayne, and that miserable man found no excuse for his sins when the searching talk was over. Gordon did not let the man know who he was, and merely made it understood that Celia was married, and that if he attempted to make her any further trouble the whole thing would be exposed and he would have to answer to a grave charge of blackmail.

The days passed rapidly, and at last the New York matter for which Gordon's presence was needed was finished, and he was free to sail away with his bride. On the morning of their departure Gordon's voice rang out over the miles of telephone wires to his old chief in Washington: "I am married and am just starting on my wedding trip. Don't you want to congratulate me?" And the old chief's gruff voice sounded back:

"Good work, old man! Congratulations for you both. She may or may not be the best girl in all the world; I haven't had a chance to see yet; but she's a lucky girl, for she's got the best man I know. Tell her that for me! Bless you both! I'm glad she's going with you. It won't be so lonesome."

Gordon gave her the message that afternoon as they sailed straight into the sunshine of a new and beautiful life together.

"Dear," he said, as he arranged her steamer rug more comfortably about her, "has it occurred to you that you are probably the only bride who ever married the best man at her wedding?"

Celia smiled appreciatively, and after a minute replied mischievously:

"I suppose every bride thinks her husband is the best man."

MEXICAN EXPERIENCE HAS BETTERED ARMY

U. S. Regulars With Pershing Shoot Better Than Ever Before, Claim.

Field Headquarters American Expedition in Mexico, (by mail)—Extraordinary improvement in marksmanship is being noted in reports received at field headquarters. The regular life of the soldiers has steadied their nerves, and the clear air of the Mexican plateau region makes sighting easy. Another factor in the good showing is the steady drill the men have received in fire control, new methods of which are being tried by the cavalry with remarkable success.

Machine gun troops also are being drilled to use their arms to the best advantage. Recently several companies of the Sixteenth infantry were brought north from El Valle and demonstrations of fire control were given for the benefit of the officers stationed here. The machine gun work was under the direction of Capt. F. S. Bowen, assisted by Capt. W. C. Short.

Among the most interesting experiments now being conducted is that in pistol firing by a detachment of cavalry, chosen at random. A pistol board, which is conducting the work, has evolved a unique line of targets worked by ropes and pulleys, which fall flat when the cavalry charges over them. The attempt is being made to evolve a system of pistol firing while charging. At present the men are firing directly ahead while leaning forward in their saddles and holding their arms just ahead to the right of their mount's ears. Excellent results, it is said, have already been obtained.

When ammunition arrives, another interesting test will be made, that of determining how effectually the present three-inch field gun will demolish entanglements, trenches and bomb proofs. A line of fortifications has been constructed as nearly like those in Europe as possible. The artillery will be allowed to work on these under conditions that would obtain in actual war and the results of their fire will be noted.

WONDERS ACCOMPLISHED BY ITALIAN ENGINEERS

Headquarters of the Italian Army, (by mail).—The transportation romance of this 150-mile mountain front, set down in cold, hard figures, reads thus: Two thousand, four hundred and forty-eight miles of railroad rebuilt or repaired; 590 miles of new railroad built; 150 miles of air line cables stretched for the teleferica system, 30,000 miles of telephone wire put up, 10,000 new troop, hospital and freight buildings erected, 200 miles of narrow gauge railroad laid in or behind the trenches, 110 new bridges thrown across rivers and precipices to accommodate 2,040 miles of operating road.

The work is credited to 120 civil engineers of the government department of public works, aided by army engineers proper, likewise by 200,000 workmen, and 100,000 army mules, hitched to 50,000 wagons.

The foregoing is the first official record of the exact extent of the construction work on this front, carried on steadily for 18 months, despite enemy artillery, avalanche, snow falls, rains, floods, frost, lack of material, and all the other ills by which engineers are beset.

Ocean Floor Is to Be Explored.

From the Kansas City Star.

The land surface of the globe has been pretty thoroughly explored and mapped, but as yet we know little of that part of the earth forming the ocean floors. When it is realized that the Pacific ocean is larger in area than all the land surface of the world, and that there are a number of tracts in that one ocean larger than the United States that are entirely unfathomed by man one sees how much there is yet to do before the earth's land surface can be definitely charted. There is the great southern ocean, a vast belt of water around the earth, and south of that again the Antarctic ocean belting the earth, that have scarcely been sounded.

The ocean floor is going to be explored and mapped. At a recent meeting of the National Academy of Sciences in Washington, Prof. William M. Davis, Harvard university, proposed that this be began systematically with a survey of the Pacific that may take 20 years to finish, and his proposal met with unanimous approval.

It will be a tremendous undertaking, for the Pacific is 7,350 miles from north to south and 9,300 miles south to the Antarctic circle. It is 10,300 miles wide at its widest place, and, as Professor Davis pointed out, even in that northern part of the Pacific which has been explored there is a tract twice as large as the United States that has been crossed by only a single line of soundings at intervals of 250 miles wide.

The greatest known ocean depth is in the Pacific, off the island of Guam, where the water is six miles deep. No vegetation can grow there. There would be utter darkness except for the phosphorescent glow shed by the fishes that live there. No place has been found too deep for fishes and various forms of animal life; but they are not like many fishes one sees near the surface; they have grotesque shapes and they are always dead when brought up.

It will cost a great deal to chart the ocean floors, for it often takes 10 hours to reel up five or six miles of piano wire with sounding devices at the end. Man's inquisitiveness, his thirst for knowledge, will not stop short of finding out what is at the bottom of every section of the world's oceans.

How Money Gets Into Circulation.

The government's business is carried on in much the same way as an individual's. Taxes are paid to the government either with checks or cash, and the government's disbursements for expenses are by check or warrants, rarely by cash. Gold is put in circulation originally by the producer who takes it to the mint for coinage, or the importer who receives it from abroad. Gold certificates and silver certificates are paid out in exchange for gold and silver coin deposited in the treasury by individuals or banks. Bank notes are issued to banks that put up United States bonds as security. "Greenbacks" go into and out of the treasury in the ordinary transaction of business. The amount has not changed in nearly 50 years. Federal reserve banks and these institutions pay them out when they receive the equivalent in gold or other security. Small coins are generally paid out in exchange for large denominations.

Wrote Will on Paper Bag.

From the Detroit Journal.

Hastily penciled on the side of a torn paper bag, the will of the late George Klump, conveying an estate in land and money valued at $25,000, has been filed in probate court.

Klump was an old resident of Greenfield township, who was found dead July 30, last, in the cottage in which he lived alone on his farm. The will, dated the day preceding his death, is brief in form, but leaves all the testator's property to his friend, Arthur Fitzpatrick, of Detroit, and the latter's family. Julius Bonninghausen, also of Detroit, is named as administrator in so far as known.

OPPORTUNITIES THAT ARE MISSED

Why Wait? Why Not Go to Western Canada Now?

The writer has frequently heard the remark that "after the war we will go to Western Canada." It does not occur to those making the remark that if they wish to secure lands in Western Canada, whether by homestead or purchase, the best time to go is now. After the war the welcome will be just as hearty as ever, but the chances are that land values will increase and to-day homesteads are plentiful and cheap is reasonable in price. The only question about what the land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will do, what it will give under proper cultivation.

Farmers in Western Canada are paying for their land holdings with the proceeds of last year's crop. That this is no idle statement may be gleaned from the three following items which are picked out at random.

"In the spring of 1916 a half section of land was offered for sale at $17.50 per acre. There were 165 acres of summer-fallow, which, because the owner could not at the time find a buyer, were seeded to wheat. A yield of 40 bushels per acre, 4,200 bushels all told, grading No. 1, was obtained. The price the day the grain was sold (which was very early in the season before grain prices advanced to round about $2.00) was $1.00, which brought the handsome total of $6,720.00. Three hundred and twenty acres at $17.50 equals $5,440.00, so that a buyer by placing less than half of the whole under crop, would have made a profit of $1,280.00."—Robson Messenger, Robson, Sask.

"That the 'Indiana Boys' farm this year raised sufficient crop to pay for the land, all the machinery and all overhead expenses as well as make a handsome profit, is the information given by N. B. Davis, the manager. The wheat yield was over 22,000 bushels. Of twelve cars already sold nine graded No. 1, and Mr. Davis has sold over 2,000 bushels locally for seed at $2.00. Naturally, when he goes to Indiana he will be a big booster for Alberta."—Bassano Mail, Bassano, Alta.

"Oscar Castalor, who bought land at Blusson after the crop had been put in last spring, for $3,800.00 has threshed 3,000 bushels of wheat, which is worth at present prices about $7,500.00. He refused an offer of $5,000.00 for the land after the crop had been taken off."—Lethbridge Herald, Lethbridge, Alta.

Reports from the wheat fields are highly encouraging and show that the wheat crop of many farmers in Western Canada was highly satisfactory.

Coblenz, Sask.—W. A. Rose has threshed an average of 33 bushels per acre and 83 bushels of oats.

Gleichen, Alberta.—Up to date 237,812 bushels of grain have been received by local elevators, of which nearly 180,000 bushels were wheat. Seventy one cars of grain have already been shipped.

Stoop Creek, Sask.—James McRae has threshed 5,400 bushels of grain, 2,000 bushels of which were wheat grading No. 1 Northern. One field averaged 44 bushels per acre, and a large field of oats averaged 83 bushels.

If information as to the best location is required, it will be gladly furnished by any Canadian Government Agent, whose advertisement appears elsewhere.—Advertisement.

Unbreakable Windows.

Repeated coats of raw or boiled linseed oil apited to a newly meshed wire fabric will give a good substitute for window glass. The wire may be used for many purposes, and is especially good where glass might easily be broken. The fabric may be dipped in the oil instead of applying it with a brush.

FALLING HAIR MEANS DANDRUFF IS ACTIVE

Save Your Hair! Get a 25 Cent Bottle of Danderine Right Now—Also Stops Itching Scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf. There is nothing so destructive to hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its luster, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any store, and after the first application your hair will take on that life, luster and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance; an incomparable gloss and softness, but what will please you most will be after just a few weeks' use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp. Bonus System in Japan.

The highest-salaried man in Japan does not receive enough money in that form to pay for gasoline used by his automobile, for salaries of the managers of business corporations are insignificantly small, says the Japan Times. Salaries, however, are not the chief income of business men. Under the Japanese custom there is a liberal bonus system, and the bonus amounts to 300 or 400 times the monthly salary in some cases.

The Mitsui company is regarded as the biggest corporation in Japan and their directors are noted for their large incomes. Each director is said to receive in the form of a bonus about $100,000 a year, although his salary may be only $250 a month.

Carrying It Too Far.

Mr. Curran and Mr. McManus spent their Saturday half holiday in artistic pursuits. Among the objects examined was a new public building. The feature of this building that appealed most strongly to Mr. Curran was an inscription cut into a huge stone.

"MDCCCXCVIII," he read aloud. "What does them letters mane, Tim?"

"That," replied the cultured Mr. McManus, "stands for 1898."

"Oh," Mr. Curran replied. Then, after a thoughtful pause, he added:

"Don't you think, Tim, that they're overdoin' this spellin' reform a bit?"—New York Times.

BILIOUS, HEADACHY, SICK "CASCARETS"

Gently cleanse your liver and sluggish bowels while you sleep.

Get a 10-cent box.

Sick headache, biliousness, dizziness, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath—always trace them to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is reabsorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes constipation and that dull, throbbing, sick-ening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months. Adv.

Why a Cold Cup "Sweats."

Put ice cream into a cup and the cup and the air around it instantly become cold. Air consists in part of water, and when the air is cooled this water turns into water. As the center of coldness is the cup, a good deal of the air in the immediate vicinity deposits on its outside in the shape of water. But, as the air contains much more heat than the cup contains cold, the ice cream gradually melts.

AMERICANS TAKING TO SEA ONCE MORE

Number Sailing For Foreign Ports More Than Doubled Since War.

New York, (by mail)—There are approximately two and one-half times as many American sailors now shipping for foreign ports than at any time previous to the war, according to Dr. George S. Webster, secretary of the American Seamen's Friend society. He attributes this increase partly to the increased wages being given seamen and partly to the improved conditions under which they are working.

Dr. Webster says, "The past three years have marked an almost unbelievable increase in the number of Americans who are shipping as sailors. At our sailors' home on the North river water front, the men we had previously cared for were almost entirely British, Swedish and German. If an American born sailor should have mingled in with this company, he would have been more or less conspicuous. Today we frequently lodge American sailors and they are practically all men who had not seen service in the merchant marine prior to the outbreak of the war. It is a very fair estimate to say that fully two and one-half times as many Americans are now seafaring men as prior to the war. We can no longer say that the American is a 'land lubber.'

"We venture to predict at the American Seamen's Friend society that the proportion of the American born sailors to those of other nationalities will immensely increase after the war. In case there is a slight lapse in industrial activity, the seafaring life will doubtless be of attraction to many who have not heretofore considered it."

INDIA NOW ENJOYING GREATEST PROSPERITY

Simla, India, (by mail).—Travelers in India today constantly hear business men make the statement that never has India been so prosperous. Sir William Meyer, minister of finance, says:

"Economically India is more prosperous than she ever was before. According to western ideas she is still a very poor country, but she is advancing, as I can testify after a service of 35 years here. There has been great development in India's agricultural and industrial enterprises, and the government has just recently taken another step in the appointment of a strong commission to consider the possibilities of further industrial development.

Since 1900 the progress has been remarkable. Between 1900 and 1910 the number of cotton mills increased from 177 to 210 and the persons employed from 145,000 to 215,000. The production of yarn rose from 343,000,000 to 593,000,000 pounds, and of woven goods from 95,000,000 to 215,000,000 pounds. Jute mills increased in number from 36 to 60 and the persons employed from 110,000 to 204,000. Further, the percentage of manufactured goods imported into India as compared with the total imports has been steadily falling, while the percentage of manufactured good among the exports has been simultaneously rising. Agriculture, of course, is the main industry of the country, and during the 10 years under question the net area estimated to be under crops rose from 180,000,000 to 223,000,000 acres.

"We have suffered, naturally, in various directions from the war and at one time we were threatened with crises affecting the cultivators in respect of the jute and cotton industries. These have, however, been successfully surmounted and at present these industries are in a prosperous condition, and the cotton ryot in particular is getting very good prices for his produce."

As to how the additional wealth which has accrued to India was distributed, Sir William said:

"A good deal of money is hoarded, since the traditions which grew up during many generations of insecure government are not easily shaken, but deposits in banks have increased considerably. There has been a very considerable increase in the standard of comfort of the people, and the rise in prices, which has occurred in India as well as in western countries, has materially benefited her agricultural and industrial population, though it has pressed hardly on members of the professional middle classes. There are also a certain number of capitalists—mill owners, jute manufacturers and the like—who make in some years very large profits. The fact remains, however, that taking India as a whole, she is still very poor as compared with western standards."

Youngest Airman Is 17.

From the Minneapolis Journal.

If Walter Pullock, a high school sophomore of last year, had been like his classmates and stuck to his lessons, he would have been a junior this year. But he wasn't exactly like them, and he rather gave the lessons 'the go by.' So, today, he is only the youngest licensed aviator in America. He is 17 years old.

The only books he ever liked to read were aviation books. He built models when he was 12 years old. When he was 16 years old he had a real aeroplane nearly built, and his father, not wishing to have him try a flight in that, told him he could go to an aviation school at Newport News, Va. There he watched flights, studied the machines, and finally got his first lesson. In eight hours and six minutes he was ready for the test for applicants for licenses from the Aero club of America. He made three flights and brought his machine to a standstill within 150 feet of a certain mark, as demanded. After earning the license, he took the machine for a flight of three hours and 14 minutes. In this flight he went up a mile and a quarter in the air. The minimum height required by the Aero club test was 329 feet.

The tuition down at Newport News, Bullock said, is paid by the minute. For every minute that he flew it cost him $1. He flew $686 worth, he said.

Wedding Music Expensive.

From the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Charles Galloway, organist, was awarded a verdict of $53.58 by a jury in Circuit Judge Jones' court for playing at the wedding of Miss Marjorie Bell, daughter of Nicholas M. Bell, to R. E. Hinricks. Bell declared that he would carry the case to the St. Louis court of appeals.

Bell and his daughter testified that Galloway had agreed to play at the wedding and at the rehearsal for $25. Mrs. Hinricks sent the organist a check for $25, which was returned to her by Galloway, who demanded $50 for his services.

The Man Who Forgot

A NOVEL

By JAMES HAY, JR.

GARDEN CITY NEW YORK
DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & COMPANY

PROLOGUE (Continued).

He came back to the desk and stared at the glass.

"Old man, do you know what that is?"

He was so subject to his own thoughts that he did not hear the street door open behind him. Not even the swish of a woman's evening gown came into his consciousness. Sullivan, leaving him staring at the glass, went to meet her. She was young, scarcely more than 20, and tall and slender. She wore in her black hair a red rose, and her opera cloak, falling slightly away from her shoulders, showed her columnlike neck. As she stood, graceful even in her stillness, awaiting Sullivan's approach, her welcoming smile illumined the grave beauty of her face. She seemed to sense the tragedy.

"Is there anything very wrong?" she asked in a whisper.

She was all loveliness and fragrance and graciousness.

"He's pretty sick, Miss Edith," the old man whispered back. "But don't you worry."

"Help him, can't you?" she questioned, and, seeing Sullivan's nod, added: "I came to see the matron. You know, I'm going to Washington tomorrow, and—"

Smith, pointing once more at the glass, had begun to speak:

"It's my enemy!" his voice boomed forth. "It's the thing that stole my soul away!"

The girl, motioning Sullivan to go back to the sick man, stood and watched the scene.

"It's 1,000,000 women's tears, the fountain of another 1,000,000 women's tears. Women's woe! It's full of the blue lips and twisted smiles of starving children. Children of hunger! It's the ruin of strong men whom it has cheated. Poor, ruined men!"

He snatched the glass from the desk, spilling the whisky, and held it far from him in his left hand. Without taking his eyes from it, he put the heavy grip of his right hand on Sullivan's shoulder.

"Ah, man!" he entreated. "Look at it! Can't you see? There! The thing that makes its home there! His hands are too white, and he's got ashes on his shoes—ashes of dead souls. Think where he walks! He's dancing with a woman. She's a pretty woman. Ah, watch! She's laughing. They're going out through that door—and the laughter freezes on her lips! Out into the long, dark corridor that leads to nowhere—forever! And in that corridor are ghosts, grim ghosts, ghosts of murdered loves, ghosts of great intellects, ghosts of ambition, ghosts of those once virtuous. And she will meet them, will sit in that congress of eternal woe, weep forever with that everlasting troop of torment!"

Sullivan, submitting to the grip on his shoulder, saw that the girl at the door leaned forward, her lips half-parted, her eyes wide with astonishment.

"Look quick!" John Smith was saying. "He's talking to a young man, telling him lies, charming lies! But his lips are too pale, and there are ugly stains under his finger nails. Did you hear that door slam? The young man's gone—gone! I heard one like him scream, up there on the edges of eternity."

His voice shrilled:

"Look how he works—lashing the backs of men, breaking the hearts of women, stealing away the laughter of children. Look at him—all ghoulish eyes. His mouth's a grinning gap. And he's got ashes on his nice new shoes—ashes of dead souls."

He pushed Sullivan from him, and with both hands held the glass close against his chest, slopping over to the floor the last few drops of the whisky. There was no thunder lift in his voice. Emotions played with him as high winds thresh the trees in November. All his old terror beat upon him.

"I'm afraid of him!" he shrieked, the sound bringing a half-stifled cry from the girl at the door.

His hands drew nervous, and the glass dropped, unbroken, to the floor. He looked at Sullivan, the torches of terror relit in his eyes, and whispered hoarsely:

"Old man, that's what I'm afraid of. I'm afraid of him!"

On the end of that confession one great sob shook him, and he screamed, clasped his left hand to his shoulder:

"He's got me!" he lamented. "I've fled for 1,000 years——and—he's got me!"

He stood, weak and uncertain on his feet, and wept, the tears flowing unheeded down his sunken cheeks. Then, suddenly, in a flash, fury tensed him, made him strong enough to grind the glass to pieces under the ragged sole of his shoe.

"Curse him! Curse him!" he yelled. "Damn him!"

Immediately, as quickly as it had come, the false strength left him.

"What's the use?" he moaned weakly. "He's got—"

The girl, rushing forward, reached him as soon as Sullivan. Both of them caught him as he reeled and was about to fall.

"Oh!" she said, looking down upon the pallor of his face while they held him between them.

"He's in awful bad shape, Miss Edith," Sullivan explained, his voice lowered involuntarily.

Smith, with a desperate effort, stood upright, shaking off their support. He was unnaturally calm. An insane smile played with his lips.

"Look behind me," he said, his voice low and strained, his eyes fixed. "Look behind me and tell me exactly where he's standing—exactly. You can tell him by the ashes on his shoes."

The girl, putting a hand on his shoulder, leaned forward and tried to engage with her glance his unwavering gaze.

"Who are you?" she asked.

He was silent, the smile still playing with his lips.

"He don't know, Miss Edith," volunteered Sullivan.

"Doesn't know?" she breathed, and urged him with a pressure on his shoulder: "Tell us. We want to help you. What's your name?"

There was no answer. Instead, Smith collapsed in Sullivan's arms, his lips lifted to a smile, his bluish eyelids falling like thin curtains over the fixed, flaming eyes.

"Very white ashes on his shoes," he whispered; "ashes of dead souls—ashes of—poor, dead souls!"

CHAPTER I.

Senator Mallon was inordinately fond of two things: his reputation and his roses. He had cultivated both with the greatest care for many years. Seated at his breakfast table, the meal finished, he was reading a big headlined article on the front page of his newspaper and was forming rapidly the conviction that his reputation was in danger of losing a little of its bloom.

His daughter, at the head of the table, gazed at the cluster of roses between them, the corners of her lips lifted by the touch of happy fancies. The roses were perfect.

The senator threw down the paper and, straightening in his chair, looked at his daughter across the roses.

"This fellow Smith!" he said sharply. "I don't like him!"

Miss Mallon also straightened in her chair. If her father had been an observant man, her attitude would have reminded him of a strong, slender flower.

"But I do," she said, the statement completing the smile the roses had begun.

"Why? I'd like to know why! Tell me why!"

He made each of his phrases conversational pistol shots. He was a nervous man of about 50 years, his voice sharp and authoritative. Before going to the Senate, he had done big things in business and had been accustomed to speak in the key of power. He passed his hand quickly through his sparse, bristly gray hair and jerked his glasses from his high, thin nose.

"Because he is what he is," she replied, totally unimpressed by the signs of paternal displeasure.

"What is he? Tell me what he is!" he demanded.

"He's a great man with a big idea," she said evenly.

"He's a big fool with a crazy idea—that's what he is," her father said flatly, picking up the newspaper. "Have you read this stuff about him?"

"Yes."

"Before breakfast, I suppose?" he suggested impatiently.

"Yes," she said quietly, "before breakfast."

The senator's irritability merged into anxiety. He slapped the paper down on the table and leaned toward his daughter.

"Ah—er—look here, Edith," he said nervously, "you're not—you can't be thinking about this fellow seriously!"

She threw back her head and laughed, the sound of it soft and silvery. It was very much in keeping with the grave beauty of her face, with the fragrance of the roses, with the brightness of the October morning sunlight in the garden outside.

"What do you mean, father?" she asked.

"I mean," he said, his irritation returning, "whether you intend to marry him!"

"Why, the idea! Why should you suggest such a thing?"

"I'll tell you why," he answered crisply. "Because you're seen too much with him, because he's too much at this house, because people are beginning to gossip, because he's a nobody, a crank, a lunatic. That's why!"

"Still," she said, quite serious, "I like him very much, very much, indeed."

"Bah!" he exclaimed. "Why? Will you tell me why?"

"I've told you why, father. He's a great man, and he's doing a great work. Why, think of it! He's come to Washington with the calm announcement that he'll compel congress to amend the constitution of the United States. Of course I like him."

"Amend the constitution! And amend it for nation wide prohibition! The thing's ridiculous."

"And yet," she persisted, her big brown eyes meeting the steely gray of her father's, "somehow, I feel sure he'll succeed."

He knew when his daughter's mind was made up. He knew also the quiet determination with which she followed her own convictions. A girlhood and young womanhood without a mother, necessitating self reliance, had given her a character strength with which he could not always successfully cope. But this was something which might hurt his reputation. He could not afford to have his name or his daughter's linked with that of a cheap reformer.

"Edith, you amaze me!" he declared, rolling the newspaper tightly in his nervous hands. "This fellow is not the kind of man I want about this house."

Miss Mallon wished to avoid the argument. She was looking at the roses.

"You don't even know who he is," he continued sharply. "I don't know. Nobody knows."

"That's a peculiar thing to say, father," she criticised gently.

"A very natural thing, and I'll tell you why," he said, making his speech emphatic with a wave of the newspaper. "Nobody knew anything about him up to five years ago. At that time he became prominent among the temperance people as a street corner speaker and cheap platform lecturer. He did some bizarre, effective work for those cranks in some of the liquor fights in the various states. After that he took a short whirl at the chautauqua lecture circuit. Now he's come to Washington to take things by storm!"

Old Maid Insurance.

A form of insurance that is likely to prove popular in America has appeared in Vienna. It is that of insuring a girl against being an old maid. The new form of insurance grew out of the probability that there would be a great shortage of men following the war and a consequent certainty that there would not be enough men to go around.

This insurance is just as business like and efficient in its arrangement as is life insurance. Instead of passing upon the applicant's health, the agent bases her acceptability as a risk upon her degree of beauty, personal charm and wifely qualities. The prettiest girls are the best risks, the homely ones having 'to pay' the highest premiums.

There appears to be only one difficulty about the arrangement. Who is to fix the age at which the insurance becomes payable? To claim the insurance would be tantamount to an admission on the woman's part that there is no hope of her winning a husband. And a great philosopher has said that a woman resigns the idea of getting married only with life itself. And another equally great philosopher has remarked that hope springs eternal in the feminine breast. So it would seem the insurance company has got all the better of the argument.

Women of Middle Age

Many distressing Ailments experienced by them are Alleviated by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Here is Proof by Women who Know.

Lowell, Mass.—"For the last three years I have been troubled with the Change of Life and the bad feelings common at that time. I was in a very nervous condition, with headaches and pain a good deal of the time so I was unfit to do my work. A friend asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which I did, and it has helped me in every way. I am not nearly so nervous, no headache or pain. I must say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the best remedy any sick woman can take."—Mrs. MARGARET QUINN, Rear 259 Worthen St., Lowell, Mass.

She Tells Her Friends to Take Lydia E. Pinkham's Remedies.

North Haven, Conn.—"When I was 45 I had the Change of Life which is a trouble all women have. At first it didn't bother me but after a while I got bearing down pains. I called in doctors who told me to try different things but they did not cure my pains. One day my husband came home and said, 'Why don't you try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash?' Well, I got them and took about 10 bottles of Vegetable Compound and could feel myself regaining my health. I also used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and it has done me a great deal of good. Any one coming to my house who suffers from female troubles or Change of Life, I tell them to take the Pinkham remedies. There are about 20 of us here who think the world of them."—Mrs. FLORENCE ISELLA, Box 197, North Haven, Conn.

SYRUP OF FIGS FOR A CHILD'S BOWELS

It is cruel to force nauseating, harsh physic into a sick child.

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "dose" mother insisted on—castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realize what they do. The children's revolt is well-founded. Their tender little "insides" are injured by them.

If your child's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing, give only delicious "California Syrup of Figs." Its action is positive, but gentle. Millions of mothers keep this harmless "fruit laxative" handy; they know children love to take it; that it never fails to clean the liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and that a teaspoonful given today saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on each bottle. Adv.

A MAN'S WIFE TELLS SECRET.

A well known actress gives the following recipe for gray hair: To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo Compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off. Adv.

When Men Fought Hand to Hand.

The most fearsome of all the ancient Russian weapons was the great battle-ax. There were many different types of these, but all were alike in having queerly shaped, broad blades, often of huge proportions and mounted on long poles. The upper portion of the blade usually projected in a fantastic curve above the halt, while the lower end bent toward the pole, to which it was attached by a lashing of wire.

The New Method

(BY L. W. BOWER, M. D.)

Backache of any kind is often caused by kidney disorder, which means that the kidneys are not working properly. Poisonous matter and uric acid accumulate within the body in great abundance over-working the sick kidneys, hence the congestion of blood causes backache in the same manner as a similar congestion in the head causes headache. You become nervous, despondent, sick, feverish, irritable, have spots appearing before the eyes, bags under the lids, and lack ambition to do things.

The latest and most effective means of overcoming this trouble, is to eat sparingly of meat, drink plenty water between meals and take a single Anuric tablet before each meal for a while.

Simply ask your favorite druggist for Anuric. If you have lumbago, rheumatism, gout, dropsy, begin immediately with this novel treatment.

LOSS OF POWER and vital force follow loss of flesh, or emaciation. This come from impoverished blood. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery enriches the blood, stops the waste of strength and tissue, and builds up healthy flesh.

Thin, pale, puny and scrofulous children are made plump, rosy and robust by the "Discovery." They like it too.

In recovering from "Grippe," or in convalescence from pneumonia, fevers, or other wasting diseases, it speedily and surely invigorates and builds up the whole system. As an appetizer, restorative tonic, it sets at work all the processes of digestion and nutrition, rouses every organ into natural action, and brings back health and strength.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. Constipation is the cause of many diseases. Cure the cause and you cure the disease. Easy to take candy.

From Life

Jack Borroughs's dog broke from him and made a sudden dive down the first opening. The usual clear whistle made no impression. "Jim" was off. Jack quickly followed, and to his relief saw a big Irishman patting "Jim's" head; "Jim", with unmistakable signs of delight, jumping up and down and rubbing against the man.

That started the strange friendship between Jack Borroughs, lawyer, sportsman, and Dennis O'Sullivan.

Dennis lived in the last house on "Grasshopper Hill." It was a little less ramshackle, a little more independent looking than the rest of the row that faced on a small bluff above the railroad tracks, and its garden bloomed like a rose. Dennis himself was large, burly, rather red faced but with the twinkling blue eyes and the genial courtesy of the true son of Erin.

Later Dennis brought out to the almost palatial suburban home of Jack Burroughs rare bulbs and old fashioned flowers. Jack got Dennis to help him in making his own garden beautiful.

As the war dragged its fearful way along they, strange to say never even mentioned it, until one day in June suddenly Jack said "Dennis, I have written to a cousin in England to know if it's possible for me to get a commission in the English army."

Dennis looked up from the border he was working and demanded

"No, why and I should like to know?"

"We can count on me, and I will be ... proud to go for the whole o' me life."

With his letter held high, Jack with "Jim" at his heels, gaily waved it to a sweet girl that he caught a glimpse of on the blooming porch.

"Can I come in, Elaine?" he called.

The blue eyes gave him welcome. He sat on the lower step and, leaning against the post looked up at the girl.

"Honor, I am off to the war!"

The smile froze on the sweet lips. Her slender strong hands clenched but the girl's voice was quiet as she answered.

"I hardly understand, Jack."

Then he eagerly explained how his cousins in England, with the same strain of Irish blood in their veins were fighting—nay, some dying on the battlefields in France, and call had come to him and he must go.

He stood tall and straight his grey eyes flashing those eyes she so loved. His head thrown back. And the girl felt he would lead his men even unto death. He gave his warm, proud smile, surely she would understand.

"Sit down, Jack, dear. Yes, I understand," she smiled into those eager eyes, but you do not understand. No, wait, please—you are an American Jack, first, last and all the time, and now soon, only too soon, your country might need all such men as you. You cannot desert your country now! You cannot, cannot, Jack, dear!"

And Jack understood.

How to tell Dennis, how to break the news to him, what was he to say?

As later he saw the big man, walking slowly up the path Dennis touched his cap to Jack.

"Will ye pardon me pipe, Misther Burroughs, being that low in me mind I kinnot spake without it?"

Jack smiled.

"I am a bit low meself, Dennis."

"Well, I had best out with it like a man, Misther Burroughs. I went to spake to me Nora, and she said, 'Dennis O'Sullivan, have ye lost the little bits o' wits ye be blessed with? Not one foot do ye stir from your own country. Did ye not become an American citizen this five years back?' And shure, Misther Burroughs, 'twas true the word she spake!"

And Ingenious

Bing—"I understand that Shmelts is lazy."

Biff—"Lazy! You bet! Why, when he spanks his child he lays a carpet over the kid, so that he can do two jobs at once!"

It requires a mighty good condition in your hogs, too, to stand the changes in climate such as we have in this country. Extreme changes in temperature occur in a week and often in a day, and hogs like people, are subject to colds, cough, pneumonia and all sort of lung trouble.

Now as a rule, even though your hogs appear thrifty, worms, parasites, indigestion, and other results of a bad stomach are present. To insure getting your hogs through the summers heat and the winters cold at the least cost and with the most gains and smallest risk, you must keep them in as good physical condition as possible.

Two of These Shoats Gained 36 Lbs. More Than The Other Two in 90 Days

Listen to a fellow Indiana farmer—H. Vandolah, of English, down in Crawford County, says to you:

"I used 'Avalon Farms' HOG-TONE on two shoats taken from the sow in good shape. Fed them the same amount of feed. Gave them the same amount of HOG-TONE. I got 36 pounds more gain on the two that received HOG-TONE over the two that received none. All other conditions were the same. Did not treat any of the hogs for worms or set up. Did not feed worm, cholera or stomach nor kidney powder in the treated ones."

And—figured roughly—treating those two shoats for 90 days cost less than $2 extra! For you can treat your hog from the time it is 6 weeks young until it is 6 months old and keep it free—absolutely and entirely free—from all worms with HOG-TONE for $2 cents! That means 24 weeks' (227 days') treatment at a total expense of two dimes. Figure it out for yourself.

Then come in and talk it up about this great, new vermifuge and hog conditioner that is death to all worms—worms of the stomach, bowels, lungs, liver, kidneys.

Program For Cutting Off Iowa Commissions

A general retrenchment program in the administration of the state's affairs is being prepared in the Iowa house by a group of legislators headed by Representative Wilson of Mitchell county.

The program includes a readjustment of many of the departments of government and will provide for the elimination of a number of bureaus and commissions now in existence.

The first step in the program, according to Representative Mitchell, was taken in Saturday's session with the introduction of a bill by Representative Lee of Sac county for the abolishment of the office of state fire marshal.

Other bills will be presented during this week and during the remaining weeks of the session looking toward a more economical system Following is a portion of the program as outlined by Representative Wilson:

THE PROGRAM

Abolishment of the office of state fire marshal and shifting the duties of the department to the insurance bureau

Abolishment of the fish and game department and requiring the various sheriffs to enforce fish and game laws.

Abolishment of inspection bureau in office of state superintendent of public instruction. Require inspections to be made by county superintendents.

Abolishment of hotel inspectors bureau. Require inspections to be made by state food and dairy inspectors.

Consolidation of departments of departments of labor and industrial commissioner.

Abolishment of offices of state printer and binder. Shift major portion of duties to state document editor.

Material reduction in force of state food and dairy commissioner.

"Nick Carter" Dead

Where is the man who does not remember the Nick Carter stories, filled with blood and thunder, which, a few years ago, seen to decorate the news stands? The writer of these harmful and degrading stories was Alfred B. Tuger, who died last week at his home in New York His passing will not cause any regret in the minds of good people, all of whom hope his variety of cheap and trashy novels will go into oblivion with him. He made a fortune out of nefarious and rotten reading matter, but if the record could be published of the youthful lives he ruined with his outlandish booklets, his name would be posted on every street corner as a reproach and disgrace to his memory. —Jefferson Bee.

Town Improvement

A series of articles on the above subject especially written for this paper will be one of our features for perhaps a term of six months, running at least every other week. The first of the series on this important subject will be found on the editorial page this issue and you are asked to read it. Those of you who are finding the H. C. of L. annoying will be able to derive some benefit, we believe. While these articles will be run under head of Town Improvements, our rural readers will find them interesting, especially in some of the articles which are to follow.

How Much "Juice" Are You Burning?

One of the most important topics of conversation by the "stove league" and others these days is how much is your electric light bill going to be this month?

The latter part of December the Iowa Falls Electric Co. changed the old direct current meters and installed new alternating current meters in their stead and it seems like nearly everyone you meet is under the impression that their light bills are going to be much higher than they have been in the past. Perhaps "it is all wrong Eustace" but it does look queer. Maybe the collector can explain matters and maybe he can't, we will wait and see.

Big Free Short Course

During the week of March 5th a short course will be put on but the exact dates have not been settled and neither has all the talent been secured. It will last at least three days and perhaps may cover five.

The course will cover all the important features of farming, agricultural engineering, animal husbandry, stock raising and dairying and special domestic science work.

It is planned to make it absolutely free, the expenses to be met out of the past short course funds. Watch for dates, announcements and full particulars.

It is hoped to make it the biggest thing in this line ever pulled off in Hancock county.

Breaks Neck In Fall

George Kessler, east of town received the sad news, Wednesday, that his youngest brother Fred, of Belmond had met with a fatal accident which caused his instant death. At noon he had climbed up into the hay-mow to throw down hay for stock and in coming down, accidentally fell and broke his neck, meeting instant death.

The young man was about twenty eight years old and was living on the home place near Belmond.

It is a sad affair and Mr. and Mrs. Kessler have the sympathy of their many friends.

Infant Passes Away

Mr. and Mr H. N. Church are mourning the death of their youngest son who passed away this Thursday afternoon. The little fellow has been ailing ever since birth and death came as a relief to his suffering. Had he lived until next May he would have been two years old.

Mr. and Mrs. Church have the sympathy of a large host of friends in their affliction.

Funeral services will be held from the home at 1:30 o'clock p. m Saturday and the remains laid to rest in Calvary cemetery.

First Blizzard Sunday

A miniature blizzard had things pretty much its own way all day Sunday, and the most of the natives were more than willing to hug the stove Monday morning opened up bright and clear but the roads are in pretty bad condition not being in condition for either wheeling or sleighing. The passenger train from the south was nearly three hours late and the "Ping Pong" never ventured out of the yards at Germania Traffic was resumed again Tuesday. Thanks for small favors it could have been much worse.

When salt has been obtained by evaporation it is allowed to "cure" by standing some time in great piles, during which process it hardens almost like stone. Often in the curing process, as the packers work into the great heaps of salt, perpendicular malls are formed. Formerly, many accidents were caused by these huge banks of salt falling and burying the workmen. To avoid this danger there is now being employed a large electrically driven auger, which bores holes deep into the pile just above the floor. The pile caves in slowly and the workmen with no danger to themselves may fill the barrels and sacks with loose sparkling salt or load cars for the table salt refineries.

State Senator, Alderman and Others Involved in Move, Hoyne Says

Chicago, Jan 20 Oscar De Priest negro alderman, who with a police captain and 19 others was indicted on charges of conspiracy in connection with graft surrendered today and prepared to give bonds of $25,000

Chicago Jan 20—Investigation of a new line of police and political graft has been begun by the grand jury States Attorney Hoyne announced His said police captains, politicians and others not mentioned as yet will be hit

States Attorney Hoyne would not intimate who is to be hit by this new evidence It is reported that one of the men is a well known police captain whose name was brought up before Chief Justice Olson of the municipal court some weeks ago when the latter was hearing the state's attorney's application for a warrant for Chief Healey on a charge of conspiracy Others to be involved are said to be south side politicians, including a state senator and an alderman

JURY HEARS SPANELL WAS DEVOTED TO WIFE

Defense Scores in Trial of Man Who Shot Woman and Army Officer.

San Angelo, Tex. Jan 20--Testimony regarding J Spanell's devotion to his wife and child which the state sought to have excluded, was admitted today by Judge C E. Dubois in the trial of Spanell who is charged with killing his wife and Lieut Col M C Butler at Alpine, Tex., last July

The testimony was given during the cross examination of Mrs. J W. Downum, who with her husband, is now operating the hotel at Alpine, formerly run by Spanell.

It was contended that the state already had introduced testimony to show that Spanell "was spying" on his wife The defense, it was argued, had a right to refute this kind of evidence

WURTEMBURG KING IS THANKED BY KAISER

Amsterdam, Jan. 19.—According to the German newspapers, the emperor, replying to a telegram from the king of Wurtemburg indorsing the emperor's address to the nation following the entente reply to President Wilson's note telegraphed

"You have strongly expressed, in the name of your brave Swabians, the feeling of indignation, which these days of the unmasking of the enemy's plans of destruction, are the entire nation's. Accept my heartiest thanks for your fresh expression of loyalty. Hold on with blood and treasure until the arrogance of our enemies, shattered by the unshakable will to victory of the fatherland and its loyal allies."

ALLEGED COAL TRUST PROBERS ARE APPOINTED

Des Moines, Ia., Jan. 19.—A committee made up of Senators Price, of Albia; Caswell, of Denison, and Haskell, of Cedar Rapids, was appointed by the senate today to act in conjunction with the house of the Iowa legislature committee, composed of Epps, of Wapello; Starzeinger, of Polk, and Griffin, of Woodbury, to inquire into the alleged combine on the price of coal which jumped from 15 cents to 25 cents per bushel in Ottumwa. It was being sold for 15 cents under contract from the operators to dealers.

LIQUOR INTERESTS ANNOUNCE A FIGHT

Give Notice They Will Contest Right to Send Goods for Personal Use—Decision Today.

SENATE VOTES IOWA "FOREVER BONE DRY"

Des Moines, Ia., Jan. 19.—By a vote of 46 to 3, the senate of the Iowa legislature today passed the prohibitory constitutional amendment to forever prohibit the manufacture or sale of intoxicating liquors in Iowa. Sen. James W. Wilson, of Centerville, reported the unanimous recommendation of the committee for its passage to the senate. Frailey, of Lee; Henigbaum, of Scott, and Schropp, of Dubuque, voted against the passage.

Des Moines Ia., Jan. 19—Some of the brewery interests located outside of Iowa took deep interest in the conference of railroad attorneys called by Attorney General Havner for today, to determine upon some course by which railroads will not accept shipments of liquor for delivery to Iowa points.

Long distance telephone calls received by railroad attorneys reminding them that the federal courts have issued injunctions prohibiting railroads from refusing to accept liquor shipments to Iowa. The brewery and liquor men say they intend to see that this injunction is obeyed, regardless of the construction the Iowa attorney general may put on the law

Attorney General Havner has taken the position that under the Webb-Kenyon decision, Iowa prohibits the shipment of liquor into this state for personal use as well as for sale.

Senator Whitmore, "dry" leader of the senate, says that in his opinion the attorney general is right in his construction of the law He declares this was demonstrated by a decision recently in the district court at Marshalltown and by the decision of Judge Utterback in the Polk county district court yesterday.

The attorney general has taken the position that the clause in question which permits the shipment of liquor for personal use is void because it is not mentioned in the title of the bill Senator Whitmore thinks probably this point is well taken

"DRY" AMENDMENT MAY GO TO VOTERS IN FALL

Des Moines, Ia., Jan 20—The joint resolution submitting constitutional prohibition to the voters of Iowa was ordered out for passage by the constitutional amendments committee of the Iowa senate yesterday and will pass that branch today, it is expected. Temperance leaders announce that they would ask the legislature to order a special election for next November to pass upon the amendment

Both house and senate were in session but a short time yesterday before adjourning A number of bills were introduced and the house adopted the resolution offered by Epps, of Ottumwa for an investigation of the existence of an Iowa coal trust

Speaker Pitt named on the committee Epps, Griffin, of Sioux City and Starzinger, of Des Moines. The senate is expected to take up the resolution today and appoint a similar committee.

John Wormley, of Kingsley, chairman of the house committee on elections, said that he believed the house would not consent to any radical changes in the primary laws, but would probably amend them to remedy defects on operation, but without material change in principle The presidential preference primary law probably will be repealed.

HOUSE SENTIMENT IN FAVOR OF PRIMARIES

Des Moines Ia., Jan. 20—Sentiment in the Iowa house is in favor of amending the present primary laws where necessary, but for retaining the primary system principle to as large an extent as possible in the opinion of John Wormley, of Plymouth county, chairman of the house committee on elections.

Mr Wormley does not believe that radical changes in the primary law are necessary He is noncommital upon the persidential preference primary, but sentiment in the house seems strong for its repeal, two bills, one edmocratic an dthe other republican, having been brought in to repeal this law in the house.

AGED RECLUSE IS WORTH MORE THAN $175,000, SAID

Mt Pleasant, Ia., Jan. 20—An interesting document has been filed with the county court, being the preliminary report of W F Kopp, recently appointed guardian of Charles Winters, a septugenerian, who is lying helpless at the home of relatives as a result of a stroke of apoplexy.

Winters is a bachelor, a recluse of the most pronounced type. It was always understood he was a very wealthy man. The preliminary report discloses the fact that Winters is worth at least $175,000 and probably more. The guardian has in his possession notes to the value of $141,536.43.

The exact value of the real estate owned by Winters is problematical. He owns 80 acres in Henry county worth $10,500, also half an acre valued at $200 and two lots in town each worth $1,000. He also has land in Missouri, Canada, Oklahoma and Jefferson county, this state.

VETERAN LEGISLATOR VISITS AT CAPITOL

Des Moines, Ia., Jan 20—Lewis Miles, of Corydon, a member of the house of representatives 47 years ago, and a member of the senate 41 years ago, was a visitor at the state house.

Mr. Miles was but 24 years old at the time he entered the legislature and was one of the youngest members who ever served in either house.

Following his services in the legislature Mr. Miles served three terms as United States district attorney.

LINCOLN—The University of Nebraska conferred the honorary degree of doctor of agriculture on President Pearson, of the Iowa State Agricultural college. The degree was presented by Chancellor Avery, on behalf of the Nebraska regents, following the dedicatory address by President Pearson of the new $200,000 Nebraska dairy building.

IDA GROVE—Ida Grove loses one of her oldest settlers in the death of R. J. Pierce, who died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. E. G Bowman. Mr. Pierce was 87 years old, and leaves three children, H B. Pierce, of Rock Rapids, Mrs. Fish and Mrs. Bowman, both of Ida Grove.

FIRST BILL INTRODUCED MEETS UP WITH SNAGS

Des Moines, Ia., Jan 19—The bill introduced by Klinker in the house and Whitmore in the senate, the first on the roll in both branches of the assembly, ran into snags when it was reported out in both house and senate yesterday afternoon.

In the house consideration was postponed until today, after Elwood had requested further information.

In the senate a debate ensued after the adoption of the first two amendments, and when Senator Chase proposed an amendment to the third amendment, cutting down from 5,000 to 4,000 the number of copies of the session laws to be printed, further consideration was postponed until today. The bill relates to the printing of the session laws.

SET MARCH 19 AS DATE TO ADJOURN LEGISLATURE

Des Moines, Ia., Jan. 19—March, 19, 1917, is set as the date for adjournment of the 37th general assembly sine die, in a concurrent resolution introduced in the senate by Foster, of Guthrie.

The date will be just 70 days after the convening of the legislature this month and is in accordance with the expressed desire of Governor Harding that the legislators complete their work within that period.

BILL IS INTRODUCED TO REPEAL ANTI-TIPPING LAW

Des Moines, Ia., Jan. 19—"I voted for the anti-tipping bill and I am ashamed of it for it was the only freak bill I did support," said Senator Caswell yesterday, before introducing his bill for the repeal of the measure.

"It is one of the statutes that should be the first to come under the meaning of what Governor Harding said when he urged the elimination of useless and obsolete statutes from the books.

"It is being violated every day, right here in the senate chamber and everywhere else in the state."

Senator Caswell expects his repeal bill to pass the senate without much discussion but said yesterday that some opposition may arise in the house.

Governmental officials at Washington have recently refused to O. K. expense accounts of federal employes in Iowa in which tips are included Federal job holders are therefore expected to favor Caswell's bill

DEMOCRATS ARE SHUT OUT OF "DRY" JOBS

Des Moines, Jan. 19—That the prohibitory amendment now is a party issue is made doubly certain by an all-republican constitutional amendment committee in the house of the Thirty-seventh general assembly, with Representative Klinker, as chairman, announced yesterday by Speaker M B. Pitt.

The senate constitutional amendment committee announced last Thursday was absolutely free of democrats. The house committee is in the same shape

Some of the "drys" fear this may have the effect of lining the democrats up against the amendment. Other politicians declare, however, that the action of the lieutenant governor and speaker of the house puts the "dry" issue back in the republican party "where it belongs."

SUPREME COURT DECISIONS.

Des Moines, Ia., Jan 19—The following decisions were today handed down by the supreme court:

Maher, appellant, vs. Morrison, Polk county; affirmed.

American Blower Co. vs. Lion Bonding & Surety company appellant, Polk county, reserved and remanded

Waite, trustee, appellant, vs Citizens' State bank, Linn county, affirmed

Dow vs. Twon, of Nora Springs, appellant, Floyd county; affirmed.

Mayer vs. Brogan et al, appallants, Sac county, modified and affirmed.

State of Iowa vs. Kimball, appellant, rehearing overruled

COUNCIL BLUFFS—It has been pretty clearly established that the aged traveler picked up yesterday after a fall, whose satchel contained $1,500 in currency, was en route to the home of his sister in Scottsbluff, Neb., and misunderstood the name of the town when trainmen told him this was Council Bluffs. Relatives from Rochester, N Y., are coming here

ARMSTRONG—A great deal of interest was shown in the annual meeting of the Emmet County Farm Improvement association which was held in this city All of last year's officers were re-elected They are J. R. Horswell, president, R S. Harris, vice president A J Case, secretary, Wm. Green, treasurer, M L. Soeth was elected to serve on the executive committee.

COUNCIL BLUFFS—The mother and brother of Roland Barber, shot by officers near Oakland for attempted blackmail of a farmer, have visited him in the hospital here. They reside in Grand Island, Neb. Barber is in a serious condition from infection of his bullet wound and appendicitis. Barber has made a written confession.

CHEROKEE—The boys' Y M C A conference for northwest Iowa will be held in this city January 26, 27 and 28. Three hundred delegates are expected to attend Among the prominent speakers will be Rev. R A Waite, of Lincoln, Neb., and Leonard Paulson of Chicago, international boys' work secretary of the Y. M C A.

LEMARS—Roy Stinehart, of Sioux township, has filed suit for divorce against his wife, May Eva Stinehart. He states in his petition that he was married at Elk Point, S. D., on October 23, 1916, and that she left him three days after their marriage.

ESTHERVILLE—Henry Riley, one of the oldest pioneers of Emmet county, died at his home in this city after an illness of only a few days. He had been ill with pneumonia and his condition was not thought serious until a short time before his death. He had just closed up most of his business affairs prior to a trip to California to spend the winter.

COUNCIL BLUFFS—Miss Frances B. Children, member of a prominent Council Bluffs family, was found dead, and indications clearly point to suicide. She had drawn a davenport into the kitchen and turned on all the gas jets in the range. Ill health is given as the cause.

CRESTON—M. T. McKee, aged 60 years, a retired merchant of Creston, formerly living at Kent and Conway, committed suicide at the home of his brother here by shooting himself in the head with a revolver Despondency because of ill health is given as the motive. He had tried previously to kill himself by turning on the gas, but was saved by a relative. He leaves no family.

ESTHERVILLE—Plans are already under way for the rebuilding of the Grand theater here which was destroyed by fire January 8 at a loss of $125,000. Henry Graaf, who owned the theater, says the new theater and store will be far ahead of the old one.

GREAT DEMONSTRATION IN HONOR OF DEWEY

President and Other High Officials Invited to Take Part in Public Ceremonies at Capital.

Washington, Jan. 19—Change of name of the Danish West Indies to "the Dewey Islands," in honor of Admiral Dewey, was proposed in a joint resolution introduced today by Representative Allen, of Ohio, who announced he was submitting letters to President Wilson and to the foreign relations committee of congress, urging the change.

Washington, Jan. 18.—A great public demonstration to honor Admiral Dewey at his funeral here on Saturday was being planned today.

Rear Admiral Glennon, in charge of the funeral arrangements, today extended invitations to President Wilson and other high officials to attend the public ceremonies at the capital.

NOTE OPENS DOOR TO PEACE STEPS?

Members of League to Enforce Peace Encouraged by Note Explaining Severity of Allies' Peace Terms.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 18.—Great Britain's supplementary note amplifying the entente reply to President Wilson's peace note has given much encouragement to American officials who are looking forward to some sort of league of nations to preserve peace.

Although the principal portions in Foreign Minister Balfour's note delivered to the state department yesterday are designed to justify the severity of the terms set forth by the entente in their reply to the note of President Wilson, the formal acceptance in principle of some sort of a national sanction as a force behind treaties and international law is regarded as of great importance.

It has been stated officially that President Wilson's next step has not been determined upon. Many officials believe the terms of the British note may afford the opportunity for a move toward the establishment of some such national sanction even if it be with the view of having it come into force after the close of the war.

PACK HEADS AMERICAN FORESTRY ASSOCIATION

Washington, Jan. 18.—Charles Lathrop Pack, of Cleveland, Ohio, was re-elected president of the American Forestry association here today. New vice presidents were elected as follows:

Mrs. Frances Folsom Preston, of New Jersey, and T. Coleman Dupont, of Delaware. The treasurer reelected is John E. Jenks, editor of the Army and Navy Journal.

Secretary Houston, of the department of agriculture, sent a communication to the senate urging an appropriation of $300,000 for eradication by the department of the white pine "blister rust" infection. Much timber of northwestern forest reserves is open to infection

EUROPEAN OBSERVER WILL HEAD WAR COLLEGE

Washington, D. C., Jan. 18.—War department orders today announced the appointment of Brig. Gen. Joseph E. Kuhn, as president of the war college and assistant to Major General Scott, chief of staff.

General Kuhn was appointed director of the college when he returned to this country from Germany after serving as military observer and military attache of the American embassy in Berlin. His promotion to president of the college makes possible the fullest use by that institution and the general staff of much valuable information gathered by him in the European war zone.

LAKE SHIPPING COSTS 73 LIVES, 14 VESSELS

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 18.—Seventy-three lives and 14 vessels were lost on the great lakes during 1916, according to the annual report of the Lake Carriers' association, made public today. This casualty report is the most serious since 1913.

The report also declares that the ore movement in 1916 was 64,734,198 tons as against 49,070,478 tons in the hitherto banner year of 1913.

The grain amount in 1916 totalled 363,999,166 bushels, a decrease of 22,166,896 bushels from 1915.

TO PAY FOR FUNERAL OF MAN SHE KILLED

Denver, Colo., Jan. 18.—The funeral expenses of John L. Smith, shot and killed by Mrs. Stella Newton Smith, his wife, will be paid by Mrs. Smith, it was announced. Mrs. Smith, who is in jail pending the outcome of application for bail, confessed that she killed her husband, declaring that he attacked her and threatened to kill her little daughter by a former marriage. Smith's estate, said to amount to $900, is to be divided between Mrs. Smith and Smith's little son by a former marriage, living at Colorado Springs.

GREEK GOVERNMENT FREES IMPRISONED VENIZELISTS

London, Jan. 18.—In compliance with the demand of the entente, the arrested Venizelists have been released, according to an Athens dispatch to Reuters. The dispatch says that quiet prevails in the Greek capital.

D. A. R. FOR PREPAREDNESS.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 18.—The 99,000 women of the Daughters of the American Revolution are pledged to preparedness and adequate national defense, said Mrs. William Cumming Story, president general to the Senate subcommittee on universal training today, speaking as a member of the special committee representing 25 patriotic societies.

SWISS ALARMED BY PREPARATIONS FOR BIG BATTLE

Germany Masses Troops South, Apparently to Drive French From Alsace, Big Little Neutral Makes Moves.

LITTLE FAITH IN PLEDGE

Russians and Rumanians Apparently More Than Holding Their Own Against Allies' Plan Coup in Greece

Paris, Jan 20—General commander of the Swiss to mobilize all Switzerland forces, according to a dispatch to the Petit Parisien. The council is said to regard the as excessive and to have mobilize only the Second Division, but it is considered probable that further steps will be called to the colors.

London, Jan. 20—"Swiss reports assert that masses of German troops are concentrating near Basel," the Exchange Telegraph's Geneva correspondent. "The Swiss government is convinced that an invasion of Switzerland is contemplated with the view of freeing Alsace from the Germans."

RUSS OFFENSIVE RENEWED.

Berlin, Jan. 20, (by wireless to Sayville)—The Russians made attacks yesterday on German positions on the northern Rumanian front north of the Suchitza valley. According to official announcement, these attacks failed, with heavy losses.

REPORTS FIGHTING ABATED

Berlin, (by wireless to Sayville) Jan. 20—"The fighting has again abated after several days of increased activity," says today's official announcement respecting the Russo-Galician front.

TWO FIELD POSTS FALL

Petrograd, Jan. 20—The capture of two German field posts in the Beresvichi region on the Russian front, the failure of an attack by the Germans near Zeborow, east of Lemberg, Galicia are reported today by the war office.

Rumanians Make Gains

Heavy fighting is still in progress on the Rumanian front with the Russians and Rumanians apparently more than holding their own, for the time at least, against Field Marshal Mackensen's armies. Elsewhere there have been few activities of importance. This holds true of the French battle front, where the quiet has been broken recently only by the British attacks north of the Somme, which have resulted in advances for the latter near Beaucourt-Sur-Ancre

Expect Smash in South

Indications are not lacking, however, that the present comparatively quiet conditions are not likely to endure long and in this connection the situation on the southern sector of the line is being closely watched. The French have occupy a considerable section of the territory of Alsace, the fighting line extending the Swiss border between Belfort and Basel.

Concentration of masses of German troops across the line from Belfort has recently been reported in Swiss newspapers and a belief is said to exist in Switzerland that the Germans will replate an offensive with the object of freeing Alsace of the invaders

Swiss Take Precautions

The Swiss federal council early this week, while expressing confidence that none of the powers contemplated a violation of Swiss neutrality, ordered the mobilization of additional troops as a measure of protection.

Both Germany and France assured Switzerland recently that they would continue to respect her neutrality

Athens, Jan. 19.—Control by the entente allies in Greece will be exercised by delegates from all the four powers. Russia is sending a special officer for this purpose. He will represent the Russian military attache who has been ordered to active service.

Washington, Jan. 19.—The text of the recent allied ultimatum to Greece presented to the state department today by Charge of the Greek legation, reveals that the allies notified the Athens government in the communication "that military necessity may lead them shortly to disembark troops at Itea for passage by railroad to Salonika."

This portion of the ultimatum, not mentioned in press dispatches, came to this country through the allied censorship, is regarded here as highly significant, possibly forecasting a much greater concentration of allied troops in northern Greece for a drive against the Berlin-Constantinople railway line.

WOMEN ELECTED WILSON, BRYAN TELLS SOLONS

Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 19.—William Jennings Bryan urged Ohio legislators in joint session to extend presidential suffrage to women.

"Let no democrat question the capacity of women for suffrage, for it was the women who elected President Wilson last fall when the men would have defeated him," Bryan said, addressing his remarks to the democratic majority.

NEW BRITISH NOTES TO PAY 6 PER CENT HERE

New York, Jan. 19.—The public offering of the $250,000,000 6½ per cent one and two-year British notes, soon to be offered by a syndicate under the management of J. P. Morgan & Co. has been fixed at 99.52 and interest for the one-year issue, and 99.07 for the two year issue, making practically a 6 per cent yield in both cases.

Col. Harry C. Bishop and Lieut W. A. Robertson, jr., lost army aviators.

DISCRIMINATE AGAINST WOMEN IN U. S. JOBS

President Asked to Give House Information Regarding Extent Sex Figures in Changes

Washington Jan. 20—A resolution requesting President Wilson to inform the House to what extent sex is a factor in selections for appointments, for promotions, demotions and removals in the government service, was introduced today by Representative Keating of Colorado. He said that the purpose is to secure a square deal for the women in the federal service and to demonstrate the truth or falsity of the repeated charges that discrimination is practiced against women in the federal service because of their sex."

INCREASED USE OF SUBS URGED

Russian Diet Criticizes Government Mildly—Speakers Warn Neutrals to Stay Out of War to Finish.

Berlin Jan. 20 The Prussian diet took upon itself the role of critic of the government, which the reichstag, at its latest session, refrained from doing. The speech of Dr von Heydebrand, conservative leader, who is associated with the centrist and national-liberal parties, in favor of a more unrestricted use of submarines, was far more moderate than on earlier occasions, and was not characterized by attacks on the United States

Paul Breitenbach, minister of public works and the chancellor's second in the Prussian cabinet, said in a carefully worded declaration in behalf of the government

"This grave and difficult epoch requires ever renewed discussion of what ways and means are to be adopted."

It was commented that even Dr Von Heydebrand, in advocating unrestricted submarine warfare, demanded it at only such times as the emperor and Field Marshal von Hindenburg fould it to be advisable He said

"If we are to win a victory it is imperative to use the weapons which give us the possibility of winning a victory against the strongest adversary, England. * * * * If our military authorities, the higher command and the emperor, find it suitable and timely to make the necessary use of unlimited submarine warfare the German and Prussian people will be prepared to bear the consequences."

DEMANDS SUBMARINE ACTIVITY.

London, Jan. 20—A demand that neutral interests shall not be allowed to interfere with German's struggle for victory was made at the opening of the Prussian diet yesterday by Herr Friedberg, leader of the National Liberal party according to an Amsterdam dispatch to Reuter's. Herr Friedberg was one of a number of speakers who urged a vigorous prosecution of the war and increased submarine activity He said:

"We must expect from every neutral that he do not lay stress on his own interests, where for us it is a fight for existence. Such interests must not prevent us from gaining a peace that will satisfy German aspirations and safeguard the world from new and similar catastrophes."

Secure Peace by Sword.

Amsterdam (via London), Jan 19.—The Cologne Gazette, commenting on the note of Arthur Balfour, British secretary of foreign affairs, says:

"The note is a falsification of history, apparently aimed to wipe out the bad impression made in large circles of Americans and neutrals by the entente's rude reply to President Wilson. Naturally Balfour suppressed the fact that England possesses a world empire which certainly was not brought together by peaceful means. He suppresses the fact that a ring was drawn around Germany which was designed to exclude us, as far as possible, from the distribution of colonial territory still to be disposed of. He invents for this purpose a story of Germany's lust for world empire, without giving the least proof of his charges.

"We now know exactly the aims of the entente and our answer will be by deeds We do not want peace such as they offer, not even by neutral mediation. We ourselves will secure such a peace. Our sword will prove stronger than their lies."

The Cologne Volks Zeitung says:

"Our reply to English arrogance, distortions and menaces must be the sword and torpedo. Then the British will abandon writing notes and the world will be freed from the covetous tyrant, who has long been allowed to stretch his arms around the earth, and who, for centuries, has not shrunk from wicked and inhuman means to satisfy his lust for power and expansion."

ASK MORE POTATOES INSTEAD OF TURNIPS

Vorwaerts Says Miners Protest at Reduction in Spuds, Asking Old Ration Be Restored.

Amsterdam, (via London), Jan. 19.—The Berlin Vorwaerts says that four miners' federations have telegraphed the war feeding department, protesting against the reduction of the weekly potato ration from 5 to 3 pounds. The telegrams says that turnips are not a substitute for potatoes and ask the authorities to reestablish the former rations.

COST OF DYING GROWS: CIGARETS NOW HIGHER

New York, Jan. 19.—Increased prices for cigarets were announced here today by the United Cigar Stores company and the Tobacco products corporation. Advances by the United, to become effective next Monday, range from 1 to 3 cents a box of a dozen cigarets. The higher cost of labor, tobacco and wrappers material is given as the reason. The increases by the tobacco products corporation is effective at once, scale from 25 cents to $1 for each 1,000 cigarets.

Says Bible Reviews War; Germany to Win; Wheat Will Cost $5 a Bushel

Washington, Jan. 20—R. O. Alexander, a cotton broker of Charlotte, N. C., who describes himself as a "plain Scotch-Irish Presbyterian," spoke on "What the Word of God Says About This European War."

"The bible," said Mr. Alexander, "2,500 years ago gives an account of the war and says the United States will be invaded. It also tells us to prepare.

"The bible states that England is going to lose the fight and that Russia will change its position, and that dominion will be given Germany," said Mr. Alexander "The bible makes this all plain.

"The high cost of living, which is not local but world wide, is also explained in the bible. Before the high cost of food is over, wheat will be $4 and $5 a bushel."

ARMED MEN RIDE POTATO SPECIAL

Train Load of Tubers, Worth $35,000, Sent East From Colorado by Three Shippers.

Greeley, Colo. Jan. 20.—Armed guards are riding in every car of a special train of 45 cars loaded with potatoes, which today is speeding eastward. The value of the shipment is set at $35,000. It is made up of extra choice tubers loaded from points in this district. Three men participated in the shipment. The guards are required to tend stoves which have been placed in every car to prevent the shipment freezing as well as to prevent pilfering from the cars.

Portions of the shipment are bound for Kansas City, Nashville, Tenn; St. Louis, Topeka, Kansas, Cleveland, Toledo, Ohio; Peoria, Ill., and other northern and eastern points.

HALF MILLION MEN CAPTURED BY RUSSIA

Brussiloff's Operations Yield 80 Per Cent of Men and Guns Captured in 1916.

London, Jan. 20—More than 428,000 officers and men were taken prisoner by the Russians in the last year and 525 guns captured, according to the Russian service organ as quoted in a Central News dispatch from Petrograd today.

The Journal closes its review of the war operations during the year with the following approximate figures of men and booty taken:

"Officers, 8,770; men, 420,000, guns, 525; machine guns, 1,661; trench mortars and mine throwers, 421.

"More than 80 per cent of the foregoing was yielded by the operations of General Brussiloff."

NEW YORK BACKS MANN FOR SPEAKER OF HOUSE

Washington, Jan. 19.—Representative Greene, of Massachusetts, has sent out a formal call to republican members and members-elect of the House for a conference Wednesday night to consider Representative Gardner's proposal for a constructive legislative program and probable discussion of a republican candidate for speaker of the next House.

It became known last night that at a recent meeting of the New York state republicans called to discuss revenue the delegation pledged itself to support Republican Leader Mann solidly for speaker of the next House.

FOUR DEAD IN GUN FIGHT

Okmulgee, Okla., Jan 19.—A posse of 10 men, which left here early today to search for alleged bank robbers, returned about noon with the dead bodies of Oscar Poe, Will Hart and Harry Hart. The men killed were engaged in a skirmish with the posse about 18 miles southwest of this city

Chief Roach, sheriff, and Mel Bowman, chief of police, led the posse. Bowman died as a result of a bullet in the head.

DEPORTED BELGIANS HELP GERMAN ARMY?

Rules Forbid Them Giving Location to Families—Many Die From Overwork.

New York, Jan 20 -A postal censorship affecting deported Belgian workers has been established by the Germans, according to a cablegram received from the Belgian government in Havre, France, by Pierre Mali, the Belgian consul here. A translation of the message was made public today by Mr. Mali. It reads:

"Official German record of the military zone in Belgium, under date of December 15, publishes a set of regulations for the postal service of the deported workers, prohibiting their mention to their families of their place of work. This seeming to indicate that they are working for the German army.

"A new batch of deported working people from Ghent were returned to Ghent sick and several dying. They relate unheard of sufferings on the German frontiers, and considerable mortality owing to exhaustion from forced labor."

CONVENING OF DUMA DELAYED ANOTHER MONTH

London, Jan. 19.—According to a Russian semiofficial news agency, an imperial ukase has been issued setting the date for the convening of the duma and the council of the empire for February 27 A former ukase fixed the date at January 25.

KILLS MAN WHO AIDED HIM TO OBTAIN FOOD

Cleveland, Ohio, Jan. 19.—Pangs of hunger drove Lawrence Southall, 14, a Chicago orphan, to murder Charles H. James, 40, a car inspector, who had befriended him here late last night, the boy confessed today, say the police. The boy took refuge in the railroad yards. Nearly frozen, he was taken into the inspector's shanty by James to warm himself. He says he attacked James to get money for something to eat

TAX ON PROFITS BRINGS FINE ROW

Corporations Charge Agricultural Sections Are Favored in Raising Money for Deficit.

Washington, Jan. 20—The plan to increase the revenues through an excess profits tax, which was urged on the ways and means democrats by Secretary McAdoo and finally accepted by them, is stirring up all kinds of protest Congress is being fooled with letters and messages objecting to the tax by persons interested in corporations. These are coming from various parts of the country. Southern companies are bitterly protesting among others.

It is charged that Chairman Kitchin, of the ways and means committee, agreed to the excess profits tax because he is from an agricultural and not a manufacturing district.

Some democratic members in the House are already declaring they will not go into caucus on it and it looks as if there would be a fine row over it.

LEGISLATURE WOULD CHANGE CONSTITUTION

Few Senators Oppose Constitutional Convention to Carry Out Program of Majority.

Bismarck, N. D., Jan. 20—Only the votes of a mere handful of holdover senators now stand in the way of the complete realization of the legislative program as it was indorsed by the voters of the state at two elections held last year. In the house there is little objection to the outlined program, which includes the revision of the constitution to the outlined program which includes the revision of the constitution of the state via the constitutional convention route. Nineteen senators have signed up for the league program and are pledged for the constitutional convention. But there is a membership of 49 in the upper house and the nonleague members are able to block the program at the present time.

The proposition of the league is that the house and senate shall resolve itself into a constitutional convention, which it has full legal authority to do, according to their best legal advisers, work out a new constitution and then submit it to the people for their final approval.

Senate Goes Into Executive Session to Consider Resolution Growing Out of Breaking Confidence

Washington Jan 20—Senator Newlands acknowledged to the Senate today that it was he who furnished to Interstate Commerce Commissioner Daniels, while it was yet held confidential, the executive session speech of Senator Cummins attacking the commissioner's confirmation

Opponents of Commissioner Daniels contend that by having possession of the speech he was enabled to prepare a reply

After the statement of Senator Newlands, the Senate went into executive session to consider the resolution of Senator Norris to investigate the disclosures of the speech.

PACKERS IGNORANT OF INDUSTRY—FISHER

Heads of Great Business by Inheritance, They Know Nothing of Underlying Principles.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Jan. 19.—"The most amazing situation in the civilized world is the utter ignorance of the heads, by inheritance, of five of the nation's greatest packing concerns, of the economic principles underlying the industries they direct," said Walter L. Fisher, former secretary of the interior, counsel for the American National Live Stock association, commenting on the report of that committee to the association here. Mr. Fisher was addressing the annual convention of the association.

ACCEPT 'PERSONAL SHIPMENTS'--RULE

Consignee, However, Must Sign Receipt—Means Reduction of Two-Thirds, Officials Say.

Des Moines, Jan 19.—The amount of booze shipped into Iowa will be reduced two-thirds by the agreement entered into by railroad attorneys with Attorney General Havner to the effect that the common carriers shall not accept shipments of liquor for Iowa points, except for personal use according to railroad officials. The roads will deliver no booze unless the consignee personally appears and signs a receipt at the station.

The new arrangement will go into effect on all roads and express companies by February 1

When liquor is delivered for personal use, the consignee must personally sign the receipt at the station, in the case of the railway company, or in the presence of the expressman who delivers the booze in the delivery zones in the cities, in the case of the express companies, according to the agreement

Shuts Out Commercial Booze.

No railroad shall accept for shipment any liquor which is intended for sale in Iowa. In case of doubt, the railroad or express company will refuse to accept the liquor.

Liquor for personal use will be delivered by the common carriers upon consignee personally signing a receipt pending the decision of the Iowa supreme court in an appeal taken in a case decided on Wednesday by Judge Utterback of the Polk District court, in which he held that the carriers are prohibited under the Webb-Kenyon decision to accept liquor for delivery in Iowa for personal use or for sale.

A committee of lawyers representing the carriers will present an appeal on behalf of the persons claiming the liquor destroyed by Judge Utterback. The department of justice, as appellee, will present the appeal on behalf of the state. In order to get a decision immediately a motion will be made to advance the case in the high court.

High Court to Decide.

On the decision of the supreme court will depend the continuance of the acceptance of liquor for delivery for personal use in Iowa, by the carriers. If the high court sustains Judge Utterback, the liquor traffic will be stopped, with the exception of the small amount which might be brought into the state by means of automobiles or other vehicles across the state line

CAPITOL EXTENSION FIGHT STILL IN LIMELIGHT

Des Moines, Ia., Jan. 19.—The capitol extension fight is not yet ended. Senator George W Ball, of Fairfield, renewed his fight on this matter today. He introduced in the Senate a bill which will authorize the state executive council to sell all of the newly acquired capitol extension ground beyond certain limits, which would reduce the tract from 73 acres to 50 acres. A similar bill was introduced in the house by Representative Rowley, of Van Buren A large part of the ground in the original tract has already been cleared and graded.

Senator Whitmore introduced a bill which would repeal all future levies of the extension tax, starting next year. The measure would cut $760,000 in the extension funds.

RECLAIM WAIST TOWN LANDS

The question of using idle city lands for food production is just now engaging the attention of the people of England, as it has already done those of Germany, and efforts are being made to conserve this potential source of wealth.

It is estimated that in the city of London alone there are 14,000 acres of idle land, capable of producing annually $500 worth of foodstuffs per acre—an amazing total of $7,000,000 yearly.

In connection with the high cost of living this item of news should carry a potent lesson for every town and city in our own country

The subject is full of possibilities for THIS town

Have you, reader, ever tried to estimate how many acres of idle land there are in this town—in OUR town? Take a drive some time and count the vacant lots that are now given over to weeds, old tin cans and rubbish generally Try to reduce this combined area to acres. Calculate the possibilities of these acres, and then you will see what the people of THIS TOWN are annually allowing to slip through their fingers for want of a little energy.

It is folly to protest against the high cost of living when we are neglecting the means lying right at our doors of largely alleviating those conditions.

Almost any family can cultivate from a quarter to half an acre of ground, and a quarter or half acre will produce vegetables and small fruits for most any family for the entire year.

Look around you and locate the men who are the loudest against the prevailing high prices. Are they the men who have cultivated good gardens and truck patches? No, indeed! These men have cellars well stored with sweet and Irish potatoes; they have probably raised and fattened a pig or two. they have fruits and vegetables canned and preserved, and are really LIVING AT HOME. And they don't have nightmares near the end of the month over the grocery bill that must be paid on the first.

Let us have a revival of gardening interest in this town this year. Let's every one of us who have a few square feet or yards of soil see to it that the soil produces this summer all of which it is capable. If we have no surplus ground of our own, then let's rent a vacant lot from some neighbor and turn it into food for the family.

Many people in this town buy all of their groceries and provisions from the stores and from peddlers, paying out large sums in the run of a year, while they have ample land lying idle from which they could supply a majority of their wants in this line. This is not only poor economy, but it is rank extravagence.

But that is the way of the average American citizens. He buys beans and raises cockle burrs. He buys potatoes and raises dog fennel In short, he buys all he has to eat and raises hell generally over the prices he has to pay.

An important phase of the question lies in the splendid possibilities for health afforded by the congenial task of gardening.

Every dweller in a city or small town should, if possible, acquire a piece of ground to work through the summer, be it ever so small An hour or two of diligent work in the soil is nature's finest tonic. It will dissipote the worst case of grouch, it is a perfect liver regulator, cures dyspepsia, is an excellent remedy for rheumatism, and makes you feel that life is really worth living.

Let's get down to the business of conservation in earnest. A bushel of potatoes will yield as much nutriment and energy is raised in one's own garden as if bought at the store. Beans and peas, cabbages, lettuce, radishes, strawberries, etc., coming fresh from your garden are not to be compared with the average dejected looking article usually found in the market.

So while we are urging the country to reclaim the waste lands, let us reclaim our own waste territory. It will conserve our health; it will lighten the strain on our income; and last, but by no means least, it will aid largely in beautifying our town.

Now what do YOU think about it?

YOUR BOY'S CHUM

If you are a father, are you acquainted with your boy's chum? Do you know him to be fit company for your son?

Every normal boy has singled out from his friends and acquaintances one particular chum. This chum is his "other self," all of the "other self" he will have until years of maturity develop in him the sex attraction.

If you have studied boy nature, or even if you can recall your own boyhood days, you must know that they are the days wherein the lasting impressions of life are formed. It is also the period when the domination of a strong personality is most potent for good or evil over a weaker or more plastic nature.

Have you studied your boy's chum? It may be almost as necessary as a study of the boy himself. Is that chum all you could wish him to be? Is he stronger, or weaker, of purpose and character than your boy? If stronger, all the more reason for you to know his real character, for he is as sure to impress his personality upon your son as that strength overcomes weakness.

The boy rarely develops habits or traits of character acquired from mere chance acquaintances or from strangers. It is from his intimates that he absorbs ideas that become fixed in the mind and develop into character. Hence the imperative necessity that those intimates be of right character.

Some think it is a risky business to attempt to regulate a son's friendships. Admittedly so, yet you have it in your power to in a large degree control the matter.

Every normal boy has great respect for his father, provided that father is deserving of his respect The first step, therefore, is to secure and deserve the boy's confidence accomplished, a little tactful consideration on your together with a personal interest in his every day life to give you control of the situation.

But the surest way to control the matter is to endear yourself to the boy's chum. This can be done if the matter is taken in hand early in the boy's life.

To every young boy his father is a model of perfection first boyhood ambition is to imitate father. If that father deserving of imitation and will cultivate his boy's confidence the problem is solved.

Every father should seek first place in his boy's confidence He should make certain that he stands higher in the boy's regard than all others. And as the years pass he should see to it that the bond is strengthened instead of weakened this can only be done by fully entering into the life of the boy and by making his life your life.

It will pay better than any other investment you can make

Green and Dishonest

The sensational case of the shooting of L. D. Dierks, and the firing of the new home on his place northwest of Montgomery, a fortnight ago, was cleared up on New Year's day when the young man confessed to being his own supposed blackmailer and enemy and doing the job himself. He plead guilty to the charge against him before the court on Tuesday and was sentenced to serve twenty-four hours in the county jail and pay a fine of $500 and costs, which amounted to $595 62. He completed his sentence Wednesday evening paid his fine and left for the home of his mother at Clinton, Iowa.

The confession was brought about by the work of Sheriff Brailfield, County Attorney H. F. Narey and Detective Joel who was brought in here on the case. Soon after the authorities started in on the case the young man's story appeared to have holes in it and the farther they investigated the more wholesome it appeared that he had done it himself. The first of the week he was wired to come to Spirit Lake from Clinton where he went to spend the holidays, and after a little grueling confessed to the job.

He says in his confession he needed the money and he felt the new home more than he needed and by firing it and getting the insurance of $2500 he could meet his pending obligations.

He piled a lot of old clothing in one of the back room closets, poured oil over them and fired it, immediately following which he shot himself and drove to the Ramsey home.

Some of the things that led up to the request for the confession was that the young man purchased a box of 22-short cartridges only the Friday night before, and upon an X-ray examination a 22-short bullet was located in his arm. Another thing was that the boy would not consent and that the bullet had entered his right arm from the inside, had passed around the muscles and lodged just above the elbow. All together it was found to be an impossibility for any one to shoot the young man where he was shot while he was in a sitting posture.

Young Dierks has always borne a very good reputation in his community and his associates can hardly believe as yet that he would do the deed.—Spirit Lake Beacon.

SECRET OF THEIR SUCCESS

Herman [illegible], advertising manager for a large mail-order concern in Chicago, recently told the members of the American Ad Club the methods by which that company and others in trade. He said:

"We have a bureau whose duty it is to read each week, the country newspapers from all over the country. To keep track of any conditions in our trade territory that our agents do not get. This bureau looks over these papers and when we find a town where the local merchants are not advertising in the local paper we roam rarely flood that territory with our literature. It always brings results far in excess of the same effort put forth in territory where the local merchants all the time use the local paper.

A Powerful Bird

"No," said Mrs. Viddles, authoritatively, "the turkey is not appropriate for Christmas. The turkey is the Thanksgiving bird. At Christmas time the goose or young pig is the proper thing."

"I would consider the matter very carefully before I invested in a goose," observed Viddles. "Whenever I feel that I would like to invest in a goose I remember the experience of poor, dear, old Mutsky two years ago.

"A goose my dear, is mostly feathers. Mrs Mutsky reminded Mutsky of that fact when he first proposed goose for the Christmas dinner. He wouldn't listen to her. He made up his mind to have one, and he did. He bargained with a farmer to bring it in alive as he said he would pick the feathers off it himself.

"Poor, dear, old Mutsky allowed himself lots of time, but not time enough. He told me afterward that there were nine barrels of feathers on that goose. They were light and airy feathers and as soon as they were plucked they soared in the air. People in the neighborhood thought it was snowing. But there were feathers still left on the goose after old Mutsky had worked hard harvesting them for eight hours.

"He finally gave up and sent the piece de resistance into the kitchen with plenty of feathers still ungarnered. He had an awful backache.

"And that wasn't all. When the goose was brought onto the table there wasn't a knife on the place that could scratch the hide of it. So Mutsky gathered up all the knives and took them down into the basement, got out his tools and proceeded to sharpen them before making another attack.

"It so happened that Mutsky had had trouble with his neighbor the day before on account of their different opinions about the war——"

"There wasn't any war two years ago Christmas!" snickered Mrs Viddles.

"Well-er-I allude to the Mexican war," explained Viddles. "As I was saying they had a misunderstanding or two and when the neighbors happened to glance thru Mutsky's basement window saw him sharpening all those knives so intently, he thought there was about to be an uprising or a massacre. Christmas day became a day of horror to that neighbor of Mutsky's.

"But altho Mutsky sharpened these knives to a razor like fitness, they made no more impression on the goose than water would have made on its back if it had been alive and well."

Hints.

"The magazines are full of Christmas hints," remarked the opulent woman patient.

"Yes, they are," remarked the trained nurse. "But for my part I prefer to publish my own hints. My two nieces purpose to have their pictures taken and give them away for Christmas presents. It seems to me that you might as well send a person some of your own poetry for a present as a photograph of yourself.

"So when I heard the girls threatening to give me photographs I told them I didn't want anything to stand on a mantlepiece. I told them, too, that no one who sent me things to stand on a mantel would get any earrings or ornaments of any kind from me. I said that all photos were excess baggage and that people who distributed them were vain enough without any encouragement in the shape of gewgaws for their hair and necks.

"'The people who get jewelry from me,' I said, 'will be the ones who give me sensible things. I have it fixed with the jeweler on the corner and he knows what to do as soon as I phone him.

"'I have needed a new black silk petticoat for a long time' I said, 'and they are on sale at Shillings' now for $3.45. I always need stockings, size 7. And next summer I will need a couple of light weight union suits, size 6, and you can get them at Dippy's for $1.2[illegible] He is having a sale now. And I need about six nurse's aprons.'

"The only way you can get what you want is to let your wants be known. If you want a rocking chair say so. If you don't say so again. There is no need of getting what you don't want at Christmas time.

"I hated to be rough, but I would get photographs for Christmas sure, if I hadn't rebelled at the prospect. It was a severe blow to the girls, they did so want to have their pictures taken."

"Then why not give them photographs of themselves for your gift to them?" asked the opulent woman patient. "Let your nieces get their pictures taken and keep them all themselves. You could give them a half-dozen apiece for about $18."

Approximating the Ultimate With Aunt Sarah

From Life

Aunt Sarah was sixty-three years old. Uncle John was sixty four years old.

If you spoke to Aunt Sarah about any new fringe on the tapestry of the intellectual loom she would say:

"Oh, yes, we 'proximated that line of thought in 1893. It is near, but not quite the ultimate."

If you spoke to Uncle John about Schopenhauer he would reply:

"I don't take much stock in them new fangled cultivators."

Uncle John and Aunt Sarah had lived together in the old homestead for thirty-eight years.

Aunt Sarah always had intellectual curiosity. She had left the old Baptist church in her girlhood to join a Joy cult; she had followed with her mental telescope the [illegible] trajectory of William James's flight through the philosophic heavens of America; she had known about [illegible] before the newspapers had made the subject popular knowledge, and she had played in the musty, rickety garret of occultism at a time when the most daring minds in science were sitting tight in the seats of the scoffers. But there was a shadow in the sunlight of Aunt Sarah's mental [illegible], an opaque spot in the [illegible] of her mysticism, an unresolved seventh in the harmony of [illegible] life in the Wisconsin backwoods—

[illegible] to Uncle John!

At [illegible] o'clock in the [illegible] of June 1, 1[illegible], Aunt [illegible] from [illegible] Pennsylvania Ways and [illegible]" as Uncle John entered the kitchen door. Uncle John had just come from performing the vespertine chores.

"[illegible], we shall have to get a divorce!" said Aunt Sarah, shutting Bennett with determination. "Marriage is a worn out convention; it is only one of the [illegible] foolish folk ways that hinder the advancement of science among the masses."

"Very well [illegible]."

"We will get a divorce."

"I quite agree, my [illegible]."

"Don't attempt to [illegible] with me, John. I said that we would get a divorce."

Uncle John shook his head. "When will it be?" he asked.

"Tomorrow."

Uncle John smiled, dropping his armful of kindling into the wood box behind the kitchen range, and began to lay the Brobdingnagian bandana handkerchief that served them for a table cloth.

Aunt Sarah finished the preparation of the bacon and onions and set the coffee pot back when it began to boil.

After supper Uncle John read the seed catalog and Aunt Sarah resumed her Bennett.

The following afternoon Judge Thompson, who lived in the biggest and best house in the little county seat, was surprised to see from his chair in the big bay window an antiquated carriage drawn by a retired farm horse draw up before his cast-iron negro hitching post. In the carriage were Aunt Sarah and Uncle John.

Judge Thompson was on the porch in time to receive his guests.

"We've come to get a divorce," said Aunt Sarah, with a direct gaze; then she added, with the sang froid of one who is wise, "What'll it cost?"

The judge motioned them to seats in the wicker chairs on the porch, and then replied:

"But you must have grounds——"

"Everybody knows it. Incompatibility of temperament."

And the judge, smiling, humored Aunt Sarah, for he knew her and the community in which she lived. "It will cost you just ten dollars," he said.

"Make out the papers," Aunt Sarah replied.

One hour later Uncle John and Aunt Sarah left the judge's house together, separated for life.

Moses, their horse, looked at them out of one corner of his good eye as they approached the carriage.

Uncle John paused, but Aunt Sarah stepped firmly into the vehicle.

Uncle John followed her and took up the reins.

Moses knew the way home by a clairvoyant sense, and he took that way at his own peace of prophet like dignity.

At the door of the old homestead Uncle John handed Aunt Sarah down from her seat in silence. Then he put Moses into his stall. And when he returned to the house he found Aunt Sarah beaming upon him through her gold rimmed spectacles from her place at the table, which was loaded with a supper such as she alone could cook.

Aunt Sarah was jubilant. She was living at last with a man to whom she was not married; no longer was there a blot on the 'scutcheon of her intellectual progress; no longer did a black beetle mar the pellucid amber of her simple life of Advanced Ideas; no longer could the acolytes, in off moments when they were not engaged in trundling the spheres through the macrocosm, gaze sternly down upon her through interstellar space and say:

"Aunt Sarah is nearly, but not quite, an intellectual."

If some people knew how little they know, they would probably talk less.

With the Fingers! Says Corns Lift Out Without Any Pain

Sore corns, hard corns, soft corns or any kind of a corn can shortly be lifted right out with the fingers if you will apply on the corn a few drops of freezone, says a Cincinnati authority.

A little cost one can get a small bottle of freezone at any drug store, which will positively rid one's feet of every corn or callus without pain or soreness or the danger of infection.

The new drug is an ether compound and dries the moment it is applied and does not inflame or even irritate the surrounding skin. Just think! You can lift off your corns and calluses now without a bit of pain or soreness. If your druggist hasn't freezone he can easily get a small bottle for you from his wholesale drug house.—adv.

Richmond, Ind.—"For two years I was so sick and weak with troubles from my age that when going up stairs I had to go very slowly with my hands on the steps, then sit down at the top to rest. The doctor said he thought I should have an operation, and my friends thought I would not live to move into our new house. My daughter asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as she had taken it with good results. I did so, my weakness disappeared, I gained in strength, moved into our new home, did all kinds of garden work, shoveled dirt, did building and cement work, and raised hundreds of chickens and ducks. THE BASIS OF CANADA'S RICHES

A Theme Discussed by the Wall Street Journal.

In speaking of Canada a short time ago the Wall Street Journal made the statement that "The basis of Canada's riches is the fertility of the soil and no freak of warfare can injure that which her grain will increase in demand as the population of the world grows. As an investment field Canada is worthy of consideration." These words are well worthy of attention, especially coming from such a source as this eminent financial journal. With a land area exceeding that of the United States and with tillable areas coming under cultivation, the wealth of Canada's future can scarcely be estimated while the wealth today is such as to bring her most prominently before the world

During the past year thousands of farmers in Western Canada sold their crops for more than the total cost of their land Lands at from $15 to $30 an acre produced crops worth $40 to $75 an acre Stock raising and dairying were equally profitable

The year 1915 saw most wonderful crops and magnificent yields over the entire country, and many farmers wiped out indebtednesses that had hung over them long before they came to the country and the year 1916 put them in a condition of absolute independence. A report to hand verified by a high official might seem marvelous, were the particulars not well known, and where are not other cases that would seem almost as phenomenal This is a southern Alberta story; A farmer wished to rent an adjoining farm on which a loan company held a mortgage. The applicant said he wanted the first ten bushels of wheat, after which he would divide, giving the loan company one-third. After threshing he paid into the bank at Calgary $10 per acre for every acre cultivated to the credit of the loan company, as their share or their third of the crop. Sixteen dollars per acre rent His two-thirds was $32 and in addition the first ten bushels of wheat. Land on this same security can be purchased for from $16 to $30 per acre Wonderful yields are reported from all parts of this district. Recently 4,640 acres of a ranch were sold to an Illinois farmer, 300 acres of wheat in 1916 produced a yield that averaged 42½ bushels of wheat per acre. George Richard, formerly of Providence, R. I., on a southern Alberta farm got 2,052 bushels of wheat from a 50-acre field, or over 40 bushels per acre, and from a 50-acre field of oats got a return of 76 bushels per acre and still had some sheaves left over for feeding.

A report just issued by the Alberta government gives the yield of wheat in the showing of 1916 as 28 bushels per acre, 45 bushels of oats and 30 bushels of barley.

Travelers through Alberta's wheat belt have had revealed to them scenes of agricultural productiveness unapproached in any other part of the world.

Alberta farms, selected with even moderate discretion, have raised men to independence and affluence with records of wonderful development unsurpassed amongst the phenomenal industrial success of which Canada well may boast.

Many almost incredible yields have been reported by reliable authorities, wheat exceeding 70 bushels per acre and oats 145 bushels.

Numerous records show that the cost of farms has been more than repaid by this year's crop. In one instance, land purchased for $3,200 produced wheat which was sold for a little over $10,000.

During the year 1917 there will be an immense amount of labor required to take care of the crop in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta

One of the problems which Western Canada has to face every year is the securing of an adequate supply of labor to handle the harvesting and threshing of its big crops. This problem, indeed, is always present in any country that has a big agricultural production; in the case of Western Canada it is enhanced by the comparative sparsity of population and the long distance from industrial districts, which can be expected to offer a surplus of labor.

In Western Canada the present difficulties are increased by the war. A very large number of Western Canada's small population have enlisted for service with the Canadian forces in Europe, and at the present time there is generally speaking no surplus of labor for the ordinary channels of industry, to say nothing of the abnormal demands of harvest time. The situation, however, has to some extent been met by the action of the Canadian militia department, who have released all such men who are still in training in the western military camps and who desire to engage in harvest work for a period of generally one month.

The actual number of men engaged in 1916 in harvest work was between forty and fifty thousand. Wages were higher than usual, running from $2.50 to $4.00 a day with board, and from $35 to $60 a month.—Advertisement.

HEALTH HINTS OF 1756.

Smollett was born in 1721. About 1758 he wrote a book, "Humphrey Clinker," which was very popular in its day and is still read The work takes the form of a series of letters written his friends by an English traveler. Many of the letters are to Dr Lewis.

His views on vacations can be inferred from the following: "I have ever found a change of company as necessary as a change of air to promote a vigorous circulation of the spirits, which is the very essence and criterion of good health."

That infection was recognized in that day is shown by the following: "We cannot even sleep without risk of infection I say infection—this place is the rendezvous of the diseases—you won't deny that many diseases are infectious, even the consumption itself is highly infectious When a person dies of it in Italy the bed and bedding are destroyed, the other furniture is exposed to the weather and the apartment is whitewashed before it is occupied by another living soul. You'll allow that nothing receives infection sooner or retains it longer than blankets feather beds, and mattresses"

Smollett has many comments to make on bad ventilation and bad air generally That there was need of a food department in his day is shown by a letter in which he contrasts the simple, wholesome food of his home in the country with the adulterated, sophisticated food of London

"The good people are not ignorant of the adulteration, but they prefer it to wholesome bread because it is whiter than the meal of corn The miller or baker is obliged to poison them and their families in order to live by his profession. Of the fish I need say nothing in this hot weather but that it comes 60, 70 four score and 100 miles by land carriage. This is not the season for oysters, nevertheless it may not be amiss to mention that the right Colchester are kept in slime pits occasionally overflowed by the sea, and that the green color so much admired by voluptuaries of this metropolis is occasioned by the vitriolic scum which rises on the surface of the stagnant and stinking water."

The policy of floating oysters was already in vogue, though whitness rather than greenness is an indication that the oyster has been floated

"But the milk itself must not pass unanalyzed, the produce of faded cabbage leaves and sour draff, lowered with hot water, frothed with bruised snails, carried through the streets in open pails, exposed to four rinsings, discharged from doors and windows . . . overflowing from mudcarts, spatterings from coach wheels, dirt from trash chucked into it by roguish boys for the joke's sake, the spewing of infants who have slobbered in the tin measure, which is thrown back in that condition among the milk for the benefit of the next customer"

After a recital which touches upon nearly every article of food, Smollett concludes

"Now, all these enormities might be remedied with a very little attention to the article of police or civil regulation but the wise patriots of London have taken it into their heads that all regulation is inconsistent with liberty and that every man ought to live in his own way without restraint."

On Taxing Homes.

From the Wichita Eagle

A reader at Lasita, Kan., wants to have the laws changed so as to do away with the present evil of double taxation His contention is that home owning is discouraged by our laws.

His contention is correct.

A man borrows money for home building and pays taxes on that home. The money lender has to pay taxes on the mortgage, so he sticks on an extra 2 per cent or so to the interest rate to protect his own welfare. Thus the home builder pays double tax That is wrong

It is also wrong that he be penalized in other ways for building a home and other improvements.

As a matter of fact, it would be no more than right to exempt homes and improvements from taxation altogether The home is not a money making project, but a builder of the best citizenship, and home owning should be encouraged. Under present laws it is discouraged.

The unearned increment should be taxed Under present laws in Kansas, the man who allows his land to lie idle gets the benefit of the increased value which is brought about by the work of his neighbors. Every home, every improvement put on real estate enhances the value of surrounding property. While the improver is spending money on things that will be taxed, the man with the idle property is reaping the benefit. Thus the man who improves his property is penalized.

Other countries where social justice laws are highly developed tax the unearned increment. It is in the interest of the man who works his farm, the city dweller who builds his own home.

[The progressive party took up this question in Kansas but it has largely gone out of business there—on other issues. Still there is enough in this one contention to change Kansas again.]

Bob and the Snowball.

Once upon a time Bob's mother put on his nice warm coat, his red mittens and his fur cap and told him he might go out and play in the yard

Bob took his snow shovel and dug a nice path and made piles of snow in the corner. At last he said to himself, "I will try and make a big, big snowball and show it to mother, and I am sure she will think it so pretty she will want to keep it on the table where she can see it all the time.

He took a handful of snow and patted it quite hard and round, and then rolled it until it was a big, hard ball. He ran into the house to show it, but found his mother had gone on an errand, so he went into the other room to watch for her.

At last he saw her coming and ran to meet her crying out: "Mother I have made the biggest snowball you ever saw. Come quick and see it."

He took hold of her hand and led her into the room and there in the corner was the snowball, not at all where he left it, and oh, so much smaller.

How did that happen? He was sure he had put it on the table and it was such a big one, too. He started to cry, when he saw his little kitten go up to the snowball and with her paw roll it across the room.

Now he knew how it had gotten on the floor and knew kitty had been playing with it, for across the floor were little puddles of water. He looked very cross at her until she reached out her paw again and hit the ball then she drew back and put her paw in her mouth as much as to say: "What makes my paw so cold?" and mother burst out laughed and said, "Doesn't she look funny, Bob?" so of course Bob had to laugh, too.

Overalls a Kitchen Uniform.

From the Milwaukee Sentinel.

Racine, Wis.—Racine women have taken to overalls. One dealer said he had just sold 20 pairs of overalls to the women, who have discovered their adaptability for housework.

"Why, it seems so much easier to get around in these things," said one fair convert to the costume.

An enterprising merchant thought the idea a good one, and he advertised accordingly. Now many Racine women are wearing the new kitchen uniform and wondering why they didn't think of the scheme long ago.

FILIPINOS EAGER TO ASSERT OWN AUTHORITY

Manila, P. I., (by mail.)—The work of the first Philippine congress is largely concerning itself with reorganization of the government along more independent lines Heretofore all legislative measures in the Philippines have begun with the words "by authority of the congress of the United States, be it enacted by the Philippine legislature." One of the first measures passed by the new insular congress was a change to read "the senate and house of representatives in congress assembled, decrees," etc., meaning of course, that the Filipino congress is now acting on its own authority

A bill for the organization of six executive departments has passed both houses of congress. The departments are those of public instruction, interior, finance, justice, agriculture and natural resources, and commerce and communications. The department of public instruction is to be headed by an appointee by the president of the United States who will be vice governor of the Philippines, and the insular congress will have no voice in his naming, but the other departments may be headed by local appointees who will probably be selected from the Filipino congress. The bill provides that the bureau of civil service shall be under the direct control of the governor general a measure designed to keep the bureau from the contamination of politics

The new department heads will comprise the cabinet of the governor general and be responsible to him, but their presence may be required by either house of congress which, in this way, hopes to keep final control of their actions in its own hands.

The congress is endeavoring to avoid "filibusters" and the senate has adopted a rule that no member may use more than three hours in speaking on a measure after two senators of the minority have spoken and a vote of the majority may close the debate

Hare and Tortoise.

From the Chicago Evening Post

The story of the race between the hare and the tortoise preserves in fable the common belief that steady persistence is often victor where more brilliant gifts with less tenacity fail

One of the last experiments of the late Professor Muensterberg tested the validity of this theory He put each member of a class of 276 students on the psychological vivisection table. After careful examination, he graded the men according to their mental capacities. He made three groups—high, moderate and low

With the grading completed, he turned to the records of the class and compared each man's mental grade with the actual results achieved by him in class work. The comparison was illuminating The men who had won a high grade under the psychological tests, with a few notable exceptions, made a quite inadequate showing in scholarship, the men of medium or low grade, on the other hand had the better records for real achievement The tortoises outran the hares.

Fable is not wrong in its inference that natural gifts may be an obstacle to substantial accomplishment Professor Muensterberg's experiments were scarcely necessary to demonstrate this, but they give interesting scientific confirmation to a truth that popular observation has generalized The men whose lack of native aptitude forces them to grind and plug acquire the habit of thorough industry, and win the fruits of it, the men whose native brilliance seems to make hard work needless fall into the way of relying upon talent and neglect application Everybody is familiar with the orator whose facility for utterance makes careful preparation unnecessary and everybody knows that he seldom says anything worth remembering

Brilliant mental capacity is not a sufficient substitute for hard mental effort, and Professor Muensterberg did not fail to emphasize the serious lesson of his experiments—the fact that we lose the value of brilliant minds when they are not harnessed to hard work Grateful as we may be for the worth-while achievements of the less brilliant plugger, his work cannot do what might be done by the more gifted mind plus industry

It is a problem deserving consideration of our educationalists—how to make college work evoke the best that is in the superaverage mind We have done much to encourage the dull, the necessarily laborious student. We have eased the way for the tortoises, but we must not neglect the hares who are tempted by their natural capacity for speed to loiter by the road.

Snow.

When I was young I viewed the snow with dancing eyes and heart aglow. It meant that I could slide and coast, with all the happy schoolboy host, and mould the snow into a sphere and soak some old gent in the ear. The falling of the sparkling snow meant joy and laughter long ago. I, being young, was not aware, of sorrow in the world, or care, and all I wished, beneath the sun, was just to have all kinds of fun. But now I'm old I view the snow, and think of suffering and woe. I sit in comfort by the fire, and punch the sawdust from my lyre, but others, by an empty grate, are shivering and cussing fate; and little kids, too thinly clad, are trudging through the snowy grad; and poor old men feel rheumatiz through all their joints and tendons whiz. And there are widows needing spuds, and down-and-outers needing duds. There's so much grief, there's so much dearth, whenever snow enshrouds the earth! But there's a little one can do, to make the wintry day less blue. I'll send some plunder to the poor, to those who suffer and endure!

Gains from Universal Training.

From the Chicago News.

Some persons assert that a system of universal military training would produce an army of reservists out of all proportion to the nation's needs. They ignore the physical and mental benefits which such training, properly applied in its elementary stages, would bestow on the growing youth of the country. They also ignore the fact that national preparedness involves very much besides drill in fighting Every skilled worker properly fitted into the national system of defense is an important element in that system. The nation's reserve forces should embrace all persons whose work is necessary in the successful waging of war.

Philander P. Claxton, United States commissioner of education, said recently, in commenting on the necessity of building up the nation physically: "I was told by a recruiting officer for the United States marine corps that 41,000 men were examined in order to obtain 4,000 recruits. At that rate, with 21,000,000 men in the United States, we would have only 2,000,000 for defense." This is an extreme statement, but it indicates a condition of things that is well known to others besides recruiting officers.

If high physical standards were set as a goal for all the young men of this nation it would benefit the people in innumerable ways. Modern conditions in times of peace as well as conditions under the stress of war demand that a larger measure of strength and health be maintained and that the youth of the land be taught as a class how to be sound in body and manly in bearing has three members you should know if you desire to enjoy life.

1. The popular liquid form of Peruna—the reliable tonic of the American household, with a long history of success in treating all catarrhal difficulties.

2. The tablet form, which is made after the same formulary and is more convenient for many.

3. Manalin, the ideal laxative, by the regular use of which constipation may be overcome and natural action restored. Manalin has no habit forming drug, but is an aid to nature.

Your druggist has all three. So many thousands have received benefit from the use of one or both these remedies that they are a recognized part of the equipment of every careful household.

TO LIVE LONG!

A recipe given by a famous physician for long life was: "Keep the kidneys in good order! "Try to eliminate thru the skin and intestines the poisons that otherwise clog the kidneys. Avoid eating meat as much as possible; avoid too much salt, alcohol, tea. Try a milk and vegetable diet. Drink plenty of water, and exercise so you sweat—the skin helps to eliminate the toxic poisons and uric acid."

For those past middle life, for those easily recognized symptoms of inflammation, as backache, scalding "water," or if uric acid in the blood has caused rheumatism, "rusty" joints, stiffness, get Anuric at the drug store. This is a wonderful eliminator of uric acid and was discovered by Dr. Pierce of Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y. If your druggist does not keep it send 10 cents to Dr. Pierce for trial package and you will find that it is many times more potent than lithia and that it dissolves uric acid as hot water does sugar.

ACTRESS TELLS SECRET.

A well known actress gives the following recipe for gray hair. To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo Compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and make it soft and glossy It will not color the scalp, is not stick or greasy, and does not rub off. Adv

Canadian Farmers Profit From Wheat

The war's devastation of European crops has caused an unusual demand for grain from the American Continent. The people of the world must be fed and wheat near $2 a bushel offers great profits to the farmer. Canada's invitation is therefore especially attractive. She wants settlers to make money and happy, prosperous homes for themselves by helping her raise immense wheat crops.

You can get a Homestead of 160 acres FREE and other lands at remarkably low prices. During many years Canadian wheat fields have averaged 20 bushels to the acre many yields as high as 45 bushels to the acre. Wonderful crops also of Oats, Barley and Flax.

Mixed farming as profitable an industry as grain raising The excellent grasses full of nutrition are the only food required for beef or dairy purposes. Good schools, churches, markets convenient, climate excellent.

Military service is not compulsory in Canada, but there is an extra demand for farm labor to replace the many young men who have volunteered for the war The Government is urging farmers to put extra acreage into grain. Representative J. E. Wichman of Hancock county has introduced a bill before the house to transfer all small drainage districts to township trustees. Theoretically this is all right, but the lax system employed by many townships would produce a maze of complications that would fall far short of efficiency and economy until the township business is put on a business basis equivalent to the county business. SECRET OF THEIR SUCCESS

Herman Rosenthal, advertising manager for a large mail-order concern in Chicago, recently told the members of the American Ad Club one of the methods by which that company extended its trade He said

We have a bureau whose duty it is to read, each week, the country newspapers from all over the country Here is not a paper of any consequence in our trade territory that our bureau does not get. This bureau looks over these papers and when we find a town where the local merchants are not advertising in the local paper, we immediately send that town with our literature. It always brings results far in excess of the same effort put forth in territory where the local merchants all the time use the local paper.

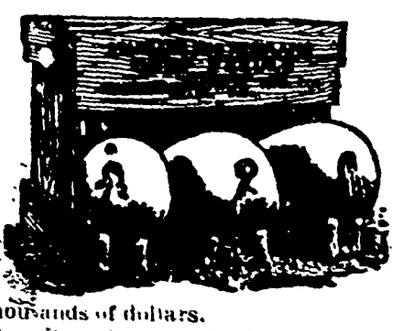
Don't Lose a Pig for the Price of a Postage Stamp



Just when the stomach first begins to go wrong, when the fine bunch of shoats have been overfed on new corn or some other feed that they have not quite been able to digest, when the stomach begins to sour and the food begins to ferment, is the time when an investment of two cents a head in Standard Hog Regulator would help the herd through a most critical period; would possibly prevent a fine bunch of shoats from becoming wormy, or prevent an outbreak of cholera that might cost your neighborhood thousands of dollars.

It's so easy to keep hogs in condition when they are thrifty by giving natural animal minerals and salts, such as are found in Standard Hog Regulator, and so hard to get them back in shape when they once begin to go wrong.

Feed Standard Hog Regulator now and you will have no regrets later on. We will supply you.

Bought Vinegar and Got It

A slick salesman with a sly wink went through Grant township near Remsen a few days ago and sold enough vinegar to pickle the eleventh congressional district.

When the vinegar came it was vinegar.

And the buyers are so mad about it they can't see.

"The scoundrel," said one indignant purchaser. "What do I want with nine gallons of vinegar? I haven't a single cucumber on the place that wants to be pickled. I had a thirst, that smooth rascal drew me around the corner, looked up the road and down and took the lapel of my coat tenderly twixt his thumb and finger while he leaned forward and winked slyly as he talked of 40-year old vinegar made in Kentucky and guaranteed by Uncle Sam. How was I to know he meant vinegar instead of the real thing?

The robber?

The stranger approached most of his prospective purchasers and offered a drink of whiskey from a small sample bottle, saying, at the same time that he was selling "vinegar" in gallon lots, but with a sly twinkle in his eye, remarked that good vinegar had gone up about $3 a gallon. The unwary customer immediately supposed the whisky sample together with the "sly twinkle" and the high price of vinegar indicated nothing less than that by paying the price he was to get a quantity of whiskey Orders were taken thick and fast, and with each transaction the purchaser was, however, required to plank down the price of "vinegar." After taking in a fat wad of cash the stranger disappeared Then the vinegar came. The purchaser got what they bought.

Accidentally Shot

While hunting rabbits Sunday afternoon, Walter, the seventeen year old son of Mr and Mrs. Andrew Reiffenstein, was accidentally shot through the shoulder by young Batts, his companion.

There are so many conflicting stories on how the accident happened that we are not able to give a solution and perhaps the boys themselves are not able to give the real facts. The weapon that caused the wound was a shot gun and part of the collar bone is shot off and the muscles of the shoulder badly mangled. The intentions at this time is to take the young man to Iowa City as it is necessary to have considerable skin grafting done and it is doubtful if he will ever have full control of his shoulder. At that he should consider himself mighty lucky that he was not instantly killed.

While no blame is attached to anyone and might of happened if the gun had of been in the hands of a much older person that does not lessen the fact that a shot gun is a mighty poor weapon to trust to the use of a mere child and this accident will likely serve as a warning for others in this vicinity.

Severe Blizzard-- No Trains

A severe blizzard which commenced to rage Wednesday morning has put this immediate vicinity on the "blink" as far as outside news and conditions are concerned A double-header was run up Wednesday morning but up to this writing (Friday) has not reached any farther than Germania, and all hopes of a train before Saturday have been given up. A train with three engines, or rather "tea kettles" left Germania, Thursday afternoon at 1:30 but did not go only a few miles when she gave up the ghost and backed up to Germania and still is in her "hole" and will stay there until after the ground-hog has had plenty of time to see his shadow at least. The storm was not so bad, but the Rock Island equipment, well we give it up. Last reports assure us a train by the 4th of July providing we do not have too late a spring, which Mr. Groundhog has assured us it will last at least six more weeks.

About Consolidated Schools

Suggest Sources which Tell of Success of Consolidated Plan

Inquiries with reference to rural school consolidation are constantly coming to Iowa State college Information that will help in understanding, or in starting consolidation, is usually what is wanted. The agricultural education department of the college gives these suggestions:

1—For information as to the plan of organizing, write Inspector J. A. Woodruff, department of public instruction, Des Moines, Iowa.

2—For latest facts on consolidation, covering the entire country, write for Bulletin 30, 1914, U. S. Bureau of Education, Washington, D. C.

3—North Dakota's experience is contained in the report of the state inspector of consolidated schools, address inspector M. C. MacDonald, Valley City, N. D.

4—Minnesota's experience is contained in Bulletin 41, "Consolidation of Rural Schools." Address department of Public instruction, Minneapolis, Minn.

5—A study of 15 consolidated rural schools is contained in publication No. 6. The Southern Education Board, Washington, D. C.

6—The best summary of advantages, disadvantages and conclusions is contained in an Illinois bulletin, "Consolidation of Country Schools," December 1, 1914. Address University of Illinois, Urbana, Ill.

$80,000 in Radium Used in Operation

A young Algona married woman who has been sick a long time and has undergone several operations, and for whom much sympathy is felt, as the subject of a unique operation this morning. She suffers from a malignant disease, and as a last resort in an effort to effect a cure, $80,000 worth of radium has been inserted in her abdomen at the seat of the disease. The radium came from Chicago, and the rent of it costs $125 per day. It will be left in the patients body two days. The radium is enclosed in a silver case overlaid with a gold case. It was secured by Dr. Cretzmeyer, who assisted by Dr. Walter Fraser and Dr. McCreery, of Whittemore, performed the operation. The patient's name has not been given out. This is the first time that such an operation has been performed in this part of the state, it is believed.—Kossuth County Advance.

Onions Build 2 Houses

Fire which in 1914 burned to the ground his new $6,000 home just as he was about to move into it, didn't put Joseph Sedlacek, of St. Ansgar, down and out

He simply planted his usual 12 acres of onions and from the profits of the patch built another home, better than ever, on his 80 acre farm, three miles out from St. Ansgar. Onions, then, have built two houses for him.

Mr. Sedlacek doesn't raise onions alone. He combines hogs, corn and intensive crops. He raises corn and oats and clover like other farmers and produces and feeds hogs. But he also puts in about 10 acres of potatoes each year and year after a patch of 12 acres of onions. From this, in 1916, he shipped 15 carloads of the bulbs.

After his unfortunate experience in 1914, in which his $6,000 home, complete and modern, was destroyed, Mr. Sedlacek was undecided whether to build his next house in town or on the farm. He finally decided upon the latter. Onions grown in 1916 paid for the second house, as onion profits did for the first one.

Raymond Gruetzmacher Dead

Word was received here Friday of the passing away of Raymond Gruetzmacher at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gruetzmacher at Minneapolis. His uncles, George and Frank Gruetzmacher left Saturday for Minneapolis to attend the funeral which was held Monday. We hope to have an obituary for our readers next week.

A new form of portable lamp, the light from which is adjustable, is being brought out in Germany, according to the London Electrician A small spiral resistance in series with the lamp and switch is mounted above the battery. The resistance can be readily varied by the motion of a small knob at the side of the case, the brightness of the lamp being thus altered within the limits of maximum intensity and a dull red glow This enables current to be economized when only a small amount of light is needed, prolonging the life of the lamp and battery The resistance is also useful in preventing the tendency to overrun the lamp unduly when a new battery is substituted for the old one

One of the tallest telephone poles in the world is where the wires of the Pacific States Telephone company cross the Chehalis river, near Aberdeen, Wash For some time a pole 90 feet high was sufficient to keep the wires clear of the river craft, but the increasing passage of ocean steamers made a higher pole necessary, and a new one 129 feet high was set up. HOPES WILSON WILL BAR LITERACY TEST

In Statement Issued Gibbons Tells of Dangers in New Immigration Bill.

Baltimore Md Jan 27 In a statement issued today Cardinal Gibbons expresses the hope that President Wilson will veto the immigration bill The Cardinal's statement follows

It is disappointing to many thoughtful citizens that the immigration bill has passed both houses of congress. By this measure illiterates will in the future be excluded from entrance into this country It is to be hoped that Mr Wilson will act with the same good judgment as he has done on a former like occasion and veto the bill Similar bills have been vetoed by preceding presidents, who have been cognizant of the harmful effect this test of literacy would have upon desirable immigration

"Illiteracy should not be confounded with ignorance There is an old axiom which reads "Intellectual attainments are not the test of virtue" Many of the most dangerous members of the community are men of keen and trained intellect but of depraved morals. The normal sturdy illiterate has a receptive mind capable of early development Had the United States refused such illiterates from the beginning of our government our country would have lost the benefit of their virtue, thrift, industry and enterprising spirit The descendants of such forebears are an honor to their fathers and a credit and an asset to our country for they have been rapidly incorporated and identified with the native population by the assimilating process of education and the common use of the English tongue In consequence of this it would be hard to differentiate the children of foreign immigrants from those of native American parents"

U. S. EXPORTS REDUCED; GAIN IN SOME PRODUCTS

Washington, D. C Jan 27—Food exports generally from the United States fell off $43,000,000 last year Department of commerce statistics announced today show their value to have been $745,000,000 compared with $788,000,000 in 1915 Meat and dairy products showed increases, but bread stuffs fell off sharply

Corn was the only grain showing an increase while wheat fell off 51,000,000 bushels and flour 1,300,000 barrels. Beef showed decreases in canned, fresh and pickled but bacon, hams and shoulders exports increased 831,000,000 pounds, and pork 22,000,000 pounds. Oils and gasoline exports increased considerably during the year There was 21,000,000 gallons more gasoline sent abroad than in 1915 Crude oil showed an increase of 14,000,000 gallons, illuminating oil 17,000,000 gallons, lubricating oil 21,000,000 gallons and residuum and fuel

MRS. BYRNE, ON HUNGER STRIKE, ALARMS FRIENDS

New York, Jan 27—Friends of Mrs. Ethel Byrne, serving a 30-day sentence for her activity in birth control propaganda, became alarmed by her stubborn refusal to eat and drink and said they would appeal to both President Wilson and Governor Whitman. Mrs. Byrne has not touched food or drink since 8 o'clock last Monday morning.

A physical examination of Mrs. Byrne showed that her heart action was normal after 50 hours of fasting, but she was losing weight.

Mrs Byrne's attorney announced today that he would endeavor to have the state legislature amend the law which prohibits circulation of literature concerning birth control.

COLD IN FRANCE BRINGS DEATH AND SUFFERING

Paris, Jan. 27—France is in the grip of the severest cold weather for many years. The thermometer in Paris registered 17 degrees Fahrenheit today, and even in southern cities like Marseilles and Bordeaux there were several degrees of frost. The number of deaths from cold and the sufferings of the Parisians have been aggravated by the coal shortage. The cold has brought packs of wolves into the department, and bears are ravaging the fields in the Loire valley.

ALL COUNTIES SHOW INCREASES IN TAXES

Woodbury County Among Those Showing Big Advance, Report Discloses.

Des Moines, Ia., Jan. 26—Taxes to be collected in 1917 show a big increase in practically every county in Iowa.

The increase may average $30,000 to the county, according to the reports now being received by W. H. Williams, revenue clerk of the auditor of state's department

A report of the taxes levied will be made to the legislature.

The state tax was reduced two years ago. The increases are all in local taxes.

In 1916 the sum of $50,000,000 was paid by Iowa taxpayers for all purposes. For 1917 the increase will be between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000

Woodbury county shows an increase from $1,859,819 taxes paid in 1916 to $2,037,462 for 1917 Schools demanded $40,000 additional, city tax advanced $115,000 and the county levied $57,000 more. There were a few reductions in other funds to offset part of the increases.

COUNTIES CAN NOW USE AUTOMOBILE FUND

Des Moines, Ia., Jan 26—The Iowa house started in on its road program yesterday by passing Nicholson's bill permitting counties to use their share of the automobile license fund for oiling roads if the supervisors so desire

The house committee on ways and means also reported out for passage Lee Elwood's bill making the levy of the regular 2-mill county road tax by boards of supervisors optional by supervisors, who are required to levy 1 mill, but are not compelled under this bill, to collect the full 2 mills

Representative Gray, of Calhoun county, threw the first brick in the direction of the controlling faction in the house by introducing a bill to repeal the section of the laws permitting county supervisors to issue bonds to pay deficiencies due to road construction

Gray declares that if the controlling faction really desires to prevent the issuing of bonds for road work it should at once pass his bill

EFFECT OF INJUNCTION LAWS IS EXPLAINED

Des Moines, Ia, Jan 26—At a joint meeting of the labor committees of both houses of the Iowa legislature today, Grant Hamilton of Washington D C, chairman of the national legislative committee of the American Federation of Labor, will explain to the lawmakers the effect of the injunction law as experienced by union men

Senator Whitemore today introduced a bill in the senate to stiffen up the injunction law in Iowa.

SENATE STIFFENS LAWS AGAINST BANK BURGLARS

Des Moines, Ia Jan 26—In the senate today, a bank bill, which will increase the penalty for bank burglary to life imprisonment or not less than 25 years, was reported out of the senate favorably for passage Another bill which makes possession of burglar's tools presumptive evidence, and provides for imprisonment and fine of not less than $1,000, was also reported on favorably by the committee

TO DISCHARGE PEN GUARDS?

Des Moines Jan 26 In the interest of economy, the state board of control has issued an order for the reduction of the number of guards at the two state prisons after April 1 which will save the state about $50,000 a year

The order will cause the dismissal of about 67 guards

It is reported that the guards may ask that a bill be introduced in the legislature to prohibit the board of control's order going into effect

Des Moines Ia. Jan 26 Senator Caswell's bill repealing the Iowa antitipping law passed the senate yesterday 37 to 6 after a jocular debate

Senators Thompson and Laffer upheld that the law was all right but that the trouble was a nonenforcement. Laffer suggested that Attorney General Havner be asked to get busy at once

SWISS NEUTRALITY NOT TO BE ALTERED

President Schulthess of Switzerland.

"Switzerland is just as determined today to preserve loyal neutrality as she was at the beginning of the war," says Edmund Schulthess, who on January 1 became president of Switzerland. The vice president of the little republic is Felix Calonder. According to Swiss laws, he will be president next year.

RUMANIAN PRISONERS NEAR 200,000 MARK

Berlin, Jan 23—The number of prisoners of war taken in Rumania has now reached nearly 200,000, says the Overseas News agency Dispersed soldiers who had hidden in the forests and villages had taken off their uniforms and reappeared from their hiding places, the agency adds.

Describing the situation of the Rumanian army, the Overseas agency says

"The rest of the Rumanian army, part of which fought well, is reorganizing in Moldavia and Bessarabia The Rumanian divisions which are still engaged at the front are greatly reduced in numbers. According to assertions of Rumanian prisoners, one division was composed of only 2,800 men, while another numbered but 2,400.

"The Rumanians suffered their heaviest losses from artillery fire The large number of dead in proportion to the wounded is remarkable. On one square kilometer (about three-fifths of a square mile) of the battlefield of Campulung, 6,000 Rumanian dead were counted. Some of the Rumanian infantry regiments were composed of only four companies of 150 men each.

It has been proved that the stories—"Thousand and One Nights"—are not of Arabian origin, but were translated from the Indian.

LIVE STOCK PRICES INFLATED, IS CLAIM

Des Moines, Ia., Jan 23.—Pres. A. Sykes told the Corn Belt Meat Producers' association, in state convention here today, that live stock prices are greatly inflated and that they must be prepared for a slump. The stockmen would be reaping a high harvest, he said, if corn and feed were not so high. He asserted that there is a noticeable increase in the number of cattle being raised in Iowa.

EXPLOSION OR QUAKE OCCURS IN DUBUQUE

Windows Were Shattered and Buildings Shaken at an Early Hour Today.

Dubuque, Ia., Jan. 24—A terrific explosion or a miniature earthquake shook the entire city from end to end at 1:10 o'clock this morning. The explosion was reported simultaneously from all parts of the city and from East Dubuque, Ill., by police officers. Windows were broken and buildings were shaken. WORKMEN ARE BLINDED BY A DYNAMITE BLAST

Menlo, Ia., Jan. 24—Ed Shelton, of Tama, had both eyes and part of his jaw blown away and H W. Stewart, of Toledo, was blinded in one eye and badly lacerated about the head in a dynamite explosion here. They were in charge of a force which is stringing electric light wires between Iowa towns for the Iowa Electric company, of Cedar Rapids.

The men were blasting holes for the poles, and as the electric apparatus for igniting the dynamite fuse was temporarily out of commission they were attempting to light the fuse with a match. A piece of paper caught fire and fell into the hole, setting off the charge.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY MAY REFUSE DETECTIVE PAY

Red Oak, Ia., Jan. 24—The question of Montgomery county paying the balance of $2 800 due Detective J. N. Wilkerson for his prosecutions and investigations into the Villisca murders will be surely met by the county board today, and indications are that there will be nothing doing along that line.

County Attorney Westrand has given his opinion that the board has no right to make such an appropriation and that they will be individually liable if they do so

ATTORNEY JIRKA IS ARRAIGNED IN COURT

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Jan 24—Atty. Harold W Jirka, extradited from Chicago on an indictment charging him with attempt to extort, was arraigned in the district court of Linn county this morning. He entered a plea of not guilty and was remanded to jail at Marion in default of $5,000 bail.

LEAK PROBERS YIELD FURTHER IN DEMANDS

Inquiry Will Be Resumed Monday and Brokers Say Information Will Be on Hand.

New York, Jan. 26. — Stock brokers today welcomed the news that the house rules committee had limited still further its demands for evidence to be used in determining whether any one profited by a "leak" just before the publication of President Wilson's first peace note.

While brokers were waiting for the stock exchange officials to transmit to them the modified demands for evidence Sherman L. Whipple, counsel for the rules committee, made public the concluding paragraph of the new communication which says:

The rules committee desires it to be understood that the main purpose of the information it requested is to ascertain the facts with regard to the buying and selling of stocks on the stock exchange during the period inquired of who made the profits and who incurred the losses. It is hoped that in all matters in doubt the accounts will be so framed as to obtain this information in the clearest and simplest form."

According to Chairman Henry of the committee the investigators will have everything they want within five days.

The 12 baldheads in the box stood by their brother in misfortune and gave their verdict in his favor.

DOG TEAMS CROSS LINE INTO U. S. SECOND DAY

Hamilton, N. D., Jan. 26.—Ten dog trains competing in the 522-mile derby from Winnipeg to St. Paul, crossed into the United States late Thursday. Three leaders camped here, while 18 miles back over the snow trail their seven competitors were quartered at Pembina, N. D.

Gunnar Thompson, from Hecla (Big Island), Man., and his team of five huskies broke the trail into this town at 8:10 p. m., and was followed shortly by Mike Kelly, also of Hecla, driving five huskies and Hyurtur Hanson, of Selkirk, Man., and his quintet of cross bred Russian wolf hounds and huskies.

But one incident interfered with the going yesterday. Fred Hartman, an American now living at Lepas, Man., was the last man to pull up at Pembina, delayed by a fight among his own dogs in which one animal was killed. He cut his team down to four dogs and continued in the race.

COLLAR BUTTON RUBS NECK; CAUSES LOCKJAW

Milford, Conn., Jan. 26 — Charles Diggs, a prominent citizen, is dying here of tetanus, caused by a collar button. A week ago he noticed a sore spot on the front of his neck where the collar button rubbed. This became infected and Thursday he consulted Dr. Heady. Gradually his neck, jaw and body became stiff.

He has been able only to take half a teaspoonful of liquid at intervals, and spasms followed each feeding. His death is expected hourly.

ON A DEAD MAN'S CHEST.

BLOW AT VERDUN GIVES GERMANS FRENCH TRENCHES

Advanced Positions Along Mile Front Between Avocourt Wood and Dead Man's Hill Are Taken.

OTHER ATTACKS STOPPED

Russian Offensive Aimed at Mitau on Riga Front Fails and Germans Drive Slavs Back.

In what appears to have been the most important offensive movement undertaken on the Franco-Belgian front in several weeks, French trenches on a front of approximately a mile, in the region of Hill 304, northwest of Verdun, were stormed by German troops yesterday, the Berlin war office announces. A counter attack delivered at night by the French failed to drive out the Germans who, during the operation captured about 500 prisoners and 10 machine guns.

The Paris account of the German offensive reports it launched along a rather wide front, the attacks being delivered at four points, between Avocourt wood, on the extreme left of the French lines about Verdun and Deadman hill, a distance of more than 3½ miles. The attacks were repulsed, the French statement declares, except that the Germans penetrated advanced trenches near Hill 304. The Germans' statement mentions the fighting in the other sectors of this attack as "enterprises on Deadman hill and northwest of Avocourt"—which "brought the desired result."

Russ Again Driven Back.

Fighting in the Riga region, the northernmost sector of the Russian front, continues to show advances for the Germans, according to Berlin, which reports additional Russian positions gained on both sides of the river Aa, southwest of Riga, bordering the Great Tirul marsh.

Fighting on this marshy ground is made possible at this season by the freezing of the swamps. Russian offensive early this month was taken to be aimed at Mitau, the German base south of Riga, but it failed of decisive results.

The Germans now apparently have not only regained such ground as they lost, but are striking northward across the swampy ground in the direction of Riga.

Counter Attacks Made.

The Russians are offering strong resistance and delivered counter attacks on the east side of the Aa river. They failed, however, according to Berlin, which reports the capture of 500 prisoners during the day's fighting.

Operations on the other war areas have been of comparatively unimportance. Minor attacks by the Rumanians in western Moldavia have failed, Berlin says, as did also a Serbian attack in the Moglenica mountain region on the Macedonian front.

SHELL ENGLISH COAST.

London, Jan. 26.—An unidentified German vessel shelled the Suffolk coast of England last night. There were no casualties.

"A small unidentified German vessel approached the Suffolk coast last night and fired a number of shells, only a portion of which reached the land. There were no casualties and only insignificant damage."

SEA BATTLE IN DARK DESCRIBED

Damage to Two German Boats Admitted—British Ship in Sinking Conditon, and Destroyer Sunk.

Berlin, Jan. 26 - (by wireless to Sayville)- Details of the engagement between the German torpedo boat flotilla and British light naval forces on the morning of January 21, are given today in an Overseas' News agency announcement.

"Immediately after the beginning of the engagement which took place in darkness," says the agency information, "the commander's boat, the V-69 received a full hit on the bridge. The commander of the flotilla, captain of the Corvette, Max Schultz, who always had commanded his flotilla with courage and success, was killed as were two other officers and some men. The steering gear was damaged causing a collision with other boats. The V-69, in a badly damaged condition entered the Dutch port of Ymuiden without being molested by the enemy.

"The boat rammed by the V-69, notwithstanding the damage sustained, continued to participate in the combat and inflicted heavy damage on a British destroyer by ramming it. Later a German who recognized the destroyer, stated it was in a sinking condition. The German torpedo boat, although its speed had been diminished by the collision with the V-69 and by ramming the British destroyer, succeeded in reaching a German base unhindered by the enemy.

"A third German boat in the darkness encountered numerous hostile torpedo boat destroyers. Entering into action, it sank a large hostile destroyer."

FIRE TRAP PROPRIETOR DRAWS TERM IN PRISON

Judge Says 30 Months' Sentence Should Teach Factory Men Lessons of Safety.

New York, Jan. 27—Asserting that a sentence in prison should teach a far-reaching lesson to factory owners and tenants who failed to provide proper fire exits, Supreme Court Justice Kapper today sent Samuel Barkin to Sing Sing for from 2½ to 5½ years. Barkin is a partner in a shirt making company housed in a Brooklyn building where nine women and four men operatives lost their lives in a fire because the trap door between their place of work and Barkin's floor was locked.

Barkin was convicted by a jury earlier this week. His partner, Samuel Simon and the building's owners, Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Diamond, proprietors of a candy company in the structure, are still to be tried on similar charges.

"BONE DRY" LAWS READY FOR SENATE

Committee Recommends Passage of Measures to Put on Lid and Keep It Down.

Des Moines, Jan. 26.—Three of Senator Whitmore's "bone dry" bills, so amended as to eliminate any possibility of getting booze into Iowa, if they are passed, were reported out of the senate committee on the suppression of intemperance this morning, with a recommendation that they be passed.

Prohibition of the use of the roads, streets, alleys or any other public property used for public travel, for the transportation of intoxicating liquors is added to senate file No. 4, as an amendment.

This amendment was proposed by John B. Hammond and met with opposition by members of the committee because of its effect upon Senator Whitmore's bill by the provisions of which it would not be illegal to possess two quarts of whisky or one case of beer.

Makes State "Bone Dry."

This latter bill, however, was not passed upon by the committee yesterday and is regarded as of no importance in case the other measures are adopted because of the presumption, in case such liquors are found in the state, that they have been transported over the public highways or by railroads, both methods being prohibited in the bills reported out for passage.

The bills reported out are known as senate files 4, 5 and 7.

Senate file No. 4 prohibits the carrying of intoxicating liquors by common carriers and eliminates the personal consumption clause enacted by the Thirty-sixth general assembly. It intends to stop railroad shipments of liquor completely.

Senate file No. 5 makes the place of delivery of intoxicating liquors the place of sale and would eliminate importation into the state of all liquors because the sale is prohibited in Iowa.

Prohibits Soliciting Sales.

Senate file No. 7, prohibiting the solicitation of sales for intoxicating liquors by advertising is patterned after a bill now pending in congress prohibiting such advertising in states which prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors.

The bill before congress provides a penalty of $1,000 fine or two years' imprisonment or both.

The action of the senate committee was entirely in executive session, Senator Whitmore himself having moved the barring of reporters after having turned over the chair to Senator Balkema because the bills under consideration were his own.

It was reported yesterday that a vote taken in the committee at a previous session had resulted in a tie vote of 6 to 6. Only 11 members were present at the meeting yesterday afternoon.

ORDER BIG RATE CUT.

Madison, Wis., Jan. 26.—In a sweeping freight rate decision, the Wisconsin railroad commission ordered reductions which statisticians estimate will save shippers of the state more than $100,000 annually. The decision holds that present rates are unreasonably high.

SON, WIDOW AND SISTER NAMED IN DEWEY'S WILL

Washington, D. C., Jan. 26.—Admiral Dewey's will dated December 17, 1915, was filed today for probate. It bequeathes a life annuity of $500 to his sister, Mrs. Mary F. Greley and directs that a suitable stone be placed over his grave in Arlington national cemetery. The remaining estate, of which no estimate is made, is left to the widow and his son, George Dewey, jr., who are named as executors, without bonds.

BUTLER KNOWN AS "BULL" TO MEN TRIED TO EXPLAIN

Man Who Heard Him Commanded to Enter Auto and Tell of Incidents in Room Testifies.

WOMAN WAS PALE, HE SAYS

After Much Evidence That Colonel Killed in Auto Was 'Woman Chaser,' Spanell Defense Rests.

San Angelo, Tex., Jan. 27.—After testimony was introduced to bear out the story told by Harry J. Spanell yesterday and to show that Lieut. Col. M. C. Butler was known among his soldiers as "Bull" Butler, the defense in the trial in which Spanell is charged with killing his wife rested today.

Two witnesses testified that Butler had the reputation of being a woman chaser even with his command.

The first witness for the state on the rebuttal, declared that Colonel Butler's reputation regarding his attentions to women was "good."

Several witnesses for the defense have testified that the reputation of Colonel Butler was bad in this regard.

Testifies Wife was Pale.

A. H. Newell, of Alpine, Tex., a mine superintendent, testifying for the defense, said he was in front of the hotel talking with Colonel Butler, when he saw the Spanells talking excitedly in their automobile. He said he heard Spanell call to Butler and "command" the officer to get into the machine.

"Spanell opened the door for him," said Newell. "He got in and they drove away."

Mrs. Spanell, he added, was pale. Questioning brought out the fact that the witness had seen Mrs. Spanell come out of the hotel and at that time she was pale.

James Dodd, of Alpine, said he saw Mr. and Mrs. Spanell and Lieutenant Colonel Butler in the Spanell car just a few minutes before the shooting. The car passed him, he said, slowly enough for him to hear Colonel Butler say:

"Mr. Spanell, will you let me explain?"

He testified that the next words he caught were "—— —Mrs. Spanell and Mrs. Butler went up there"—and then the automobile passed out of his hearing. In a very short time, he said he heard shots.

Dodd was the man whose appearance as a witness the defense deemed so important they intimated they would have to ask for a continuance if illness, from which he was suffering at the start of the trial, kept him away.

When the state began its rebuttal, A. M. Turney, of Alpine, county judge, was the first witness called to the stand. He testified that Butler's reputation as regarded his attentions to women was good.

Spanell declared the shot that killed his wife was fired by Col. Butler, while he and the army officer were engaged in a pistol duel in the darkness. Col. Butler, the witness declared, had followed and paid "undue attentions" to Mrs. Spanell trying to "show her off" to other army officers and the defendant said he protested to Col. Butler, asking him to be careful because he did not want unfavorable comment made about his wife.

Spanell said while he regarded his wife as being "as pure as a flower and just like an innocent little girl," he regarded Butler as a bold, persistent man and dangerous to women. All his efforts previous to July 20, he said, had been to shield his wife from Butler's advances. The climax came, he said, on the evening of July 20, when his wife and Mrs. Butler went up stairs in the hotel and were quickly followed by Butler.

Spanell testified he followed in a few minutes and found his wife alone and greatly agitated. Mrs. Butler was gone.

He invited Butler into his car in which Mrs. Spanell already was seated and after going a few blocks demanded of Butler what had happened in the room. A fight ensued, Spanell said, in which Butler tried to use Mrs. Spanell as a shield. He could see flashes from Butler's pistol as he stood behind Mrs. Spanell and could see Mrs. Spanell trying to free herself from Butler's grasp. Finally, he said, he saw Butler fall and found his wife dead—concluding his testimony with the statement "Butler had killed her."

NEWS PRINT MAKERS AND PUBLISHERS MEET

Chicago, Jan. 26.—Paper manufacturers and newspaper publishers met here today for an informal conference. An invitation to the members of the federal trade commission was extended and it was expected the various problems of the manufacturer and the newspaper users over the print paper supply would be discussed.

Lafayette Young, jr., of the Des Moines, (Ia.), Capitol, one of the newspaper publishers present, said that the publishers desired to talk over the situation with the paper manufacturers and give the manufacturers an opportunity explain the reason for the high price of print paper.

ANNE MORGAN SMOKES CIGARET AT MEETING

New York, Jan. 26.—Be it known that when 300 serious delegates to the women's department of the National Civic Federation were assembled in solemn conclave at luncheon at the Hotel Astor—

A cigaret curled itself into blue smoke over the heads of the lunchers!

It came not from the fingers of State Commissioner of Education John H. Finley, nor yet from those of former Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, for both of those had passed it by.

It came from the blue enameled cigaret case of Miss Anne Morgan; it was lighted by a match from the gold match box belonging to Miss Anne Morgan, and when the two men mentioned, who were seated on either side of Miss Anne Morgan at the speakers' table, had declined to accept it or one of its fellows, it was smoked in solitary nonchalance by Miss Anne Morgan.

WHAT IS YOUR INTENTION?

Are you a land owner? If so, what is your intention with regard to the land that you own? Do you propose to regard it merely as a business investment, and to extract from it every possible dollar of profit?

We have known farmers whose treatment of their land was calculated to leave the impression that they were the ones for whom it was originally created, and that when they should cease to need it no other use would ever be made of it.

On the other hand, there are men—and many of them—who, while striving to make their land as productive as possible, have yet an eye to the future owners.

Every farmer, when he takes charge of a piece of ground, should frame this simple resolution:

> "I hereby resolve that, whether my occupancy of this land be long or short, I will use every means at my command to leave it more productive than when I found it."

If this were the guiding principle of every farmer's life, what a blessed and productive country ours would become in a few generations of time!

And why not?

Every farmer who has ever worked with impoverished soil knows how discouraging and heart sickening is the struggle.

And every farmer who has honestly endeavored to improve his land to a point of real productiveness knows how gratifying it is to see his yield mount upward from year to year and to feel that as the seasons go by he is adding substantially to the wealth of this country—for after all is said, land is the great tangible asset of the earth.

The man who causes two blades of grass to grow where only one was growing is a benefactor of mankind.

The man who depletes his soil that only one blade will grow where two formerly grew, is a thief.

Hard words—yes, hard, but true. No man has a right to impoverish the soil, even if he does hold a title deed to it. At best it is only his for a season, when it must pass on to another rightful owner.

And what about the rights of that next owner? And the next, and the next?

When you pursue a policy that impoverishes your land it goes to your son at your demise poorer than when you received it.

Have you, in that event, been honest with your son? He had a right to receive from you what you received certainly no less.

Will the farmers of America rob the unborn generations, or will they leave for them the legacy of a better land than they themselves inherited?

It is a personal question which each individual must answer for himself.

PROSPERITY VS. HIGH PRICES

"No such thing exists in America as prosperity for just one class, unless it exists for all." So said a noted statesman last fall, and millions of Americans believed him, but we differ from him.

Our present so-called prosperity is a prosperity of the CLASSES. It is most emphatically NOT a prosperity of the MASSES.

The munition manufacturer is prosperous because Europe is clamoring for his products.

The automobile maker prospers because the craze for the buzz wagon is on the upward slant.

The farmer prospers because Europe demands his products.

Certain other special industries prosper because a war crazed Europe need their wares with which to prolong the struggle.

And there the REAL prosperity ends. The millions of salaried men and women and more modest wage earners are immeasurably worse off than they were five years ago. Thousands of printers and publishers are facing actual ruin. The small merchant has difficulty in making both ends meet. Thousands of professional men are wondering how they can pay their rent.

High prices are the result of this half prosperity, but All people have them to pay. The Classes have the money with which to pay, but the MASSES are wondering where in blazes it is coming from.

THE IOWA ROAD PROBLEM

Yesterday's automobile editon of the Chicago Tribune told a story of the good roads efforts of Illinois. Illinois has made tremendous appropriations for good roads, and in addition Cook and Vermilyon counties are spending millions on their own account in building permanent highways.

Iowa is one of the backward states of the Union with respect to good roads. We are beginning to think this is a serious reflection upon the character of our people. Either Iowa people are too tight to build good roads, or else they are not smart enough to realize the economic value of the same. Our governors and our legislature can hardly be blamed too much for their failure to take leadership in an advanced good road program because our modern governors and our legislature are followers, not leaders. When the people of Iowa demand roads and are willing to spend money therefor, the legislation will follow as the night the day. This is easily proven by the fact that as soon as our people demanded prohobition, we received prohobition, irrespective of the personal tendency of our legislators.

The polotician follows the votes; he does not lead them. So it appears to us that if we make any progress in a good roads building scheme, the impetus must come from the public-spirited citizens in every part of the state, who are willing to educate and assume a leadership by insisting upon a real system of adequate highways. There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

MOTHERHOOD WOMAN'S JOY

Suggestions to Childless Women.

Among the virtues of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the ability to correct sterility in the cases of many women. This fact is well established as evidenced by the following letter and hundreds of others we have published in these colums.

Poplar Bluff, Mo.—"I want other women to know what a blessing Lydia

E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been to me. We had always wanted a baby in our home but I was in poor health and not able to do my work. My mother and husband both urged me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so, my health improved and I am now the mother of a fine baby girl and do all my own house work."—Mrs. ALLIA B. TIMMONS, 216 Almond St., Poplar Bluff, Mo.

In many other homes, once childless, there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong

Write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for advice—it will be confidential and helpful.

Really Annoying.

"Well that's enough to try the patience of Job!" exclaimed the village minister as he threw aside the local paper

IS CHILD CROSS, FEVERISH, SICK

Look, Mother! If tongue is coated, give "California Syrup of Figs."

Children love this "fruit laxative," and nothing else cleanses the tender stomach liver and bowels so nicely

A child simply will not stop playing to empty the bowels, and the result is they become tightly clogged with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sours, then your little one becomes cross half sick, feverish, don't eat, sleep or act naturally, breath is bad, system full of cold has sore throat stomach ache or diarrhea Listen Mother! See if tongue is coated then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs" and in a few hours all the constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system, and you have a well child again

Millions of mothers give "California Syrup of Figs" because it is perfectly harmless children love it, and it never fails to act on the stomach liver and bowels

Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle Adv

Gala Affair.

"How was Gertrude Swashby's wedding?"

A great success apparently The Swashbys exhausted their credit getting ready for it and the society editors exhausted their stock of adjectives describing it."

ACTRESS TELLS SECRET.

A well known actress gives the following recipe for gray hair To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo Compound It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and make it soft and glossy It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off. Adv.

Speechless amazement is one of the few things that go without saying.

You can't always judge the dinner by the price.

Is Work Too Hard?

Many kinds of work wear out the kidneys, and kidney trouble makes any kind of work hard. It brings morning lameness, backache, headache, nervousness, rheumatism and urinary troubles. If your work is confining, strains the back, or exposes you to extreme heat or cold or damp, it's well to keep the kidneys active. Doan's Kidney Pills are reliable and safe. Thousands recommend them.

A South Dakota Case

Wm. H. Schaff, 222 W Second St., Canton, S. D., says "For years my kidneys were in bad shape and I had a dull pain in my back. Being out in all kinds of weather made the troubles worse. At times the kidney secretions were scanty, then again profuse and there was much sediment in them. Doan's Kidney Pills brought me relief from all these ailments after everything else failed."

The Man Who Forgot

A NOVEL

By JAMES HAY, JR.

GARDEN CITY NEW YORK

"Why is it," began Smith, the embodiment of emphasis and fervor, "that neither of the great political parties in this country has ever had the sense or the courage to come out for prohibition? Why doesn't the party that's in power now come out for it? We hear a lot of stuff about the evil corporations grinding down the masses of the people We read whole columns every day about the high cost of living, the education of the young, and a world peace We are asked again and again to fight against the ravages of tuberculosis and to cut down the death rate from cancer. Those things are not a drop in the bucket with the death rate, the crime, the poverty, and the women's tears that are caused by whisky."

He put his hand on Waller's shoulder for greater emphasis.

"Mr Waller," he said, "according to the best figures obtainable, alcohol is killing off every year as many Americans as there have been men killed in many of the great wars of the world in the last 2,000 years Roll that over in your mind. Picture what that mortality is

"Say!" interjected Waller, the drawl still in his voice, "do you mean you want me to quote you as attacking directly the party now in power for not coming out for this constitutional amendment for nation wide prohibition?"

The reply was instantaneous

"Most certainly I do! The big parties and the big leaders of this country have enough to say about every other conceivable subject under the sun What I want to know now, and what the public has a right to know now, is why this party has failed to declare itself either way on the issue Why are they immune from the charge of cowardice when they run away from the subject? There must be a reason for this silence in places so high, in places from which come great pronouncements about everything else that touches or is supposed to touch, the public welfare What is it? That's what I want explained to me"

"Make that a little more direct, a little more succinct, suggested the newspaper man, his attention utterly absorbed.

"Let's determine, complied Smith "whether the saloon and the influence of the saloon are so wrapped up in politics that the politicians are afraid to go against it Let's ascertain why men will not vote down a traffic on behalf of which all of them are afraid to lift their voices in public advocacy.

"And suppose they refuse to notice this challenge, as they probably will?" Waller's drawl elaborated the interview.

"That's their funeral—not mine" Smith waved his right arm in careless finality.

"Also, suppose they become hostile to the prohibition movement as a result of this attack?"

Smith struck the desk once with his clenched hand.

"Ah!" he declared, exultation in his voice "They don't dare. That's the remarkable part of this business. They work for whisky, but they do it in the dark. They fling a sop to the public conscience and the public demand by abolishing whisky and its use in the capitol building, on Indian reservations, in the army and the navy. But they do the will of the liquor interests when they say to the masses of the people: 'We will not destroy your privilege of self destruction. Our soldiers and sailors we will save. But you—oh, you can go to the devil your own way.' Why, it would be just as reasonable for the government to pass a law licensing butchers and grocers to sell consumers a certain amount of typhoid germs every year!"

Waller knew his Washington. Back of his drawl and his cane and his air of boredom was a rare discernment, a fine eye for the real forces in life. He had learned the capital, had studied its strange army—great men doing big things on a large scale, little men trying sly games for small profit, successes with their names on every lip, futile men slipping into oblivion, the pillars of the country's business, the pirates of national and international affairs, the real and the fake. He knew the city—its beauty, its air of careless gayety, its procession of cocksure men and well dressed women, its thousands of blasted ambitions, its multitude of intrigues and love affairs. "They call it the home of greatness," he had remarked once "In reality, it's the grave of greatness."

And, since he knew accurately the value of men and their methods, he had swung down the flower hung capital hill, boarded a street car, lounged into his office, and written the story of the Smith interview. He had done it in his forceful, picturesque style, and its publication the following morning had convinced Washington that there had come into its midst a new personality. Senators and representatives laughed at the new arrival. A great many women rose up and called him blessed. Thousands of both men and women throughout the country began to write him letters of congratulation and encouragement. The great prohibition organizations called him into their conferences. Newspapers came to regard him as a regular feature He had been properly introduced by Chollnewollie

Then, one night in the middle of June, when the moon hung yellow as gold in the sky, and the slow breeze was heavy with the fragrance of many kinds of flowers, he had been presented to Miss Edith Mallon She stood on the veranda of a country clubhouse, a knot of men about her, and, as he was about to pass, somebody called him and introduced him. It was during an informal dance, and the drum notes drowned whatever she said in greeting him. He did not notice even how she threw back her head with an odd little motion, as of astonishment, when she saw his face clearly under the electric light overhead Most people were impressed by the ardour of his eyes He was used to it.

He asked for a dance, and before it was over she was expressing her surprise that a "reformer" could dance perfectly.

"Somehow," she said, "I had never thought that temperance agitators were human beings."

"On the contrary," he informed her, laughter crinkling the corners of his eyes, "they're the most human and humane beings in the world"

"But" she remonstrated, and added, a little breathlessly "I mean you're such a man of—of the world. There's nothing clerical about you."

"Oh, no," he said quietly.

Something in his manner of saying that created in her the desire to seem interested in his principles

"And your arguments," she said, as they found chairs on the veranda, "I suppose they're the old, familiar biblical things. There aren't any brand new ones, any real discoveries to make congress do what you want it to do, are there?"

"Oh, yes," he replied, detecting the raillery in her voice.

"For instance?" she urged.

They sat near the veranda railing, the soft radiance of the moon falling full upon her, and making her black hair a part of the purple shadows of the night. Her neck and shoulders gleamed through a filmy scarf, and her face, looking very white, would have been all gravity but for the laughter in her eyes.

"Why do you laugh?" he countered.

His attitude was that of a man seeking valuable information.

"Really," she said quickly, "I'm not laughing—far from it. I never in all my life felt less like laughing. Tell me. What is the new argument?"

"I am arranging," he said seriously, "for the production of a moving picture which will show, among its features, a whisky manufacturer reviewing a procession of his dollars."

"How do you mean?"

"On the dollars will be the figures of the men and women his business has destroyed. It will be quite effective, I think: one by one, the grand total of how many men's lives, and how many women's virtue, he has ruined."

"Oh!" she said, with a quick little intake of her breath. "You are very direct."

He laughed in apology.

"I have to be," he said. "Wihsky is."

"And you really care so much? she asked, the laughter gone out of her eyes.

"Tremendously," he told her.

"Why?"

"For at least a thousand reasons," he answered, and added: "Ah, there's the music! Will you dance with the agitator again?

CHAPTER THREE.

Edith Mallon, a few hours after telling Mrs. Griswold Kane it was enough to know that John Smith was a great man, sat before a slow fire in the parlor of the big house in Massachusetts Avenue and went over in her mind that first talk with him in which he suddenly, almost brusquely, had avoided explaining in detail his reasons for supporting the cause of prohibition so ardently.

"His real reason," she thought to herself, "that is what I would like to know, above all things. It is what he has never told me. I wonder why."

Since then he had seen her frequently, and he had established himself as a national figure. His speeches before the committees of the House and Senate having control of legislation affecting the liquor question had been carried verbatim in the newspapers and had found a tremendous response from the country. His gift for organization had been of incalculable aid to the prohibitionists. And, most of all, his logic, his presentation of the question to individual congressmen, and his incessant industry in every phase of the agitation for the movement he represented, had brought it to the front in public affairs There was nobody, on either side of the controversy, to deny now that it was no longer a moribund matter. The fire of his spirit had breathed quick life into it and set it in motion.

"There is," he had told her more than once, "so terrific a sentiment throughout the country against whisky and its evils that, if ever the constitutional amendment is put to a vote, it will get far more than the two-thirds majority required in the House and Senate to pass it. Of course there will follow the more or less tedious work of getting the state legislatures to vote for the amendment after it is authorized. But that will come. My only concern is to get prompt action by the House And your friend Mr. Richard Mannersley is the chief obstacle in my path—he and his blessed committee."

It was for Mannersley that she was waiting now. He and Smith were equally attentive to her. Nellie Kane had described her as the heroine of a political play in which the two men, representing opposite sides of a big national issue, brought to her their various arguments

Mannersley came in, regretting that congress was about to adjourn, which would necessitate his going back to campaign in his New York district. He looked more like a stock broker than a statesman, his face devoid of any hint of imagination In spite of his expression of assurance and self-sufficiency, his florid features were too heavy His light blue eyes were hard, and seemed, somehow, in keeping with his white, wiry hair brushed straight up from his forehead. His waist line had begun to disappear. He looked undertrained, too much indulged. Edith, while she talked to him, wondered why her father liked him.

"Besides," he was saying, "I hate to go, because it looks like leaving the field to the enemy."

The tone of his heavy baritone voice made her wish she could terminate the interview then and there.

"What enemy?" she asked.

"Mr. John Smith," he replied, succeeding in showing his real opinion that he had nothing to fear from the other man.

"But," she objected, ignoring any personal application of his remark, "the legislative field is clear until December. Nothing can be done until congress reconvenes."

"I don't mean that," he said. "I dislike the idea of your—of his annoying you so much."

"But, really," she laughed lightly, "your concern is unnecessary. He doesn't annoy me at all."

"You mean you really like him?" He pretended to be astonished.

"Yes," she said, unhesitant; "I do."

"You admire this crank?"

He threw back his head, the movement making his thick neck bulge over his collar.

"Yes," she said flatly. "I admire his motives and his fearlessness."

"His reputation for fearlessness came from his brazen attack on our party," he objected, ridicule in his tone. "The world seems to belong to the impudent."

"But the party has never answered that attack," she reminded him.

"Why should it?" Mannersly asked in real surprise. "Why should anybody answer him? I wouldn't."

She regarded him a moment out of grave eyes.

"I wish," she said, "you could see the right of what he asks. As chairman of the committee on amendments to the constitution, it is you who stand in his way. And I would so like to see him win."

Mannersley's eyes showed his chagrin.

"That," he said, "is the very reason I am here this afternoon."

"What has that to do with it—my wishing that you and he might cooperate?"

She regretted the question as soon as she had asked it.

He leaned toward her suddenly, some of the floridness fading from his face, and, when he spoke, his voice trembled with what was, for him, great emotion.

"Simply this," he said. "He and I never can cooperate—and I love you. I want you to marry me." He was speaking very rapidly. "And the thought of your—your considering him is more than I can stand."

Although she had sensed what was coming, his frank declaration surprised her, so much so that she hesitated a moment before she put the laughing question:

"Are you proposing to me, Mr. Mannersly, or correcting my visiting list?"

"He's attempting to destroy me," he insisted excitedly. She had never seen him so moved. "If his motives, which you admire so greatly, prevail, he will destroy me. Can't you understand what I mean? Political destruction would not matter if he did not adorn it with your approval."

"Oh," she said regretfully, "you exaggerate me, and——"

The expression on his face made her turn in her chair and look toward the door. Wales, the butler, had lifted the hangings.

"Mr. Smith!" he announced.

Mannersley got to his feet instantly, and was saying goodby to Edith as Smith entered the room. The agitator came forward swiftly and took her hand. He turned to Mannersley, greeting him with almost excessive politeness.

Mannersley bowed stiffly.

"When are you leaving?" Smith inquired pleasantly.

"Surely," said Mannersley at the door, "you are not interested in that."

"On the contrary," Smith replied, "I am. I want to have a talk with you before you get away."

"Oh!" the other said dryly, as he took his departure.

"I'm sorry he was so—shall we say crude?" Smith said, taking the chair Mannersley had vacated. "It's an imposition on you to be annoyed by the differences that grow out of this fight."

She was relieved immensely by Mannersley's departure.

"Nothing about it annoys me," she said seriously. "Sometimes I wish I could help—the fight."

He looked gratified.

"You have, tremendously," he told her. "Every time I talk with you, you give me new inspiration."

He sprang out of his chair, with one of his sudden movements, and leaned against the mantel.

"That sounds trite and inadequate," he supplemented; "but it's more than true."

"I'm glad," she answered, looking up to him for a moment. "I like it, really—the atmosphere of fight, the knowing that you're going to win in the end. And there's something so very exciting in knowing the mysterious Mr Smith, the man who has set for himself the task of making congress do a thing it doesn't want to do."

"It isn't particularly exciting, is it?" he inquired gently.

"Of course it is. The mystery in it is enough."

He made no comment on that, although she waited for it. She looked up to him again, the hint of reproach in her eyes.

"You know," she suggested, "I think you might confide in me."

He stood up straight and returned her glance for a moment. when she looked away from him to the fire, he paced the length of the room and back again with his quick, swinging stride.

Japanese Trade in Manchuria.

Mr Yoshida, who was sent by the Japanese government to investigate commercial conditions in Manchuria, has made a report giving details of the trade. About one month is required to transport goods from Osaka to Harbin, even by passenger train. The principal Japanese products that are sent from Harbin to European Russia are hosiery, underwear, shoe soles, cotton textiles, medicines, isinglass and insulated electric wire Since the middle of August an import tax has been assessed upon hosiery and underwear by the Russian Manchurian customs. The trade of North Manchuria is on the road to prosperity, on account of the increased population and the development of agriculture, Harbin is regarded as the center of business.

No foolishness! Lift your corns and calluses off with fingers—It's like magic!

Sore corns, hard corns, soft corns or any kind of a corn, can harmlessly be lifted right out with the fingers if you apply upon the corn a few drops of freezone, says a Cincinnati authority.

For little cost one can get a small bottle of freezone at any drug store, which will positively rid one's feet of every corn or callus without pain.

This simple drug dries the moment it is applied and does not even irritate the surrounding skin while applying it or afterwards.

This announcement will interest many of our readers. If your druggist hasn't any freezone tell him to surely get a small bottle for you from his wholesale drug house.—adv.

KING ALBERT PARDONS MILITARY PRISONERS

The Hague Netherlands (by mail) —King Albert, as commander-in-chief of the Belgian army, has recently exercised clemency towards 150 military prisoners incarcerated at Fresnes After the experiences of his army at Liege, Namur and Antwerp, the king was obliged to introduce an iron discipline in order to maintain a high morale among the troops. The slightest offense was punished with the greatest severity Men who in ordinary circumstances would have received a light penalty, during the days of the battle of the Yser were condemned to five or six years' penal servitude Today with the army again strongly organized and permeated with a high spirit clemency can be exercised without danger, and groups of the condemned are set at liberty from time to time.

The latest batch of released men exchanged their prison garb for a new uniform at Le Mans. They received their new equipment with a cry of 'Long live the king!" and subsequently were sent direct to the front

China and America.

From the New York Times.

In 1910 China sent to the United States picked students to be educated with the funds repaid to China by the United States as an excess payment on indemnity account The Bulletin of Williston university has brought down to date the records of 10 of them Their quality may be indicated by the fact that the 10 took five first prizes and five second prizes in scholarship, being all that were offered in that year Thereafter they scattered among several colleges and universities, where several of them continued their meteoric record One of them is now a commissioner of agriculture in a province in China and director of a school of agriculture Two are professors in the Peking university and the Hydraulic Engineering college at Nanking Another has finished his studies in submarine and warship designing and is now on his way to China to practice what he has learned Another who took the same course is now in the Chinese ministry of marine Several occupy positions of opportunity and responsibility in American chemical and oil concerns of the first grade, with the intention of ultimately teaching their countrymen the secrets of industrial chemistry One was sent home mentally deranged by the severity of his studies

The reaction of American instruction upon the Chinese intellect is surely remarkable Nor is the international significance unimportant The original impression upon China of a course of conduct which seemed to the United States simple equity has certainly been deepened by the results of the use to which China put the money She spent it and has it back with increase The same is true of the United States. Not only have the funds repaid gone to the support of our educational institutions, they will continue to return increase so long as these remarkable young Chinamen are influential in the affairs of their country either officially or commercially In the background there may lurk some disquiet about the "yellow peril" It requires robustness of thought to consider the competition of China when it fully responds to the light of western culture These Chinese studied with the same zest that our students play football If they "carry on" there will be grim sport in competing against them However, it is early to borrow trouble.

The Czar's Backward Step.

From the New York Post.

The change of ministers in Russia means a step backward Premier Golitzin's first interview confirms the impression created by the removal with Trepoff of Count Ignatieff one of the most potent influences for progress in Russia. In the brusque announcement that hopes of internal reform must be postponed till after the war the new premier has flung down a challenge to the nation. That he ventures to do so argues a state of mind in reactionary circles that may be called courage but may also be called desperation There can be no question that the Russian people today is united as it has never been before in behalf of two things the continuation of the war to the bitter end, implying the elimination of pro-German influence in the ruling circles, and secondly, the substitution of progressive efficiency for bureaucratic disorder in the marshaling of Russia's resources for the business of war It is not the duma alone that has spoken out boldly against the "dark powers" that are strangling the national life The council of empire and the assembly of nobles have taken their stand with the duma The "removal" of the monk Rasputin the most popular embodiment of these dark powers was effected by several members of the highest Petrograd aristocracy It is an event which shows clearly to what degree the nation is united and determined to make its will felt in the shaping of the present critical situation

Beautiful Christmas Story.

From the Milwaukee Journal.

A little, old man came into the office of the Chicago charities and laid down $150, "to help out some needy families." Then he told them a story

Years ago, when all of my folks were living, I couldn't afford to give presents. Things are different now, but most of my folks have gone I went shopping just as if my folks were alive. I picked out a shawl for an aunt of mine She's dead and so I didn't buy it, but I put down the amount of money I would have spent. Then I went and got some things for my dead brother and for my father and mother, and for a few old friends of mine. I didn't really get them you know, but I priced the things I thought they would like When I added up all the money I would have spent, it came to almost $150, so I added a little to it, and here it is.

Has anyone heard of a finer, more beautiful way of showing a man's love for his dead? The things he had wanted to do, it was too late to do now. He might, it is true, have spent money on stone to make more artificial and melancholy the quiet hillside where "his folks" rest. He found a better way to spend his affection, to remember in fancy those he could no longer reach and then to see that his loving memory of them went to make others happier. He made his love for his dead a power to gladden the living. He laid tribute on grief and made it a blessing. It is not a sad story; we need not pity him. But we cannot help loving him.

Up Where the North Begins.

(Contributed by E. S. S. With Apologies to Arthur Chapman.)

Up where the snow flakes fall a good bit thicker,
Up where the winter's gale stings a little quicker,
That's where the North begins!

Up where bob-sleds, down great toboggans, flying,
Where clinking skates, o'er fields of ice, go gliding,
Where crunching feet on icy streets are sliding,
That's where the North begins!

Up where men are built a whole lot squarer,
Up where women play their game much fairer,
Up where love digs in souls a heap the deeper,
Where real friends are found a few cents cheaper,
Up where voices ring clearer and louder,
Where weak hearts are strengthened by the stouter,
That's where the North begins!

Up where grief's forgotten in the growing,
Up where the joy of living keeps a fellow going,
Up where there's more of doing, less of blowing,
Well—That's where the North begins!

WILD EXTRAVAGANCE AND SAD DESTITUTION FEATURE VIENNA LIFE

Two Year Review of Life and Economic Situation In Austria's Gay Capital.

Special Correspondence of the New York Evening Post

Vienna Dry as the figures may seem to be with which I must begin this letter, they will explain much to those who can read them correctly I am not in a position to say in what way and to what amount the numbers of the population of Vienna have changed during the second year of the war The women have in a great number of concerns usurped the places of the men, and though this fact alone must bring about quite a revolution in the economic circumstances of a great city the financial equilibrium has been maintained up to a certain degree Thus the banks and saving banks have increased their stock of ready money For instance, the taxes collected in Vienna during August 1916, amounted to 1 191 000 crowns more than in August 1915 The financial year of the city -beginning July 1, 1914, and ending June 30, 1915 closed with a heavy deficit The receipts amounted to 242,797,000 crowns, or say $48,500,000, the expenses to 248 698,000 crowns

Where the ordinary expenses are concerned, the receipts exceeded the expenses by 11 500 000 crowns, whereas the extraordinary expenses of 74 000, 000 crowns exceeded the previous provision for them by 17 000,000 crowns. The accounts for the second year of the war were so much more unsatisfactory that the semi Semetic municipal council of the city gave up the most important of its party principles strictly maintained since Dr Lueger's regime, and declared that it would no longer object to receiving Jews in its midst since it must decidedly decline to bear the entire burden of the responsibility of the city's finances.

During the whole year, 60,000 persons have asked and received the boon of a gratis dinner and a piece of bread The approaching winter threatens to increase the number of destitute persons —all the more, because the newly established war kitchens, which offer dinners at cost prices, do not seem to succeed in the way which might have been expected. As yet only 7,000 persons have resorted to these. Among the charities instituted by the municipality are the sewing and knitting rooms, in which at present 2,000 needy women are employed They earn as much as $10 a week, and in one year have made 1,500,000 pieces of needlework and knitting The expenses for material and wages amounted to 2,000,000 crowns, the sale of the goods, mostly to the war department, fetched 1,500,000 crowns. Half a million mattresses and as many bolsters were made, 2 500,000 soldiers' shirts and drawers were sewn, 1,000,000 sandbags 1,500,000 bread and oat bags, muffs, gloves, caps, socks, stockings, gaiters comforters, mittens, jackets, were made by the 10 thousands, by these women alone, who also provide the hospitals with sheets, blankets, towels and slippers.

The mayor, in making his report, deplores the fact that it was impossible to provide Vienna satisfactorily with even the indispensable victuals. There were not enough new potatoes to go all round, and the old potatoes were scarce and bad Of course it is to be hoped that this difficulty will disappear, as the potato harvest of 1916 comes to market There was enough bread, though its distribution still offers many difficulties, partly due to the "bread-marks" which are, however, indispensable where a fair distribution is necessary, and partly because the number of shops where bread is sold is much too small in proportion to the number of persons who wish to be served at the same time.

Lard, bacon, butter, soap and fat of every description were very scarce, and induced the authorities to provide a fat card, because all persons who had ready money tried to buy up all the fat there was, to preserve it for the winter, and be prepared against the dangers of a prolongation of the war. The cards, which allow only a small quantity of fat for consumption to every person, are the only means of insuring a fair distribution among rich and poor In the summer and autumn there were plenty of fresh vegetables and prices were not exorbitant, but fruit, though plentiful, was very dear, and the children of the poor had, we are afraid, to go without.

The price of meat and eggs was so high that the reduced quantities offered for sale were amply sufficient for the demand. Figures will explain best. In August, 1915, 22,767 head of cattle arrived in the Vienna market. In August, 1916, the number was 8,899 calves, 18,544 in August, 1915; 7,000 in 1916. pigs, 49,527 in 1915, 2,562 in 1916. The prices explain why there was not a greater demand. Beef cost 11½ crowns, pork, 9½ bacon 10 crowns, and not to be had; butter, 10 crowns, and only sold in very small quantities; margarine, which before the war was considered unwholesome and not used in socalled "better houses," was willingly bought at a crown more than fresh butter. A kilogramme of potatoes cost 36 hellers, sauerkraut, 50; onions, a crown, or 20 cents, beans, 2 crowns. An egg cost 30 hellers, and was considered a prize when it was fresh. The price of coal is only 50 per cent higher than it was before the war, but coal merchants make the customer pay for delivery, 30 per cent of the price of the coal. A metric hundredweight of coal costs 3 crowns and 1 crown carriage. Yet the statistical reports on the health of the community show that there was less sickness and less mortality last summer than in the same months of the preceding year.

Tradesmen Profit.

The tradesmen have not come up to the mark during this anxious time. Though not a day passes but somebody is fined for taking undue profits, it is impossible for the authorities to keep them within bounds of honesty and decency. Shopmen and shopgirls have entirely given up the over polite ways, which were considered even a modest customer's due. "We are not asking you to buy!" is a remark one hears in every shop almost. "If the price does not suit you (a crown for a reel of white cotton of the smallest description) leave it! There are plenty who are glad to buy!"

Indeed there are—people, no doubt, who earn through the war, and who buy all the luxurious goods exhibited in Vienna shops at fancy prices. Jewels, new and old, are in great demand; but more even old porcelain, bronzes, pictures—every army purveyor seems anxious to come out of the war a fullblown collector! The women carry old bead bags with silver clasps and chains, for which, if they are fine, they readily pay 500 crowns. Houses, country seats, landed property are all in great demand, and are paid many times their actual value. On one side absolute need and destitution, caused by the high price of living and the most reprehensible extravagance on the other Was there ever such a world?

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF HAIR STOPS FALLING

Girls! Try This! Makes Hair Thick, Glossy, Fluffy, Beautiful—No More Itching Scalp.

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable luster, softness and luxuriance.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any store, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Adv.

Why Rheumatism Comes With Cold Weather!

BY VALENTINE MOTT PIERCE, M. D.

A close connection exists between these two—cold weather and rheumatism. Prof. Alex. Haig, of London, has the most followers in the medical profession in the belief that the presence in the system of uric acid, or its salts in excess, is the real cause of rheumatism. Everyone has recognized the difference in the appearance of their water as soon as it gets cold; there is often a copious sediment of brickdust.

Several causes may lead up to an accumulation of uric acid in the system, which, in turn, causes rheumatism or gout, or creaky joints, or swollen fingers, or painful joints. For one reason the skin does not throw off the uric acid, by profuse sweating, as in the hot weather, and the kidneys are unable to take care of the double burden. Another reason is that people do not drink as much water in cold weather as in summer, which helps to flush the kidneys. Again, they eat more meat in cold weather, and some people are so susceptible that they soon develop rheumatism after eating meat.

At all such times persons should drink copiously of hot water, say, a pint morning and night, and take Anuric three or four times a day. This Anuric comes in tablet form and can be had at almost any drug store. It dissolves the uric acid in the system and carries it outward. I would advise everyone to take Anuric occasionally, and continue for three or four weeks, and in that way avoid rheumatism, gout and many of the painful disorders due to uric acid. —Adv.

IOWA

You may talk about the mountain breeze,
And the odor of the pine,
The grandeur of the Rockies
And the castle guarded Rhine:
But for me the rolling prairies
Where the vagrant zephyrs play
Like angels 'round the throne of God,
In dear, old Iowa,

The ocean's spray is balm they say
To men of shattered will,
The sunny south, in winter time,
Makes languid pulses thrill;
But for me the upland hillside
Where the winter winds hold sway,
And snow-drifts bridge the valleys
In dear, old Iowa.

You may sing about the lotus bloom
Where tropic waters dance,
Or lillies fair beyond compare
In the vales of Sunny France;
But for me a field of clover
Where the shattered sunbeams gay
Caress a sea of tangled bloom
In dear, old Iowa.

The fertile valley of the Nile
Is famed in story old.
The Yukon's turbid waters rush
Across its sounds of gold:
But for beauty, find the valley
Where the Wapsie winds its way
Or the lazy Iowa drifts dreaming by
In dear old Iowa.

House Has Circus With Narrow Tired Rigs Bill

Legislative wags had a field day in the house of the Iowa legislature Saturday when Rogers of Linn attempted to put over a measure compelling owners of narrow-tired wagons to pay a yearly tax of $5 for each vehicle

"I would like to ask the gentleman from Linn if this includes baby buggies," said Helming.

"No, but it takes in the fitnies," retorted Rogers.

Whereupon Giltner of Monroe offered an amendment requiring two coats of fresh green paint on every narrow-tired wagon. It passed but Rogers' brain child was killed.

The discussion arose when a vote was called for on house file 106 by Boles repealing the wide tire vehicle highway tax rebate law, which has been a dead letter. Under the present law a farmer driving a wide-tired wagon is entitled to a 25 per cent rebate on his highway tax, not to exceed $5 a year.

After the bill has been read, Rogers offered his amendment.

The house voted for the repeal of the present rebate law, 80 to 22.

Real Blizzard Sunday

This community had not fully recovered from the ravages of the severe blizzard which raged, Wednesday and Thursday of last week before she was struck by another and more severe blizzard which had everything its own way all day Sunday. It was one of the fiercest storms that ever struck this vicinity, the thermemeter hanging right around 20 below all day and the wind blowing a gale of about 60 to 75 miles an hour. Last weeks storm tied up train service until Saturday night when the passenger which had been tied up at Germania since Wednesday managed to get back to Iowa Falls and were intending to make a round trip to Estherville and return, Sunday, but the second storm knocked the sox off from that expedition. Sunday's storm abated early Monday morning and the snow plow cleared the track Monday, arriving here about 6:00 p. m. Immediately upon the snow plows arrival at Iowa Falls, the passenger was started out, reaching here about 11:00 p. m. but did not return until Tuesday evening. The weather man has been treating us to some milder "dope" since Sunday and trains have again ceased to be a curiosity.

Returns From France

Dr. Geo. Zinn received word the first of the week that his nephew, F W. Zinn of Battle Creek, Michigan, who joined the American Legion in France when the war broke out over two years ago and has been fighting in the French army since on the western front, had been granted furlough and would sail from Bordeaux, France, February 3rd. He is due to arrive in New York, February 14th and will be met at the dock by his father

It is not known how much furlough he has been granted but he expects to return to the front again unless the war is settled before his time is up or unless the United States should become entangled in the foreign conflict.

Mr. Zinn is a talented writer and quite fluent speaker and should he visit his uncle here we would like to hear him give us an impartial lecture on his experiences in the French army.

Married at Waterloo

Auctioneer B. A. Reemstma left last week for Aplington for an over Sunday visit and on Monday was married at Waterloo to Miss Bera Lindamen of Aplington. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. W. Lockwood, pastor of the Grace M E. church of Waterloo. They will be at home in Klemme after March 15th

Mr. Reemstma has made a number of friends during his stay in Klemme who are glad to extend hearty congratulations to him and his bride We understand that they will occupy rooms in the Gimer property until next summer when they expect to erect a new home.

The Times joins with their many readers in bidding them a hearty welcome to Klemme and wish them a long and happy life well filled with health and prosperity.

ASK BIG INCREASE FOR INSTITUTIONS

High Cost of Living Blamed in Bill Asking $200,000 More in Budget to Support Wards.

Des Moines Ia., Feb 5—Owing to the high cost of living the state of Iowa will pay $200 000 more annually in the future for the support of the 10,000 wards at the state institutions than was paid during the year now closing

In a bill filed in the general assembly by the board of control, provision is made for the increasing cost of all clothing and foods by proposed increases in per capita maintenance allowed in 12 of the 14 institutions

Although the cost of living has been estimated to have increased 20 per cent in the last year the board of control hopes to get through by increasing the appropriation for the institutions 10 per cent

Estimates of Board.

The state pays a little over $2 000 000 a year for support of the state wards In the future it will cost about $2 200 000 per year

The legislature is asked to make the following increase in the per capita allowance for each institution per month

State hospital at Cherokee $15 to $17, state hospital at Independence, $15 to $17 state hospital at Clarinda, $14 to $16, state hospital at Mount Pleasant $11 to $16, boys industrial school at Eldora, $14 to $16, penitentiary at Fort Madison, $11 to $13 reformatory at Anamosa, $11 50 to $13 50, girls' industrial school at Mitchellville, $16 to $18, institution for feeble minded at Glenwood, $12 to $13, school for the deaf at Council Bluffs, $22 to $24 (nine months of the year) soldiers orphans' home at Davenport $14 to $15 soldiers' home at Marshalltown $15 to $16

MODEL INJUNCTION BILL IS ATTACKED

Des Moines, Ia Feb 5 Opposition to the model injunction law to take from state courts the right to issue injunctions in strike cases which was presented in the senate by Senator Chase was voiced before a joint session of the senate judiciary committee and the house labor committee by five speakers all citing different reasons why the bill should be killed

Opponents of the measure declared that it is unconstitutional, would take from the employer the last rights he retains against his employes that there is no necessity for such legislation in Iowa that it is being advocated and supported for reasons purely political and if enacted it would legalize conspiracy

Walter L. Stewart attorney for the Des Moines Business Men's league, the State Laundry Men's association and the State Hotel Men's association, attacked the law as unconstitutional He declared that the attempt contained in the measure to strip the courts of their inherent powers proposes to go beyond the province of the legislature. The provision of the Chase bill declaring labor not property attempts to deprive the employer of the right to protect his property rights by injunction, a right accorded him by decisions of the United States supreme court, according to Mr Stewart

He declared also that the unorganized laboring men would be deprived by the statute of their only property right, the right to labor

AUTO TAX SHOWS LARGE DECREASE

Secretary of State Allen Would Like Change in Laws Requiring New Number Plates Annually.

Des Moines, Ia., Feb 2—W S. Allen, secretary of state, is recommending that the legislature change the automobile registration law so as to return to the system of issuing number plates annually.

The last assembly enacted a law providing for issuing number plates for a three year period

The secretary of state says there will be a big loss to the state by the terms of the new registration law He reports that from November 1, 1915 to January 26, 1916, the receipts of the registration department were $675,484

Returns Falling Off.

For the period from November 1, 1916, to January 26, 1917, the receipts of the department were $399,060 The reduction in amount taken in is $276,423.

"While not all of this amount is lost to the state, a good portion of it never will be collected," said Mr Allen

"The old automobile law helped to enforce itself, for the reason that a car owner who operated with a number a year old advertised his failure to re-register

"The law provides for sending out lists of delinquent car owners to local officials so that the fees may be collected That list does not go out until May In the meantime car owners will be operating their machines without paying the fee, and many of them never will pay

"All registration fees are due January 1 and delinquent April 1 But any car owner who operates his machine on the highway any time without paying the 1917 fee is violating the law Because the fees do not become delinquent until April 1 does not give the autoist the privilege of running before that time without paying the fee.

"The present law provides too many ways for the car owner to defraud the state.

"It is my opinion that the old system should be restored."

Mr Allen opposed the adoption of the present automobile law two years ago on the ground that it would result in a big loss of revenue to the state

RAVNER PASSES ON "DRY" AMENDMENT

Attorney General, in Opinion, Holds Measure Is Correct as It Now Stands.

Des Moines, Ia., Jan. 31—H. M. Havner, attorney general, today handed an opinion to Governor Harding in which he holds that the constitutional amendment providing for statewide prohibition, now pending in the house of representatives, is correct and constitutional as it stands.

The resolution has been adopted by the senate. If it passes the house it will be submitted to the people at the next general election, unless a special election is called for its consideration. On account of the change in date, as suggested by Havner, it will be necessary for the resolution to pass the senate again.

ELECTION COST STATE OVER ONE-HALF MILLION

Des Moines, Ia., Jan. 31—The state of Iowa paid out more than $500,000 as expenses of the two primary elections and the one general election held last year, according to figures tabulated by State Librarian A. J. Small.

The presidential preference primary cost the least, the state putting up $129,399 99 to voice the general sentiment of republicans and democrats for Cummins and Wilson respectively.

The June primaries and vote on suffrage cost the state $197,637.06, while the general election cost $222,669 13. The total for the three elections was $549,706 18

Polk county alone spent a total of $21,192 This was the highest total of any county in the state.

BLOODY TRAIL SHOWS MEXICANS WOUNDED

Empty Shells Indicate Forces Firing on Americans, After Taking Cattle, Were Soldiers.

Nogales, Ariz., Jan 31 - No disturbances were reported here from Ruby, Ariz., following a two days' shooting fracas between American cowboys, backed by guardsmen and Mexicans of unauthenticated sympathies with no known fatalities. No American was reported hurt, but blood spatters left by retreating Mexicans led to the belief that some of them were wounded

Government officials spent the day investigating the incident

General Pummer expressed the opinion that the Mexicans were members of an "irresponsible band of cattle rustlers"

The soldiers who searched houses on the Mexican side found two fresh hides, both bearing the brands used by American cattlemen fresh beef, saddles, bridles, spurs and a rifle with blood stained stock

J W Chambers, foreman of the Arivaca Land & Cattle company, and Leslie Woodell, foreman said that shells found in the trenches which the Mexicans evacuated were from seven and eight millimetres Mausers, the type of gun, they said, which is used in the Mexican army

Most of the fighting yesterday and Friday between the American troops and Mexicans, was at a range of 600 yards, according to the men engaged. The trouble began when five American cowboys approached the line from a knoll after watching an alleged attempt of Mexicans to cut off several cattle from a herd grazing near the boundry Mexicans stationed in an adobe hut opened fire

CONNELLY FORGETS WHO GAVE HIM TIP

Clerk in Treasury Department Said by Washington Broker to Have Dabbled in Stocks.

New York, Feb. 2—Members of the "leak" investigation committee before reconvening today, said that on account of the international situation they probably would close the New York hearings today and return to Washington at once.

F. A. Connolly the Washington broker and partner of R. W. Bolling, President Wilson's brotherinlaw, today again insisted, in a searching cross-examination by Representative Campbell, of Kansas, that he could not recall the name of anyone who gave him any information about the peace note.

Pressed as to why he took Bolling into his firm, Connolly said he "had money" and he also "liked him."

Connolly gave the committee the name of a clerk in the treasury department who had been dealing in stocks with him. The account was small he said, and the clerk's own.

On account of the international crisis the New York hearings on the "leak" inquiry will close with today's session The investigation will be resumed in Washington tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

CAPITAL REMOVAL GHOST IS REVIVED

Representative Stuhr, of Hall, Introduces Bill to Take Capital to Central Nebraska.

Lincoln, Neb., Feb. 2—An auction sale of the state capital to whatever city or community within a specified area will pay the highest price for it is provided for in the removal bill which was introduced in the house Wednesday.

Representative Taylor of Custer county is the real moving spirit of the bill He frankly admitted that he had stayed up till midnight Tuesday helping to frame it

Mr. Taylor seems to be depending mainly for assistance on republican minority members in pushing the bill, although he is nominally the leader of the democratic majority. Representative Dorsey of Franklin county, a republican lawyer, put it into legal shape and Mr. Stuhr of Hall county, another republican member, hustled around to get members to put their names to the bill as its introducers.

The measure authorizes the state board of control, or the board of educational lands and funds, to receive offers of lands or money from any community that wants the capitol. The intention is to get a large tract of land, sell off what is not needed and use the proceeds to build a new capitol in the location selected

He figures that the land would become very valuable and the state could sell the surplus acreage as town lots for enough to pay for the building. This plan would put the state temporarily into the real estate business.

The framers of the bill are willing to have the capital remain at Lincoln until 1924, while a new one is being constructed elsewhere.

The bill as introduced by Stuhr provides for a tax levy of 1 mill running for six years and producing $3,000,000 as a fund for the new capitol building Of this amount a special provision is made that $500,000 may be used for the purchase of land and buildings thereon if necessary and $25,000 for salaries and expenses for arranging the removal and auction. A further provision is made that the cities that bid at the auction for the capital shall offer land in no case containing less than one square mile.

How much backing Stuhr will have from his home town of Grand Island in his effort to revive the ghost of capital removal after its long interment, is not known It is understood that he counts on the backing of commercial interests in that city and also hopes to get support from Hastings Central City, Kearney, Broken Bow and other possible candidates for the seat of government.

Drawing All Support.

This scheme like the one promoted by John Sink in the legislature of 1911 contemplates that every community in the state which might entertain any hope of securing the capital will ally itself with a league against the city of Lincoln Stuhr is too foxy to propose in his bill that the capital shall be located at Grand Island, but is leaving that part of the question open with the hope that it will draw support from every possible source

In general, the bill will provide that the board of control shall fix the location of the capital at some point within 100 miles of the geographical center of the state This provision would eliminate Lincoln, and the rest would be a scramble among some of the interior cities as to which of them should get the prize for itself

STOCK YARDS CHARGES ARE EXCESSIVE, FIND

Lincoln, Neb., Feb. 1.—That some of the charges now made by live stock commission dealers at the South Omaha market should be reduced is the unanimous finding of the house committee on live stock and grazing in a report filed by Chairman Dan, with the chief clerk Wednesday

This action was taken after a hearing by the committee last Friday, at which officers of the South Omaha live stock exchange appeared and defended the existing scale of charges.

NONPARTISAN ELECTION OF COUNTY SUPERINTENDENTS

Lincoln Neb, Feb. 1—By a vote of 84 to 8 the house today passed a bill providing for the nonpartisan nomination and election of state and county superintendents. It also passed a bill requiring practically all corporations employing more than 10 persons to institute a semi-monthly pay day It killed a bill requiring a physician's certificate in order to procure a marriage license.

The house adopted a resolution asking the secretary of state to provide a list of registered lobbyists together with the names of those present.

A delegation of women nurses visited the house during the morning and demonstrated their power as lobbyists when the house killed a bill permitting non-graduates of training schools to seek certificates.

GAS EXPLOSION AND FIRE KILLS 26

Out of 72 Persons in Ghetto Tenement, Two-Thirds Are Accounted For, or Known Saved.

Chicago, Feb. 2--Firemen attacking the ice covered mass of wreckage penetrated through the outer crust at 10 a. m., and declared that they could distinguish what seemed to be voices talking beneath them Efforts to remove the debris were redoubled, and ambulances were sent for in the hope that victims still alive might be rescued.

Chicago, Feb 2.—At noon, 11 hours after an explosion and fire which wrecked a west side tenement building at 1 a m, today, the police announced that 26 persons were missing and probably dead Ninety-one persons resided in the building, according to the agent representing it, the janitor accounted for 19 of these as being away at work, leaving 72 whom he assumed were in the building at the time the leaking gas exploded. These the police accounted for as follows

Known dead, 2, injured 21 missing, probably dead, 26, known rescued or accounted for 23

Switchmen Save 15.

The explosion wrecked one end of the tenement building which contained 24 flats, 16 of which were occupied. The flames burst out throughout the lower story immediately When firemen arrived they were able to rescue a few children who were dropped by their parents from the upper windows. Some adults also were saved in this way. A group of railroad switchmen who happened on the scene in advance of the firemen are reported to have rescued 15.

At daybreak Fire Chief O'Connor said that the ruins were so hot that it would be many hours before search of the wreckage could be made and an accurate account of the loss of life be ascertained. The water thrown on the ruins froze almost as fast as it fell and the burning gas, which remained alight long after the material of the building had ceased to burn, presented an unusual spectacle, much as if an iceberg were on fire. Employes of the gas company scattered throughout the neighborhood to guard against possible other leaks and added to the alarm felt in the district. For this reason many whose homes were in no danger from the flames carried their household goods into the street. Pavements and sidewalks were littered with many such little collections, cradles, chairs and tables—meager exhibits testifying to the poverty of the neighborhood.

Street Full of Flame.

Completely to extinguish the fire it was necessary to dig down to the gas main This, owing to the frozen ground, was slow work, and seven hours after the explosion the main had not been reached.

Those driven from their homes found refuge from the cold at Hull House settlement hospitals, the police stations, and in stores, the proprietors of which, when alarmed by the explosions, opened their doors.

Patrick Donahue, an assistant fire marshal, said that when he reached the scene a great flame of gas was leaping across West Fourteenth place.

"A lot of these people," he said, "must have been caught like rats in a trap They were in bed and asleep and had no chance to escape Where gas and flames did not cut them off, falling stairways and crumbling walls did."

Burning, Try to Save Young.

Others who were upon the scene early asserted that they saw women with hair and clothing ablaze carrying or dragging their young into the street, hysterical and screaming.

A score or more of persons were injured in adjoining structures by flying glass or in their mad haste to escape into the street. Most of these were cared for at the county hospital

Gas Leak Reported Thursday.

Morris Feldman, janitor of the building, said that 67 persons were, or should have been in the building last night. He said he had made diligent inquiry in the neighborhood and as a result of his investigations, was forced to the conclusion that of these 40 persons were missing and probably dead

Two tenants of the building, who escaped, but would not give their names, said that the odor of gas was observed yesterday and was reported to the gas commission.

TO MOBILIZE ALL CIVILIANS

Paris, Feb. 2.—The government has decided to mobilize for purposes contributing to the national defense, the entire civilian population of France of both sexes, between the ages of 16 and 60 This plan is now under study by the various ministeries concerned.

ASKS U. S. FOR ADVICE.

New York, Feb 2 -A definite ruling and instructions from official sources as to what movements of American steamships was asked Secretary Lansing at the state department by P. A. S. Franklin, president of the International Mercantile Marine. Mr Franklin said that unless instructed to the contrary by Washington the liner St. Louis would sail Saturday for Liverpool, the regular port of destination.

PRUSSIA BEATEN; HOPES U. S. WILL FIND A WAY OUT

ord Northcliffe Does Not Want Peace Treaty Negotiations Hampered by German-American Vote Here.

WAITED TOO LONG, HE SAYS

Britain Is Now on Land as on Sea, He Says — Declaration Shows America Europe's Plight.

Chicago, Feb. 3- Charles H Grasty in a special London cable to the Herald today says:

"This is the greatest test America has ever had," said Lord Northcliffe, last night "I haven't wanted to see America come in this war I hope even yet it may yet it may be avoided We can win alone with our allies and when the time comes for making peace we will not need to be afraid of any possible influence of the German-American vote

Shows Europe's Plight.

"The United States has been remote from the war It is perhaps natural that she should not know fully what European civilization has been up against these two and a half years. Now she will know what it is to be in the path of a great power running amuck."

"Why has Germany taken this action?" I asked

"Do not say Germany; it is Prussia," returned Lord Northcliffe 'It is a shame that one state should be able to cast obloquy on all the other German peoples who loathe this kind of warfare on women and children as much as the British do

Whipped, Northcliffe Says.

"Prussia's reason is this. They are desperate. We have whipped them. They had the greatest war machine ever constructed We stopped them at the Marne. After wiping out between Mons and Meaux, practically the entire British trained strength, they have waited until England has overtaken and passed them in men and material. Our gallant allies held them while we made splendidly ready

"We now stand on the land as on the sea. We have got Prussia in a corner. She is doomed. They know what the military situation is and that is why they are throwing prudence and law to the winds, and they misjudge America as they misjudged us.

Berlin Fears Results.

"As I have said, I hope that you may with honor and self respect, remain aloof, but if you should be compelled by circumstances to come in, you would bring an enormous weight of manhood, energy and resources of all kinds, and the barbarian of middle Europe, already beaten potentially, would be sooner brought to book.

"The barbarous and piratical warfare which Prussia brings to our coasts finds us ready all along the line. We are organized We have a capable government. We put our house in order just in time. Berlin knows it—knows that we will be stronger and stronger as time goes on"

SECOND MESSAGE IN LEAK MISSING

Every Operator Disputes Statement of Connelly, of Whose Firm President's Brotherinlaw Is Member.

New York, Feb. 2.—When the congressional "leak" inquiry committee adjourned today to meet in Washington, the testimony of F. A. Connolly, the Washington broker, regarding his sending a resume of President Wilson's peace note to E. F. Hutton & Co., New York, brokers' had been disputed by every telegraph operator in Hutton's employ, who Sherman L. Whipple said, might have handled Connolly's message.

Connolly had testified he sent the message over a private wire, between his house and Hutton's, between 12.15 and 1:30 p. m., December 20. Joseph W. Becker, Hutton's operator on this wire, first swore yesterday he received no such message. The other operators who followed today with denials that they received it were John F. Hummell, who works the only other regular wire into Connolly's and others who might have relieved either Becker or Hummell.

To Influence Witnesses.

During the examination of the operators it developed that prior to their coming to the hearing today, E. F. Hutton, head of the firm, criticised Becker in the operating room in the presence of the other operators for his testimony. Hutton contended, according to the operators, that Becker could not remember at this date, whether he received the Connolly message.

Doubtful whether the Connolly message did reach the Hutton house by telegraph, the committee will investigate other channels through which it might have arrived. The fact developed today that Connolly's private wire is interchangeable between telephone and telegraph, has aroused interest and this subject will be gone into more fully.

Another Message Missing.

George A. Ellis, jr., the member of the Hutton firm, who wrote a warning to customers from the Connolly resume of the note that it was coming, will be the first witness called in Washington. He now is on his way north from Savannah, Ga., and has been advised by telegraph to stop off at Washington.

Inquiry also will be made soon into another telegram, which, like Connolly's, is missing. According to the testimony of M. A. Maltby, a Hutton operator today, Mr. Clement, of the Clement Curtis company, of Chicago, sent the Hutton house a message of protest touching on the president's note information disseminated by E F. Hutton & Co., which has not been produced.

WILSON WANTS TO KNOW WHAT GERMANY MEANS

Does "Unrestricted Undersea Warfare" Deny Those on Passenger Liners and Merchant Ships Chance to Escape?

SAY GERARD BROUGHT TIP

President's Unprecedented Efforts for Peace Made With View to Changing Situation and Averting Declaration.

Washington D C, Feb 3 President Wilson has already communicated with Ambassador Gerard, it was declared on good authority today, asking him to find out exactly what the course of German submarines would be toward passenger liners and toward persons on board merchant vessels and whether no warning and no opportunity to escape were to be given. It is said the president wants to find out exactly what is meant by "unrestricted undersea warfare" and on what Berlin says will depend whether there is a break

In view of everything coming by cable from Berlin and inasmuch as the German embassy is known to believe past pledges are to be disregarded, it is not expected here Gerard will be able to give encouragement

Quick Break Expected.

The conviction that the United States and Germany are headed for a speedy diplomatic break, if not actual war, continues to grow in Washington with advices from Berlin that Germany has fully resolved at all hazards on unrestricted undersea war and with Austria settled on the same policy. The United States is forced into the position where it must either make good on the Sussex ultimatum of April 19, 1916, or must humiliate itself by shifting its policy In the absence of an authoritative announcement of what the policy will be in the face of the new complications it is widely accepted here that the president will stand by the Sussex note That will mean a quick break in diplomatic relations with the central powers and the handing of their passports to the German and the Austrian ambassadors

One of the important disclosures today is that the administration has known what to expect ever since Ambassador Gerard visited this country At the time there were rumors he told the president that Germany was planning to engage in ruthless and unrestricted submarine warfare. They were denied, but from reliable sources it is learned that Ambassador Gerard knew what was coming, that he advised the president and Secretary Lansing, and that it was in large part because of the advices of the president from Ambassador Gerard and perhaps other quarters, that Berlin was planning to let her submarines run amuck, that it was resolved by the White House to undertake a strong peace movement

Explains Peace Efforts.

The president feared continuance of the war would drag in the United States and concluded that if the war could be shortened or a peace conference brought to the point where it was a real likelihood, Germany would not adopt a sea policy almost sure to lead to grave complications with neutrals This, it is now known, is the real explanation of the earnest efforts of the president for peace This, too, explains the statement of Secretary Lansing about the United States being drawn to the "verge of war," a statement which events have already shown to be the exact truth It may not have been diplomacy to say it at the time, but it was the blunt expression of a man who felt deeply the responsibilities of the situation

BILL WOULD BUILD 100 NEW U. S. SUBS

Eighty Would Be for Coast Defense and 31 Would Be Constructed on Pacific Coast.

Washington, D C, Feb 3—Immediate construction of 100 submarines, 80 for coast defense and 20 for fleet operations, was proposed in a special bill introduced today by Senator Poindexter, of Washington These would be in addition to the 18 submarines proposed in the regular naval bill now pending in the House

The bill would direct that not less than six of the fleet submarines and not less than 25 of the coast submarines would be built on the Pacific coast. It would authorize the secretary of the navy to spend $4,000,000 to equip government navy yards for construction of the vessels.

FORTIFICATIONS BILL IS ADOPTED

Senate's Only Concern Apparently Is Whether $51,000,000 Is Enough, In View of Crisis With Germany.

Washington, Feb. 3.—The annual fortifications bill, carrying $51,000,000 passed by the House Monday, passed the Senate unamended. Usual objections were lacking, the only senators who suggested changes expressed concern as to whether the amount would be sufficient in view of the situation with Germany

RAIDER SUNK AGAIN.

Rio Janeiro, Feb. 2.—Persistent reports have been received by the newspapers here that the German raider has been sunk in an engagement with a British squadron The British cruiser Amethyst is said to have been in an engagement with a German submarine.

JAPS, INCENSED AT BILLS IN IDAHO AND OREGON, MAY COMPEL BREAK WITH U. S.

Washington Withholds New Crisis With Nipponese Until Influence of Congressman to Carry Out Wishes of Tokio Is Asked by State Department, When Protest Is Disclosed by Interview With Borah, Telegraphed to Boise and Made Public From That Place.

SERIOUS, FRIENDS OF AMERICANS BELIEVE

Say Passage of Added Anti-Alien Bills at This Time May Force Situation in Orient Beyond Control of Friendly Leaders. Especially as There Is Government Crisis in Orient, and May Result in Selection of Anti-American Government.

Salem, Ore., Feb 3—Oregon's antialien land bill was withdrawn from the legislature here today by Senator George Wilbur, democrat, who introduced it, because he said he did not want to handicap President Wilson with possible Japanese complications during the present German crisis

Washington, Feb. 3—Japan's representations to the United States against the antialien land bills pending in the Idaho and Oregon legislatures, although made informally through the embassy here, are considered no less serious at this critical juncture of international affairs than her protests against the California law four years ago

Absolutely nothing had been permitted by the administration to become public until the protest was disclosed by appeals to the Oregon and Idaho delegations in congress to use their influence at home to prevent passage of the bills at this time.

The state of feeling in Japan probably is much disturbed by the recent crisis in the government. It has been represented to the state department as being so serious that the Japanese statesmen who wish to preserve friendly relations with the United States fear the passage of more legislation in this country directed against their country may force the situation at home beyond their control

U. S. to Aid Jap Demands.

Senator Borah today laid before Secretary Lansing a telegram from the Idaho state senate explaining that the antialien lands bill, just passed by the house, is aimed at all aliens and not particularly at the Japanese, and asking that the federal government not attempt to interfere with its passage.

Secretary Lansing was interested in the explanation, but said it did not change the situation as much as it did apply to Japanese. Senator Borah took no further steps.

Senator Chamberlain repeated today he did not expect to interfere as he believed the legislature of Oregon had a right to pass such a bill.

PRO-GERMANS IN SENATE ASK DELAY

Claim Middle West Is Against Break—Lewis, Hitchcock and Stone Are Exerting Every Influence to Avoid Action.

Washington, D C., Feb. 3—The middle west does not want a break with Germany. This has become plain here Canvass of a large number of middle western members disclose little or no advocacy of a break and a strong feeling this country should "go slow." Senators like Lewis, Hitchcock, Stone and others of pro-German, rather than pro-ally leaning, are exerting influence against a break

MESSAGE TO IOWA SOLONS

Governor Harding Has Plans Which Include Special Session—Four Points Involved.

Des Moines, Ia., Feb 2 -Gov W L. Harding read a special message to the joint session of the house and senate at noon today He made four specific recommendations, as follows

1 That the legislature appoint a special committee to revise the system of raising revenue by taxation

2 That a similar committee be appointed to investigate state, city and county government and report a method for revision to eliminate overlapping authority, duplication of work, duplication of departments and needless offices and officials, all in the name of economy

3. That a committee of skilled experts be named to revise the code of the state of Iowa and rewrite it in simple and clear language

That the legislature appropriate $100,000 to be placed under direct control of the governor to be expended in part or in whole to check the Interstate Commerce commission appraised valuation of the railroads of Iowa, that the state may know whether to accept or reject such valuations

The necessity and importance of the investigation, the governor declares, is found in the fact that these valuations will be used in taxation and the making of freight and passenger rates in the near future.

The governor further recommends that the three committees devote 60 days, following adjournment of the present session, to their work and report at an adjourned session of the legislature.

SAYS CEMENT TRUST IS RULING COUNTY PRICES

Des Moines, Ia., Feb. 2.—Rep. James B Weaver, of Polk county, today introduced a concurrent resolution in the house of the Iowa legislature in which he charges that the cement interests have established a combine to prevent counties from buying cement and to force the price upward. Representative Weaver will make a speech when the resolution comes up for discussion tomorrow, in which he will lay out his evidence of the "cement trust." He asks that the attorney general be asked to make an investigation and report the results of the same to the legislature.

HOUSE JOLLIES BILL TO PENALIZE NARROW TIRES

Des Moines, Ia., Feb. 2.—Representative Rogers, of Linn, attempted to put over a bill today which would compell owners of narrow tired wagons to pay a yearly tax of $5 for each vehicle. The legislature took occasion to have some fun with the bill and Representative Giltner, of Monroe, amended the bill to demand two coats of green paint on every narrow tired wagon. The amendment passed, but the original bill was killed.

DENNIS HOGAN TO BE FARM LOAN HEAD

Washington, Feb. 2.—The chamber of commerce delegates from Iowa were assured today that Dennis Hogan, of Massena, would be named president of the new land bank of the Omaha district, to which Iowa belongs. Mr. Hogan is widely known as a rural credits authority. Iowa is likely also to have H M. Bostwick, a well known banker, as a member of the board.

"BONE DRY" BILL PASSES.

Washington, Feb. 2.—The Alaska "bone dry" prohibition bill already passed by the Senate was passed today by the House without a roll call, after an unsuccessful fight to prevent its consideration

U. S. SHIP FIRED ON, CAPTAIN WRITES HOME

The William Jones, Crippled by Torpedo, Limps Back to Port —Scared Sailor Drowned.

Pensacola, Fla., Feb. 3—A letter saying the American schooner William Jones had been fired on and damaged by a German submarine some weeks ago in the Bay of Biscay have been received here from Capt. Charles Shrader of the vessel. It did not say whether the Jones tried to escape after being hailed, gave no other details except that she made port at Lisbon in distress and that one sailor, frightened by the attack jumped overboard and was drowned.

EUROPE TAKES NEARLY $4,000,000,000 IN EXPORTS

Washington, Feb. 2.—European countries took 66 per cent of American exports in 1916, as shown in statistics announced today by the department of commerce Products shipped to Europe increased 48 per cent in value over 1915, and reached a total of $3,813,621,000

Exports to South American countries almost doubled, increasing from $144,128,000 in 1915, to $220,288,000. Shipments to Asiatic ports more than doubled, leaping from $149,706,000 to $363,281,000. Much of the Asiatic shipments, however, went through to Russia, whose European ports were congested with freight much of the year. All European neutrals except Norway, took less goods last year than in 1916

Exports to Japan increased from $45,000,000 to $159,000,000 and imports from the same country from $108,000,000 to $182,000,000. There was a heavy increase in imports from Europe and an increase in goods bought from South America from $322,000,000 to $427,000,000.

SHAFFROTH WANTS TREATY TO END ALL DISPUTES

Washington, Feb. 2.—A resolution declaring it to be the sense of the Senate that the president, at the close of the European war, should endeavor to negotiate a treaty with the powers of the world to constitute an international judicial tribunal to settle disputes, was introduced today by Senator Shafroth and referred to the foreign relations committee without debate.

HOUSE TO DISCUSS DOWDELL'S HOUSE BILL

Pierre, S. D., Feb. 2.--The senate will go into a committee of the whole at 4 o'clock this afternoon to discuss, section by section, Senator Dowdell's single house legislature bill The principay opposition is promised by Senator Urdahl and the fireworks is certain. The senate also has on the calendar that discussion of Senator Labrie's I. W. W. bil and an act prohibiting sexual examinations by any but regular physicians, which is a sequel to the Jones investigation charges.

BOARD OF TRADE A TOWN BUILDER

When a town is like a cow's tail—growing downward—it needs a board of trade.

No town that aspires to DO THINGS can afford to be without a good, live board of trade or some similiar organization.

The board of trade is to the town what the aggressive advertisement is to the business man—it puts all of the things prominently before the prospective customer.

A live board never sleeps. It is always alive to the possibility of adding another citizen and another enterprise to the community. And that is what builds your town—the adding, one by one of people and enterprises.

Men who DO THINGS—live wires—do not locate in a town unless there are inducements.

That is the one great work of your board of trade—to CREATE inducements; to bring about conditions that will attract desirable enterprises and desirable citizens

Manufacturers, dealers, business men are constantly on the alert for LIVE towns in which to locate their enterprises.

In the great majority of cases these enterprises are largely dependent on the co-operation and encouragement of the citizenship of the town and surrounding country for support. If that is given, the town adds the proposed enterprise to its list If it is withheld, the enterprise PASSES BY and goes to the town that DOES co-operate and support.

But just getting together and organizing a board of trade and then becoming absorbed in our own affairs is not going to turn the trick.

No board can put a town on the map without the hearty co-operation of the citizenship of the town and countryside.

Not only should every enterprising man be an active member, but each should consider himself personally pledged to uphold the organization in every way.

Just a concrete illustration:

A citizen of the town of S— and one from the town of C— are conversing with a chance traveling acquaintance. The traveler mentions that he is desirous of locating a site for a manufacturing plant. The man from S— passes the remark by as of no concern to him, but the man from C— at once scents a prospective enterprise for his own town. He engages the prospect in conversation, gets his plans and knowledge of his requirements, takes his address, and upon returning home PUTS THE MATTER UP TO HIS HOME BOARD The prospect is communicated with and found to be worthy. Inducements are offered which he accepts, and soon C— numbers one more enterprise.

But S— had the same opportunity, only her representative was asleep

This is not an imaginary case. It is happening every day, and all over the land.

The business good is worth having is worth getting out and hustling for, and without hustling there is little or no business.

Business is not conducted in graveyards—they are places of rest.

The town that is "big enough", whose citizens can see nothing more to be achieved, soon finds itself growing like the cow's tail—DOWN HILL.

The town that doesn't get out and hustle for new enterprises will soon find itself wondering what has become of those it had.

Now just what are we doing to put THIS TOWN on the map? Better still and more pertinent to the question, WHAT ARE YOU DOING?

One man can't do it—two men can't do it. Even the board of trade can't do it if unless backed up and supported by solid community sentiment that spells PROGRESS in box car letters.

Our own actions will tell whether we are citizens of a town or inhabitants of a graveyard.

Safety in the Home
Part of Woman's Daily Duty

Every woman in charge of a household realizes that it is a large part of her duty to keep that household well.

In this task she must know the simple home remedies to be applied at the first symptom of illness.

Coughs and colds are two of the foes she must constantly combat, and digestive disturbances need immediate attention. Thousands of American housekeepers have found the most help to come from ever-ready-to-take

PERUNA

Because Peruna has established itself as the reliable family medicine of America, in the 45 years it has been before the public, the forehanded housekeepers keep it ready for instant ministration in the period of depression that precedes a cold, or when stomach troubles manifest themselves.

Both of these disorders are caused by inflammation of the delicate membranes lining the breathing apparatus and the digestive tract. Peruna clears away the waste, aids the membranes in recovering from inflammatory conditions and tones up the system. Its effectiveness is the reason that so many depend upon it, and its long record of merit maintains it as the dependable home tonic.

Tablet or liquid form—both good.

Our free booklet may help you. At your druggists or write us.

Authority on Mushrooms

Mrs. Flora W. Patterson of Washington, D. C., will never die of eating a toadstool thinking it was a mushroom. Mrs. Patterson is a government scientist whose specialty is a knowledge of fungi. She knows more about mushrooms and toadstools as well as the microscopic fungi which cause plant diseases, than any other person in the government service. Her writings on the subject are the standard works in the scientific libraries. Mrs. Patterson began the study of fungi as a hobby. When her husband died the government offered her a place in which she could use her special knowledge for the public good. Her study of the fungous diseases of plants had an important effect upon A[illegible] agriculture.

"Honestly," he said, his voice tense, "there's nothing to confide."

"Nothing?" she asked, her glance still toward the fire.

"I assure you nothing," he repeated.

She looked up and smiled.

"I almost wish there was," she said. He could not fail to note the tenderness with which she spoke.

She saw that he clenched his hands spasmodically.

"So do I," was all he said.

There followed a pause, she looking into the fire, he standing erect and strung unnaturally taut, beside her.

"Of course," she said softly, "there is, if you care to confide it."

"What, for instance?"

She got the impression that he stood more like a statue than a man while he waited for her reply.

"Well, for instance," she answered, her words a little slow, "the story of how you became interested in the fight—why you took it up. Oh, I know all about your speaking and working in the states before you came here, but I mean why you ever started it."

"I can tell you that in a very few words," he replied with curt emphasis, looking down into her uplifted face. "I have an all absorbing fear of alcohol, so far as I personally am concerned, and I have an ever present knowledge of the ruin it works."

"And that is all?"

She obviously was disappointed.

"Yes."

There came another pause, during which she was painfully aware of the rigidity of his fingers as he stood beside her. It occurred to her that a man faced by a great fear might be like that.

"I hope you won't think me persistent, but——"

"My dear lady," he interjected quickly, "you could never be——"

"——but," she persisted, "I wish with all my heart that it wasn't all."

He flashed from her again. He seemed unconscious that he moved as he went the length of the room and back.

"Why—why do you say that?" he asked.

"I am your friend. You know that?" She put the question slowly.

"The knowledge of it is my great delight," he said, his voice scarcely above a whisper.

"And all my friends," she explained, reluctantly, "know of the friendship between you and me. And they ask me—naturally—who you are."

"And you tell them?"

He leaned down so that he might implore her with his eyes.

She sank back in her chair and let her hands fall to its arms, making the gesture all hopelessness.

"I tell them all I know," she said, a trifle sadly: "that you are a very wonderful man, that you are doing a great work, that you are a westerner, and that you prefer not to discuss your past life. I tell them there may have been something unpleasant in it, something of a painful nature."

He leaned against the mantel and took a deep, slow breath. He did not look at her.

"And isn't that enough?" he urged.

She moved quickly, catching his eye.

"Do you think it is enough?" she asked, her candid, steady eyes commanding an answer.

He broke away from her level look as if she had been holding him by physical contact, and fell again into his stride up and down the room. Twice he returned to her, tried to speak, and kept silent. The third time he stood behind the back of the chair in which she had been sitting. She saw that the tautness, the rigidity, which had been in his figure had gone into his features.

"There is—there was," he began, "a tragedy. Surely I can tell you that."

He paused, discomfited, searching for the words to make his story. She leaned forward, her eyes like stars. It was as if she held out to him a helping hand.

"Let me illustrate, if you will," he continued. "I know you will understand. There was a time when I thought of love, of marriage of the woman. I have a wandering fancy. I have often thought that she was near. At the theater sometimes I have been convinced that in the soft notes of a violin there was the echo of her voice. I fancied that the swaying flowers in the park were intended specially to give me some idea of the exquisite sweetness of her presence. I believe that all the love songs of all the poets had been written merely as predictions of the unfailing sympathy and wonderful understanding I was to find in her soul."

He paused and looked at her, his eyes burning with the fierceness of the conflict within him.

"You thought that once?" she said, her voice, too, little more than a whisper.

"Yes, once," he answered, struggling for all his self control, "but not now. I do not permit myself. And I know I feel, that I need say no more. It is, believe me, impossible for my past to interest you."

His eyes sought to compel her assent. She turned toward the fire and stared at the flames, her lips forming a half smile.

"There is something I have wanted for a long time to tell you," she said at last.

"About myself?"

"About you, and it was some time ago—a long time ago, five years ago."

His two hands grasped the back of the chair convulsively. His arms trembled like heavy wires.

"If there is anything you know," he begged, the rigidity of his features breaking up, "whether it be to my credit or my discredit, I implore you to tell me."

"You actually look frightened," she said, almost.

"No, not that," he managed to answer with difficulty.

He hung over the back of the chair, his arms set out from his sides and trembling noticeably, while she told him.

"A little more than five years ago there was in Cincinnati a house of refuge for poor men—men who were down and out. The only rule governing the house was that no man could stay there for more than four days, the theory being that a limit of stay had to be set in order to avoid having the place occupied always by worthless people. Four days was usually long enough for them to find something to do. It was my money, rather my father's money, which supported that house of refuge. It was called the Mallon Mission for Men, and I gave it my personal supervision."

His whole body shot forward, so that he seemed to be hanging over the chair in danger of falling. His eyes flamed anew, and his lower lip quivered.

"And I was there!" he interrupted her. "Is that what you're going to say?"

"Just a moment, please," she begged gently. His agitation had communicated itself to her. The quickness of her breathing made of her breast a little tumult. "The night before I came to Washington when my father entered the Senate—I was in a great hurry—I went to the mission—something about finances. As I went in, I saw a man in the little front room, the office of the house. He was delirious at the time, but I never heard in all my life such an eloquent description of anguish and woe as he voiced while he raved."

John Smith slowly got himself erect.

"Who was that man?" he asked, his voice metallic. Every vestige of color had gone from his face.

"I don't know," she said, the words heavy with pathos. "I never saw him again."

"Never?"

"Never, until I met you that evening on the club house veranda."

He waited for the end of what she had to say, a luminous wonder in his eyes.

"Ah," she said, pitying him, "you were that man. And I've never mentioned it to—to anybody. I thought you had a right to keep your own secret."

"How marvelous!" he said slowly. "What a marvellous thing that is!"

"But now," she concluded, "it might be different. You might trust me—might trust my discretion."

The way she spoke was a caress.

"I had forgotten that house," he said, still marvelling. "I had forgotten its name and location. Two years later I tried to find it, but to no purpose. And my condition was such when I left there that I had no clear idea about it." He paused and looked at her intently. "It is," he said, "the most wonderful thing I could possibly imagine that you, you were my"

He smiled wryly—"my hostess then."

"And now," she suggested, "since you know I shared all the time that much of your secret, is it quite fair to possess my friendship any longer and still keep me in ignorance about about the rest?"

He turned and looked into the fire, the pallor still upon his face, the whole of him wrung by rigor.

"I want you to understand," she went on, the softness of her voice giving power to the words, "that I don't ask it for myself. It is for other reasons, for your own sake, and for the sake of this great movement which has acknowledged you as its leader. Oh, don't you see? Can't you realize the tremendous injustice that you do yourself and your cause by this foolish attitude of mystery?"

"Yes," he said, avoiding her eyes, "I suppose that—I see the possibility of it—now."

She made no comment, waiting for him to continue.

"I realize the truth of what you say," he admitted, "realize it now far more keenly than you do. But—but I cannot."

"You cannot tell me who you are?"

He started at the grief in her voice. His shoulders sagged. The stiffness, the tautness, melted out of his body.

"I cannot," he said dejectedly.

She shuddered and, after she had been silent a long time, got to her feet.

"Then," she concluded, her voice dead of all expression, "there is something. There must be something which—oh, I cannot believe——"

She stopped and looked into his brilliant eyes. He stood and looked at her, his lips pressed together to a thin line. While she went from him with slow steps toward the door of the music room, he stood leaning with his elbow upon the mantel in an angush of despair. At the door she turned and held out both her hands to him.

"You mean," she said, incredulous still, "you will not tell me what you have done or who you are?"

"I—can not," he said hoarsely.

At that she gave a little cry and turned and left him.

He stood a few moments at the mantel, wondering that the silence of the room hung upon him like a weight. He, in his turn, shuddered.

"She would not believe," he whispered to himself. "Oh, God! She could not believe."

CHAPTER FOUR

When, 10 minutes later, John Smith came out of Senator Mallon's house, he had put on again at least the outward semblance of his ordinary strength and brilliance. The battle he had fought for selfrestraint rehearsed itself in his mind, but his features reflected none of its scars. Alternately and with incredible swiftness, two thoughts battered against his brain. One was that he should have told her everything; the other was his memory of her standing in the doorway holding out her two hands to him, while she swayed on her feet as a reed is moved in the slow current of deep, heavy waters.

"I should have told her," he was saying to himself for the 50th time, when he reached the sidewalk and saw who awaited him.

It was Waller—the imperturbable, drawling Chollie wollie—who stood with his back to the house, slowly swinging his cane, his feet set wide apart, as he watched the afternoon procession of the automobiles of the great and wealthy.

"Everybody in Washington quits work at half past four in the afternoon," Waller remarked, swinging into step with him toward Dupont Circle. "That is everybody who goes to work at all. It's the easiest, laziest city north of Jacksonville."

Smith remembered that walk for many months—his answers to Waller's questions, his memory of the woman swaying in the doorway, the greetings of the men and women who passed him, his overwhelming sense of sorrow that he had refused the confidence Edith had asked, the children playing in the Circle, his calculation of what to say to give the best impetus to his fight—all of it stayed in his mind for a long time, a phantasmagoria of pain.

"Congress will be in session eight more days," Waller was saying. "Let's give them all we've got during that time. First of all, I want to print a story in the morning giving your whole theory about this liquor business."

"How do you mean?" Smith inquired, feeling the necessity of forcing interest in anything but selfthought.

"We've explained it all before, in broken doses," the other suggested. "What I want this time is to sum it up. Tell it to me. You always put something fresh into it."

"Suppose we put it this way," Smith replied, his swift pace taxing the gait of Waller: "prohibition of the traffic, manufacture, and sale of alcoholic liquors in the United States is the first essential. Put whisky out of the reach of everybody. To shut off a state here and there is well enough in its way. It does good, but it does not regard the welfare of the other states. What we must have is national prohibition.

"Now, we cannot expect to take away from the public a vicious form of selfindulgence without giving something better in return. Therefore, the second article of my creed is recreation—good parks for picnics, municipal playgrounds for young and old, cheap but good theaters, public theaters if necessary, band concerts, everything that amuses and entertains. That is, we must have normal, wholesome amusements to drive away the loneliness and grayness of life that keep women on their doorsteps and drive men into the corner saloon. So much drunkenness is directly due to the inability of people to amuse themselves!"

"That is absolutely true," the newspaper man agreed. "About a year ago a wholesale liquor dealer told me—and he was exceedingly profane about it: 'In six or eight years we'll have prohibition everywhere in this country. Already the moving picture shows have cut the profits of the corner saloon 50 per cent. That's our trouble. They're amusing people. Give 'em amusement and they'll quit drinking whisky.' The liquor seller agrees with you."

"It's an undeniable fact," Smith declared. "Now, the third essential is better sanitation, better health laws, better care of the poor, better housing facilities for everybody. Sickness and disease are great travelling men for the whisky trade. It's the sickly, burntout man who tries to find false strength in alcohol. We must have a better general health. There must be fewer starving children, fewer women and men crushed by poverty in the slums. There must be preached a bigger gospel of charity."

"That sums it up just as I wanted it," Waller commented. "It shows so clearly that prohibition is necessarily more than mere prohibition. It is the cornerstone of a brand new charity and citizenship. It brings with it more happiness, more health, and more holiness. It makes possible more delightful conditions than could ever obtain in the presence of alcohol. Isn't that true?"

"Absolutely!" Smith's old flamelike enthusiasm had never been more marked. "A man's body cannot be strong if it has to fight against a cancer. An army is whipped before it goes into battle if it is honeycombed with treachery. Whisky is like that. It is the cancer which wars against the best impulses and thoughts of the body politic. It is the traitor of every army of progress. Any man who drinks will tell you that."

"That delectable personality, that genius infested person, that possessor of the close cropped dome of thought," pursued Waller, drawling his sarcasm, "Albert Mitchell, your particular enemy among the whisky lobbyists, is out in the afternoon papers with a long argument to show that prohibition laws do not prohibit, and that if men can't get whisky to drink, they find its substitute in patent medicines. How about that?"

EXCELLENT RETURNS FROM THE CANADIAN WHEAT CROP

United States Settlers Becoming Rich on Western Canada Lands.

The large number of United States settlers coming to the Western provinces of Canada are easily explained by the case of Mr. C. Lacy, late of Wisconsin and later of Alberta.

Mr. Lacy came to Canada from Wisconsin in the summer of 1914 with $1,500 available cash in his possession. He rented a half-section of partly improved land in Alberta and commenced summer fallowing. He broke 300 acres with oats, 20 with barley, and 260 with wheat. Also he had two cows and 20 head of young live stock. He was fortunate in buying feed at a bargain and managed to rent the adjoining quarter-section as pasture.

A few weeks ago he decided to realize his profits—and they amounted to $6,000 absolutely clear from the crop and the stock.

W. J. Winstead, of Brooks, Alberta, says:

"I landed in Brooks, March 18th, 1916, with one car of household effects, and nine head of good horses, and less than $500 in cash. I have put $1,500 worth of improvements on my farm. I have 31 head of cattle, 16 head of horses, debts all paid, a new automobile, and a good, stiff bank account. At present prices, I can cash in for $16,000. I am well satisfied, and expect to double this next year.

I have threshed altogether 7,000 bushels of No. 1 Northern wheat from two hundred acres, which went from 24 to 56 bushels per acre.

Seven thousand bushels of wheat, all No. 1 Northern, two thousand bushels of oats, 670 bushels of flax, 700 bushels of barley—all at market prices—well, figure this out for yourself at the market price. I sold 3,100 bushels of wheat at $1.74⅞, am holding the remainder for $2.00. Also all the oats, barley and flax for higher prices."

Intelligent farming pays always according to Alex. Wattie, a prosperous farmer. Some figures to prove his contention that he has "made good."

In 1914 Mr Wattie threshed 40 bushels to the acre from a 30-acre crop. This sold for $1.60¾ per bushel, which after deducting seed, labor, twine, threshing and freight, left a clear profit of $50 per acre, or a total of $1,500. From last year's crop of 34 acres, just sold, he received after freight had been deducted, $1,876.94.—Advertisement.

YES! MAGICALLY! CORNS LIFT OUT WITH FINGERS

You say to the drug store man, "Give me a small bottle of freezone." This will cost very little but will positively remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet.

A few drops of this new ether compound applied directly upon a tender, aching corn relieves the soreness instantly, and soon the entire corn or callus, root and all, dries up and can be lifted off with the fingers.

This new way to rid one's feet of corns was introduced by a Cincinnati man, who says that freezone dries in a moment, and simply shrivels up the corn or callus without irritating the surrounding skin.

If your druggist has not any freezone tell him to order a small bottle from his wholesale drug house for you.—adv.

PEACE MAY BRING NEW WORRIES FOR HOLLAND

The Hague, Netherlands (by mail)—Holland with her important transit trade will suffer considerably from an eventual economic struggle between the present groups of belligerents, in the opinion of H. Colyn, former minister of war. He points out that an important part of Germany's commercial traffic passes through Holland and that this traffic will not only be restricted if the two European groups exclude one another by high tariff walls, but that it must in any case suffer from the fact that a great part of the former German markets especially in North and South America and in East Asia, has passed into other hands out of which such lost markets will not be immediately recovered.

The political and economical policy of Holland after the war will be directed towards the maintenance of a position of independence, he declared, for "if the present groups of powers come into permanent opposition then a state of complete independence will be the sole guarantee for the inviolate maintenance of Dutch sovereignty in Europe and in Holland's colonies. The interests of the state in Europe might perhaps point to a closer association with the central powers, but the interests of our colonial possessions in Asia, with their 50,000,000 inhabitants, point positively in another direction. It is therefore undoubtedly best for Holland to remain herself, and look neither to the right hand nor to the left. Whether a logical pursuit of this policy will always be possible is another question."

Incidentally Mr. Colyn expressed the view that Japan will profit most from the war, she will not now be ousted from the markets in the far east that have been captured by her. Of the European powers, Russia will probably make the most rapid recovery, so the ex-war minister thinks.

Bahaman Shells and Coral.

Richard Le Gallienne in Harper's.

We picked up many beautiful and curious shells, especially some fine conchs. There were two kinds of conchs, the king conch, and the queen conch. They are large, beautifully modeled shells, inhabited by a snail like animal, very like our "winkle," and, like it, used largely for bait, and making, too, an excellent salad. The queen conch is pure white with a yellow tip and a dark brown interior, but the king conch is the handsome creature, with its light cream ground variegated with brown, red and black in lovely decorative patterns, as by the hand of some self conscious Japanese artist. In these conchs, buried in the flesh of them, is found a pink pearl—of some, if no great value—for which the natives, as they cut up their bait, are constantly on the watch, as half a dozen of them would seem like a small fortune to them. Presently, as we poked along the wet sand or pranced over the ledges of sharp rock, Peter called out, excitedly, "Would you like to see some living coral?"

Think of the poetry that lay in the suggestion—and, of course, remember that there is coral and coral, some very lovely and fairylike indeed. But this I was called to inspect was of the very humble kind of which the islands are mostly built—and, alas! it was neither lovely nor fairylike. It lay in sprodges of three or four inches long, on the top of similar stuff already dead and hard and black—a puttylike substance, dented with large, open pores. When you tried to tear it off the rock to which it clung, you realized that it was living, for it resisted, like a piece of wet leather stuck fast to a stone, and you got it off with difficulty. I have a piece I thus tore off by me as I write. Now it is simply a piece of hard stone, with longish, sporelike holes in it.

Nations Will Cooperate.

Moscow, Russia—A union of the co-operating agencies of Russia and England is likely to be one of the results of the entente alliance. Conferences have already taken place between representatives of those agencies, which have 3,000,000 members in England and 12,000,000 in Russia. A program is being outlined for a co-operative exchange of goods and for the organization of joint storage, transport and insurance facilities.

The Moscow Narodny bank and the Union of Siberia Creamery associations, the two largest Russian organizations, have entered into the movement. The effect of such a co-operative exchange will be a perceptible lowering of prices for many articles in both countries, it is said.

RECORD TOBACCO CROP BRINGS BIG REVENUE

Prices, Better In Late Years, Now Bring Farmers Big Returns.

Louisville, Ky.—Kentucky farmers, who raise approximately one-third of the tobacco produced in the United States, and about one-tenth of the crop produced in the world, are enjoying the unusual position of marketing for record breaking prices a crop of almost record breaking size.

In addition to being one of the largest crops ever produced in this state, Kentucky's output this year is of unusual quality. Leaf, lugs and trash, as they are called in the terminology of the tobacco trade, are of the finest character. The leaf tobacco is long, clear leaf, which comes from the middle of the plant; lugs are the heavy leaves, possibly spotted by the soil which has been splashed on them by rain, which grew at the bottom; while trash is made up of small, immature leaf at the top of the plant.

So good has the quality been that farmers are becoming accustomed to receiving proportionately higher prices for the poorer grades than they do for the best. These poorer grades are essential to the production of certain brands of manufactured tobacco and the bidding for them has been keen. Even frosted tobacco, which in former years sold for 1 or 2 cents a pound, and was used only for the making of an extract shipped abroad to be used in fortifying certain sorts of foreign tobaccos, are bringing prices farmers would have been glad to obtain for trash of the first grade last year.

Within recent years Kentucky farmers have received an average price for all qualities of white burley, the backbone of the tobacco crop in this state, of about $10 per 100 pounds. Sales on the various markets this year have been at an average price of $16 to $16.50 per 100 pounds. The crop of white burley this year will run well over 200,000,000 pounds.

Tobacco produced in the "Black Patch" or the dark tobacco region of western and southern Kentucky, has experienced an advance in price even more remarkable than that scored by the burley of the "Blue Grass" section. "Pryor leaf," for which the farmer within recent years was glad to get an average price of 5 to 6 cents a pound, is now selling at approximately 12 cents a pound.

Within the last few days one farmer sold his crop on the Owensboro market at an aerage price of 30 cents a pound, breaking all previous records it is said, for prices paid for this character of tobacco.

As a result of these conditions millions of pounds of tobacco are being rushed to market by the farmers of the state each week, and it is estimated by tobacco men that farmers have now released a greater portion of their crop than has been out of their hands at this season for many years.

Much of this tobacco is sold on the floors of small "loose leaf" warehouses in the smaller towns, where the weed is sorted as to quality and displayed in open baskets for the inspection of buyers.

About 200,000,000 pounds of tobacco are sold each year on the Louisville "breaks" in hogsheads. This tobacco is sold on the basis of a sample drawn indiscriminately from the interior of the hogshead. Much of the tobacco bought on the "loose leaf" floors is packed in hogsheads and resold on the "breaks." In addition a large quantity of Kentucky tobacco goes to the market at Cincinnati.

Mary's Toys.

Once upon a time Mary took her new Teddy Bear, her Jack Monkey and her white fuzzy rabbit to bed with her. They had all been given to her for Christmas and she was not sure, even now, which one she loved best so every night she took them all up to bed with her and cuddled them in turn until she fell asleep.

One night after Mary had gone fast asleep she was suddenly awakened, and sat straight up in bed and looked around. Who was calling her name so loud? Why it was Jack Monkey, as sure as you were born and what was he saying?

"Mary", said Jack Monkey, "you are lying right on top of me and I can't move." Mary looked and sure enough she was lying on her pet. She moved a little and, as she did so, Peter, the rabbit, jumped up and ran over and sat on her chest while Teddy Bear took hold of her hands and began to pull her out of bed.

"Come play with us, we will show you how we play when you are asleep," they shouted. As she looked she saw her dolls walking about setting the table just as she did and pushing her doll carriage about the room while some of the others began to dance and run about with other toys.

It was all so new and strange to Mary that she crept into a corner and watched them as they moved about. No one payed any attention to her but they all seemed to be having a very nice time talking and playing together.

For a long time Mary watched them until she was so sleepy she could hardly keep her eyes open and she thought she would creep back to her bed and go to sleep while they finished their play. So, very quietly she slipped out of the corner and began to walk toward her bed, for she didn't want to disturb them and besides she was just a little bit afraid of Jack Monkey now for he looked full of mischief.

Just as she reached the bed and was going to jump in and pull the clothes up tight over her head Jack Monkey saw her and cried out, "Mary is going to bed, let's pull her out and make her play with us. It is too early to go to bed," and he ran to Mary, took hold of her hand and began to pull and pull.

Out poor little Mary came with a big bump and landed right on top of Jack Monkey, and, as she opened her eyes, there stood her mother.

"Why Mary, dear, you fell out of bed. I heard you and came in as soon as I could. I guess after this you had better not take so many toys to bed with you, then you won't fall out."

"I think, mother," said Mary, "I won't take Jack Monkey to bed with me for he is full of tricks and keeps me awake." So Jack Monkey never was taken to bed with Mary after that.

Farmers Buy a Laundry.

From the Salt Lake Herald-Republican.

Thirty-two Weber county farmers have organized a cooperative creamery and laundry company and articles of incorporation of the association, to be known as the Farmers' Cooperative creamery, have been filed in the county clerk's office.

The company has headquarters in Plain City. It is capitalized at $5,000, with 1,000 shares at $5 each. The articles set forth that the company will manufacture all creamery products and in addition will maintain a laundry.

In Sweden articles sold as gold must contain not less than 75 per cent of the pure metal and those sold as silver at least 82 per cent of pure silver.

100 Years Old

"The kidneys play a most important part in causing premature old age and death—the more injurious the poisons passing thru the kidneys the sooner comes decay"—so says a distinguished physician, who further advises all people who are past thirty to preserve the vitality of the kidneys and free the blood from poisonous elements, such as uric acid—drink plenty of water—sweat some daily and take Anuric before meals.

This Anuric is put up in tablet form, and can be obtained at almost any drug store. For that backache, lumbago, rheumatism, "rusty" joints, swollen feet or hands, due to uric acid in the blood, Anuric quickly dissolves the uric acid as hot water does sugar. Discovered by Dr. Pierce of Buffalo, N. Y.

Prevent premature old age by simply sipping a cup of hot water every morning before breakfast, taking a little Anuric before meals and live to be a hundred.

THE REFLECTIONS OF A MARRIED WOMAN—are not pleasant if she is delicate, run-down or over worked. She feels "played out." Her smile and her good spirits have taken flight. It worries her husband as well as herself.

This is the time to build up her strength and cure those weaknesses or ailments which are the seat of her trouble. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription regulates and promotes all the proper functions of womanhood, purifies the blood, dispels aches and pains, melancholy and nervousness, brings refreshing sleep, and restores health and strength. It cures those disorders and derangements incident to womanhood.

A well-known agent which can be procured at all drug stores is "Pleasant Pellets," made up of the May-apple, the dried juice of the leaves of aloes and the root of jalap. First put out by Dr. Pierce nearly fifty years ago. —Adv.

New York's Bridges.

Irrespective of the elevated railroad system comprising the Second, Third, Sixth and Ninth avenue lines, and the elevated portions of the Broadway and Lenox avenue sections of the subway, New York city has 42 bridges spanning the East and Harlem rivers, Newtown creek, and other waterways. These roads over rivers, including the Brooklyn Manhattan Delancey street and Queensboro spans, among the greatest in the world, represent with the real estate requisite for their approaches an investment by the municipality of more than $135,000,000.

MOTHER! LOOK AT CHILD'S TONGUE

If cross, feverish, constipated, give "California Syrup of Figs."

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated or your child's breath is feverish, breath hard, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other childish ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Adv.

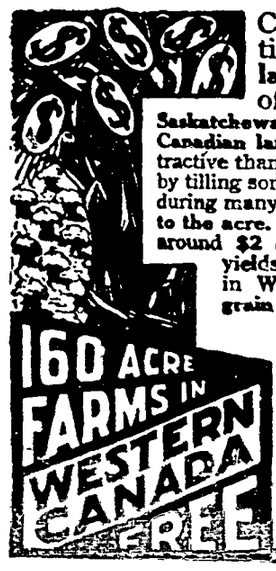
Raise High Priced Wheat on Fertile Canadian Soil



Canada extends to you a hearty invitation to settle on her FREE Homestead lands of 160 acres each or secure some of the low priced lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. This year wheat is higher but Canadian land just as cheap, so the opportunity is more attractive than ever. Canada wants you to help feed the world by tilling some of her fertile soil—land similar to that which during many years has averaged 20 to 45 bushels of wheat to the acre. Think of the money you can make with wheat around $2 a bushel and land so easy to get. Wonderful yields also of Oats, Barley and Flax. Mixed farming in Western Canada is as profitable an industry as grain growing.

The Government this year is asking farmers to put increased acreage into grain. Military service is not compulsory in Canada but there is a great demand for farm labor to replace the many young men who have volunteered for service. The climate is healthful and agreeable, railway facilities excellent, good schools and churches convenient. Write for literature as to reduced railway rates to Supt. of Immigration, Ottawa, Can., or to Klemme is experiencing a coal shortage which was caused mostly by the slow handling of freight by the railroad company. Two car of coal received the first of last week was sold out in about two days and some of the natives were forced to drive to Garner for coal. Another car of coal was received Wednesday but is about all gone at this writing. Local dealers have plenty of coal in transit that may arrive any time.

A large number of self-invited friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Haupt, Monday evening in honor of her 56th birthday which was Sunday but on account of the blizzard the party was postponed until Monday evening. It is needless to say that the evening was very pleasantly spent and before departing a fine luncheon was served. the goodies being brought by the several guests. Mrs, Haupt was the recipient of many little gifts which in conjunction with the pleasant evening will serve as a reminder of the joyous occasion. We join with her many friends in wishing her many more happy birthdays.

Possibilities of Our Soil

We want to say to the farmers of this community that no feature of present day education is more potent for good to this country than that now being accomplished by the various agricultural schools and experimental stations and farms.

Twenty years ago the "book farmer" was looked upon as a visionary by a large per cent of our farming population, and is even yet so regarded by some, though happily their number is small.

Now the man who intelligently studies his soil with a view to determining its needs is coming to the front as an authority on matters agricultural. And the reason this is so is because his theories have brought forth fruit in fact.

Nothing is more certain than that this country is woefully behind in farming efficiency. For years our farming experts have been pointing out to us the fact that our lands are not producing a half, not even a third of the crops that bountiful nature intended they should yield. One has only to cite the case of Germany to see the full force of this statement. Germany is not as large as the state of Texas, yet Germany today is supplying her civil population and her vast armies almost entirely from the products of her own soil

But Germany and other old countries have for years practiced intensive farming, a system that is only just beginning to prevail in this country.

Instead of being merely an experiment, intensive farming should be the rule. Nothing more fully demonstrates the truth of this statement than a glance at the results obtained by the many corn clubs of the country From all directions come reports from these organizations, where the enormous yield of 200 bushels and more per acre has been attained. Not only this, but the reports coming from all sections are proof that almost any of our soil is susceptible to just such improvement.

Then there is another important feature to these big corn yields. It has been shown that they can be produced at a substantial profit over and above the cost of preparing the land for their production. Careful records have been kept of all expenditures, and in almost every instance the proceeds have much more than paid the cost of bringing the soil to its present state of fertility.

If these results can be obtained from an acre, or two or three, why not from ten, or fifty or a hundred acres? If they can be obtained from a patch, why not from a field? Why not from all fields?

The deplorable truth is that too many of our farmers are "necessity" farmers. They ask themselves, "how much do I need?" and then proceed to satisfy that need, and no more. They should rather ask, "how much can I get?" and then get all they can.

It has been estimated that America could feed the world if all her soil were made to produce to its full capacity.

What the capacity is, we are only just beginning to discover.

Late Trains in Winter

Every time we have a spell of cold weather in this country the railroad system seems to go to pieces. All travelers know the fact and most of them speak violently about it. In any cold snap no train that runs 300 miles north of the Ohio river will arrive on time. When the mercury begins to drop the trains begin to run late and the lower it drops the later they run. There seems to be some mathematical rule about it. Every degree of lower temparature takes off so much of train efficiency. A train that will be an hour late on a temperature of twelve above will be two hours late on a temperature of six, three hours late at zero and a day late at twenty-four below.

Railroad men say there are two causes. In cold weather the locomotives will not make enough steam to haul the trains and heat them too, and in cold weather switches at stations and junction points must be thawed out before a train can go ahead. No doubt this explains why trains are late. But it does not explain why railroad management allows them to be late. Other countries much colder than ours do not have these troubles. Norway, Switzerland, the South Island of New Zealand operate railroads in worse weather than we usually have and do it without our abominable nuisance of late trains. The people in this country have in the last few years been called upon to pay greatly increased prices for their transportation, but nobody has suggested they have received anything in return. They might at least be allowed to reach their journey's end on something like the time promised to them in the time tables.

"Keep Smiling"

The smile is a wide crack in the human countenance running east and west. It is one of the finest decorations which can be put on the face. It far exceeds in beauty and charm the string mustache and the bright red splashes imparted by the rouge pot.

The smile is caused by two things—the mind and the stomach. When a man's mind is all littered up with worry and his best customers order goods by telephone rather than face a long, threatening book account, the smile backs into some dark retreat and curls up in a corner. But when the crop comes in and the dulcet chimes of the cash register fall on the cocked ear of the proprietor, exposing the remnants of a once proud set of teeth. This teaches us that the way to wear a perpetual, non-shrinking smile is to think sweet thoughts and refuse absolutely to look a sight draft in the face.

The state of the stomach also influences the smile capacity of most people. When the stomach is restless and distraught, and acts like it would rather be engaged in some other line of work, it will not be able to produce one good, radiant smile per week. One of the greatest heroes we have is the man burdened with all of the known forms of sleep-walking dyspepsia, and who is yet able to summon a sixteen-candle-power smile whenever the same will help close a deal. We are reminded by this that the partiality shown in distributing Carnegie medals to lifesavers and ignoring the sunny-tempered dyspeptic, is a greater dissapointment than some of our presidential elections.

When the smile reaches the acute stage of development it is called a grin. The grin when is hooked on so it can not fall off the first time any little thing goes wrong lets more sunshine into the house than a plate-glass window If more young women in picking out a bridegroom, would look to see whether the candidate wears a natural grin or a forced incubator smile, they would go through life without knowing what the breakfast table grouch looks like.

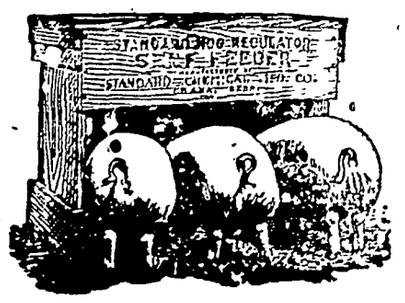
You are Proud of Your Stock



and you have reason to be. We are proud of Standard Hog Regulator, which we sell for your hogs---

It is the oldest hog preparation on the market today.

It was first used by the manufacturers on the farm where the original seven ingredients were first recommended by Dr. Salmon of the department of Agriculture. It has the names of the ingredients on every package, the first one to ever be so labeled.

It contains all the ingredients of the Government Formula and five others besides.

It is sold by more than 10,000 dealers and used by more than 500,000 farmers in the United States.

It improves thrift, regulates the bowels, expels worms, when used according to directions for worms, and it assists in preventing disease

Come in and get 200 pounds and a feeder and you will be proud of the hogs it will help you to mature.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. The Little Things of Life

Reader, if you were asked to name the most popular man in town, whom would you designate?

Perhaps you think, on the spur of the moment, you would indicate some favorite minister, or perhaps some old family doctor, or any one of a dozen or more notable personages in the community.

But on second thought you are not so sure, and after mature reflection you are ready to discard them all.

Then you begin to cast about among the less notable ones. Now you are "getting warm" as the children say.

Now you have located him, and you are surprised, because he is never associated in your mind with the great, or even the near great, nevertheless, as you study him, his popularity and the reasons therefor are brought forcibly to your attention.

In the first place you study him as he comes down town in the morning. His progress is slow, as he seems to be stopped by each person he meets, and he has a warm handshake and a cheerful "good morning" for all. You follow him to his place of business and see him radiating the same sunshine and cheerful greeting, and you find he is known to every employe on the place as "uncle."

Watch him, if he is a merchant, as the store begins to fill with customers. Each receives the same cordial welcome To the ladies he is especially courteous, and you are surprised to see that courtesy unshaken even when confronted by one whom you by no stretch of the imagination could term a lady. He sees your surprise and—"for the sake of the sex," he smiles.

Now watch him as he starts for home toward night fall. School is out and the children are on the streets Here he must stop to shoot a marble with a crowd of urchins, and they hail his coming with shouts of glee. Another must persuade him to have a try at his top. On account of his avoirdupois he has to draw the line at the hoop which another offers him, but he starts it off for the youngesters to pursue.

A little farther on he is accosted by a bevy of small girls, who are in their element as they swarm around him clamoring for a story, teasing him to jump rope or even rifling his pockets for suspected sweets.

You see him as he reaches his home, when the good wife meets him at the gate. She has a sad tale for his ear Sorrow has entered a neighbor's home, At once he is all sympathy, and without waiting to enter his own door he passes on to the house of sorrow. Perhaps he can offer nought but sympathy, but this comes so plainly from the heart and is accompanied by such a warm clasp of the hand, that it carries its blessed message of comfort and sympathy.

Now you are beginning to appreciate the true reason for his popularity. He is a man of innumerable small deeds of kindness, but those deeds are such as touch the heartstrings of the people about him He, himself, has never aspired to great things being content to occupy himself with the small affairs of life, knowing full well, wise man that he is, that of such is human life composed. He would smile with incredulity were you to hint to him of his great popularity, because he is essentially one of the humble ones of earth.

And his great popularity—whence comes it?

In his his heart he has caught and held the echoe of a voice from the far off past—"and the second is like unto this: thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

he town exchange, "The Heart of the System," the country lines have

Our intentions were to remodel and rebuild the country lines just as soon as we finished rebuilding the town exchange, but just at that time the Great War in Europe started The prices on all electrical supplies commenced to soar, they kept on soaring and are still soaring. For instance, Batteries cost 100 per cent more than two years ago; Copper raised from 15 cents to 39 cents at present; Platinum has raised 400 per cent; Galvanized Iron Telephone Wire has just doubled. These are only a few of the supplies used, but all the other electrical supplies have gone up in proportion. We find that during the last two years our whole income has been used up to pay running expenses and to keep the system in repair as it stands today. There was nothing left with which to rebuild and improve. We never had set aside a depreciation fund. Under these conditions a system cannot be kept in shape, saying nothing about being improved. This condition must be changed, and the only way to change it is to make the business pay for its upkeep and necessary improvements.

Many of our subscribers have asked us to give, "Every Day Service", which is one of the improvements we have been wanting to add. We know that this improvement alone will be worth much to you, but this one improvement will make us add one more operator upon our pay roll One more operator would improve the service in general, but under the present conditions, this one more operator is impossible.

On account of the our territory we have been compelled to put in some condition which did not exist before. We explained to we could not furnish such service. An epidemic of scarlet fever caused the schools of Melcher to close last week

The State organization of the Iowa Red Cross is trying to raise seventeen hundred members from Webster county

Gilbert will have a consolidated school comprising twenty-six sections The matter was decided at a special election held recently.

Webster City will vote on a $150,000 bond issue for a new high school at the school election, March 12. A $35,000 high school was built five years ago.

The veterinarians will continue to hold control of the Iowa Animal Health commission, as the bill to give the control to the stockmen of the state has been killed by the house.

There will be instruction with the aid of motion pictures at the dentistry clinic and meeting of the alumni association of the college of dentistry of the state university, held on March 7 and 8

The war college division of the army staff at Washington has named Des Moines as the division mobilization point for territory embracing all of Iowa and five congressional districts in Illinois.

The senate has passed a bill whereby factories of Iowa located along rivers will be [illegible] from the main stream.

Iowa has far more rural organizations than any other state in the union" said Mrs. Francis E. Whitely of Webster president of the Iowa Federation of Women's clubs in her talk to the Women's conference at Ames.

A Minneapolis condensed milk concern wished to establish a plant at Independence, but found there were not enough cows in the neighborhood to keep it going. The concern wanted a guarantee of a supply of 50,000 to 100,000 pounds of milk a day.

Cornell college at Mount Vernon, will use the $100,000 which was granted by the Rockefeller board of education as a start on the million dollar endowment campaign which was launched by the Upper Iowa conference at the session in Waterloo in October

The seniors and juniors of the Independence high school are taking military drill Each division drills twice a week under the direction of H L. Byington. The boys will have their uniforms in about two months when they will be given rifles bought for them last September

Frauds amounting to millions of dollars annually in land deals would be checked by a law which will be proposed in the general assembly by Senator B. J. Gibson of Corning. Iowa has not statute now providing for criminal prosecution of persons who defraud others in the sale of lands.

Local associations holding a poultry show may receive $100 in state aid, or if there should be more than one such association in a county the state aid would be divided, if a bill introduced in the senate of the Iowa legislature by Senator White of Benton county becomes a law. The bill is now in the hands of the senate committee on agriculture.

The officers of the First Iowa are expecting a mobilization call. This regiment was recently mustered out of the federal service. The break with Germany and orders received by National Guard organizations to remain on the boarder cause the officers and men to believe that a summons to the colors is but a few days distant. The First is the largest unit in the Iowa brigade.

Along with the announcement that the Iowa cavalry and the Iowa field hospital corps will leave the border soon for home it was stated at Fort Des Moines that the Third Iowa will be mustered out before the other state troops arrive. If the cavalry and hospital corps start on the date set for their departure from Texas, they will reach Des Moines by the 1st of the month. With the return of the cavalry and the hospital corps but one Iowa regiment will be in federal service on the border, the Second Iowa.

One of General Pershing's soldiers, Clarence Stanley, died while in service The arrival of the body from Deming, N. M., ended a search of twenty-eight years' duration which his family had conducted since he left home when 20 years old. He was the son of Squire and Mrs. W. H. Stanley of Unionville, among the best known residents of Appanoose county. He had graduated from the Unionville schools and was looked upon as a young man of promise. Then he disappeared. No reason was given.

For one month the Steele-Scott contest for congressman from the Eleventh Iowa district, has been having a hearing before Special Commissioner C. C. Hamilton. Tom J. Steele, Democrat, has overturned the 131 lead accredited on first official returns to George C. Scott, Republican. Steele now leads by 76 votes in the entire district, with one or two more counties to be recounted. His principal gain was made in the second Sioux City precinct where evidence of fraud may lead to charges being filed later.

FREE TEXT BOOK BILL COMES OUT

Law Is Amended, Requiring 10 Per Cent of Free Holders to Sign Petition.

Des Moines Ia Feb 10 Free text books may be adopted by any school district in the state by calling a special election upon a petition signed by 10 per cent of the resident freeholders and carrying the proposition at the election, under terms of the McFarlane bill, H F 48, reported out for passage by the house schools committee

The amendment requiring a petition of 10 per cent of the registered freeholders was tacked to the bill in committee McFarlane's original bill permitting a special election upon petition of 50 voters

Representative Tucker of Clinton bitterly opposed the provision to require freeholders as signers of the petition

It is undemocratic he told the committee I do not believe that we should make dollars the test of a man's fitness for the franchise It is drawing another line There were five dissenting votes in the committee on this feature of the bill and an effort will be made to amend it in the house

The present law permits school districts to adopt free text books on a special election called by a petition signed by 3 1-3 per cent of the voters

Increase Tuition

The committee also reported out favorably Grason's bill increasing the amount which townships may pay for tuition of pupils from their district in high schools of other districts.

At present if a student from one school district attends a high school in another district the township may pay not more than $30 monthly as tuition It is declared that this sum is insufficient to meet the cost

The Grason bill as amended permits the payment of $4 per month for high schools in cities smaller than those of the first and $6 in cities of the first class

Sale of Capitol Grounds

Sale of all portions of the capitol grounds west of Ninth street and east of Twelfth street was reported favorably to the house by the committee on public lands

Frank Lake chairman of the committee called up the statement of the committee favorably upon the matter submitted before the house

The two absent members of the committee who with the Lake majority favored the bill are Weaver and Rowley Weaver explained that he did not vote favoring the bill out

Peter McGovern who was chairman of the committee when the bill was first introduced but who voted against reporting it out favorably stated that the reason he opposed the bill was because he did not want to be responsible for capitol steps on which he reflected Lake and Mowry were the other members of the subcommittee

The bill is expected to bring out a fight in the house with a close vote Its passage is claimed by Rowley who opponents believe it is sure to defeat

A majority of the senate is now behind the bill

Fraudulent Check Bill

Senator C F Kimball's fraudulent check bill which aroused bitter opposition on the floor of the senate of which it was first introduced was passed in an amended form by the senate by a vote of 42 to 6 As amended it provides that any person who with intent to defraud shall draw a check or order for the payment of money which he does not have sufficient funds or credit to meet same shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction shall be punishable by a fine not to exceed $100, or imprisonment in the county jail not to exceed 30 days. Senator Chase of Harrison county, Brown of Lee county and Greene of Clinton were the only ones voting against the bill

If the drawer of the check is able to pay it on demand he will not be subject to the provisions of the law

PREFERENTIAL PRESIDENTIAL PRIMARY LAW PASSED

Des Moines Ia Feb 10 -The senate today passed the Klinker bill repealing the preferential presidential primary law by vote of 42 to 6 The measure had passed the house and now goes to the governor

Bills were introduced by banking committees in both senate and house providing bank supervision from the state auditor and establishing a special bank department

Senator Chase introduced a measure in the senate to give municipalities the right to establish heating plants on coal and fuel yards and sell fuel at cost and to own coal land and mine coal

Kimball introduced a bill to amend the municipal court law so that one judge may be named for every 20,000 people instead of 50 000

Representative Griffin offered a bill providing that 25 per cent of the voters in a school district of more than 60 000 must petition for submission of this proposition to popular vote.

The house passed the Rayburn bill increasing the pay of jurors from $2 50 to $3 per day

The house killed the Tucker bill which provided that when a prisoner changes a plea of guilty to not guilty, the former may be used against him as evidence

Wormley of Plymouth made an impassioned attack on the measure, declaring that a man is innocent until proved guilty "In the words of the Redeemer it is better that 99 guilty men should escape than that one innocent man be convicted" He said.

BRITAIN ASKS MORE LOANS.

London, Feb. 9 --The parliamentary papers today announced that the government will ask a supplemental vote of credit for 200,000,000 pounds for war to March 31, and also to a vote of credit of $350,000,000 as a first installment of the amount required for the year ending in March of 1918.

The government will introduce a bill in the house of commons on Monday for suspension of grand juries during the remainder of the war

HITCH IN "BONE DRY" LEGISLATION

Two of Whitmore's Measures Are Shelved—Too Strict Committee Asserts.

Des Moines, Ia., Feb. 9—Iowa will not be "bone dry" until the constitutional prohibition amendment is passed or until another legislature gets a chance at making liquor laws. The 37th general assembly will not put up the booze tight barriers that were considered in Whitmore bills that the senate failed to act upon yesterday

Senator Whitmore's three bills which had been made a special order for yesterday morning were shelved temporarily by postponing action on two of them until February 20 and recommitting the other to the committee on the suppression of intemperance

Bill Back to Committee.

The bill that goes back to the committee will suffer the extraction of several of its sharpest teeth and will come back to the floor of the senate in such condition that its friends will hardly recognize it according to the statements of several senators made yesterday after the morning session

The committee of which Senator Whitmore is chairman still has one of his bills which proposes to permit the possession of two quarts of whisky or one case of beer though the passage of the other three bills would have rendered it unnecessary by shutting off every means by which the liquor could come into the state

That bill will now be combined with the one sent back to the committee and from the two will be made a bill similar to the Washington laws by which intoxicating liquors may be imported when accompanied by a certificate of permission issued by some state officer, probably the auditor of state

To Permit Personal Shipments

"The quantity which may be shipped in with such permission will be limited to a certain amount of each shipment and persons will be allowed to receive only a limited amount within specified periods said Senator Whitmore in commenting upon what changes he would recommend in the bill.

Senator Kimball at whose motion the bill was recommitted to the Whitmore committee declared that he did not wish to be represented as opposing the bills but believed the drastic as presented to the senate

Parliamentary procedure became so entangled that Senator Whitmore was entirely cut off from an opportunity to speak for immediate consideration of his bills

Senator Wilson of the anti-prohibition contingent moved the postponement of consideration of the three bills for two days Their status question

Senator White demanded the usual 10 minutes heating on the motion

It was ruled that his remarks must follow the first balloting After the first ballot Senator Kimball rose to the point of order that only Senator Wilson, as the member in charge of the motion, had the privilege of the 10 minutes and Sen tor Whitmore lost his chance to be heard

KOE ELEPHONE COMPANY

. KOERNER, MANAGER

Klemme, Iowa, February 1917

Koerner Tele nge:

one Co has d its thirteenth year in the telephone business And during all ith you ers are been most agreeable. We have always tried to give you We h s tried to improve the service and our aims always will be, to give

Town and remodeled till we now have one of the best town exchanges in rn Iowa. erground cable with duplex wire as drops to every 'phone. On account e big expenditures in the town exchange, "The Heart of the System," the country lines have cessarily been somewhat neglected By this we mean that the income from the system has not been large enough to allow the rebuilding of the whole system during this time.

Our intentions were to remodel and rebuild the country lines just as soon as we finished rebuilding the town exchange, but just at that time the Great War in Europe started. The prices on all electrical supplies commenced to soar, they kept on soaring and are still soaring. For instance, Batteries cost 100 per cent more than two years ago; Copper raised from 15 cents to 39 cents at present; Platinum has raised 400 per cent; Galvanized Iron Telephone Wire has just doubled. These are only a few of the supplies used, but all the other electrical supplies have gone up in proportion. We find that during the last two years our whole income has been used up to pay running expenses and to keep the system in repair as it stands today. There was nothing left with which to rebuild and improve. We never had set aside a depreciation fund. Under these conditions a system cannot be kept in shape, saying nothing about being improved. This condition must be changed, and the only way to change it is to make the business pay for its upkeep and necessary improvements.

Many of our subscribers have asked us to give, "Every Day Service", which is one of the improvements we have been wanting to add. We know that this improvement alone will be worth much to you, but this one improvement will make us add one more operator upon our pay roll One more operator would improve the service in general, but under the present conditions, this one more operator is impossible.

On account of the High Tension Lines running into our territory we have been compelled to put in some high priced machinery to balance our lines. This is a condition which did not exist before. We explained to our patrons who asked for the above improvements, why we could not furnish such service. Their advice to us was t give service every day in the year and to improve the service where possible, to set our price for this service so we can afford to furnish it. We hesitated but we investigated and we find that over three-fourths of the telephone companies of Iowa have already done what we are compelled to do now—that is get more money for the service We will not call it a raise in price, we will simply give more and better service, for more money. We will give service on hol days and Sundays same as any other day, except one hour at noon, which will be reserved for the operator to eat dinner, as there will be but one operator in the office on Sundays. As soon as the weather will permit in spring we expect to start rebuilding the rural lines, put them in such shape that they will allow the best of service.

A ruling of the Telephone Commission, makes it necessary for us to carry a depreciation fund. This is impossible with our present rate of $1.00 per month We have figured the costs of the service we wish to give, we have had expert engineers figure it for us. We did not accept the engineers figures as we deemed them higher than necessary. We have accepted the following rates which will take effect March 1, 1917. All telephone accounts now on our books, will be collected at the old rate to March 1, 1917 On March 1, 1917 all accounts will be started anew in our books using the new rates. This Company reserves the right to collect any telephone rentals in advance, if it chooses to do so.

Business Telephone, in town, ... $1.50 per month	Residence Telephone, in town,....$1.25 per month
Rural Telephone, party line ... $1.25 per month	Extension Telephone,..... 50 per month
Extension Bells, ...	25c per month

You will find the above prices reasonable, and to compare favorable with the prices of other progressive telephone systems of our state We hope the change we have made will please you, and that the added service and improved service will more than pay for the difference in price.

We wish to thank you for past favors, and with your co-operation we will endeavor to furnish the best of service.

Yours truly,

KOERNER TELEPHONE COMPANY.

An epidemic of scarlet fever caused the schools of Melcher to close last week

The State organization of the Iowa Red Cross is trying to raise seventeen hundred members from Webster county

Gilbert will have a consolidated school comprising twenty six sections The matter was decided at a special election held recently.

Webster City will vote on a $150,000 bond issue for a new high school at the school election, March 12. A $35,000 high school was built five years ago.

The veterinarians will continue to hold control of the Iowa Animal Health commission, as the bill to give the control to the stockmen of the state has been killed by the house.

There will be instruction with the aid of motion pictures at the dentistry clinic and meeting of the alumni association of the college of dentistry of the state university, held on March 7 and 8.

The war college division of the army staff at Washington has named Des Moines as the division mobilization point for territory embracing all of Iowa and five congressional districts in Illinois.

The senate has passed a bill whereby factories of Iowa located along rivers will be permitted to used the water for factory purposes if it is not polluted and is not diverted from the main stream.

"Iowa has far more rural organizations than any other state in the union," said Mrs. Francis E. Whitely of Webster, president of the Iowa Federation of Women's clubs in her talk to the Women's conference at Ames.

A Minneapolis condensed milk concern wished to establish a plant at Independence, but found there were not enough cows in the neighborhood to keep it going. The concern wanted a guarantee of a supply of 50,000 to 100,000 pounds of milk a day.

Cornell college at Mount Vernon, will use the $100,000 which was granted by the Rockefeller board of education as a start on the million dollar endowment campaign which was launched by the Upper Iowa conference at the session in Waterloo in October

The seniors and juniors of the Independence high school are taking military drill. Each division drills twice a week under the direction of H. L. Byington. The boys will have their uniforms in about two months when they will be given rifles bought for them last September

Frauds amounting to millions of dollars annually in land deals would be checked by a law which will be proposed in the general assembly by Senator B. J. Gibson of Corning. Iowa has not statute now providing for criminal prosecution of persons who defraud others in the sale of lands.

Local associations holding a poultry show may receive $100 in state aid, or if there should be more than one such association in a county the state aid would be divided, if a bill introduced in the senate of the Iowa legislature by Senator White of Benton county becomes a law. The bill is now in the hands of the senate committee on agriculture.

The officers of the First Iowa are expecting a mobilization call. This regiment was recently mustered out of the federal service. The break with Germany and orders received by National Guard organizations to remain on the boarder cause the officers and men to believe that a summons to the colors is but a few days distant. The First is the largest unit in the Iowa brigade.

Along with the announcement that the Iowa cavalry and the Iowa field hospital corps will leave the border soon for home it was stated at Fort Des Moines that the Third Iowa will be mustered out before the other state troops arrive. If the cavalry and hospital corps start on the date set for their departure from Texas, they will reach Des Moines by the 1st of the month. With the return of the cavalry and the hospital corps but one Iowa regiment will be in federal service on the border, the Second Iowa.

One of General Pershing's soldiers, Clarence Stanley, died while in service. The arrival of the body from Deming, N. M., ended a search of twenty-eight years' duration which his family had conducted since he left home when 20 years old. He was the son of Squire and Mrs. W. H. Stanley of Unionville, among the best known residents of Appanoose county. He had graduated from the Unionville schools and was looked upon as a young man of promise. Then he disappeared. No reason was given.

For one month the Steele-Scott contest for congressman from the Eleventh Iowa district, has been having a hearing before Special Commissioner C. C. Hamilton. Tom J. Steele, Democrat, has overturned the 131 lead accredited on first official returns to George C. Scott, Republican. Steele now leads by 76 votes in the entire district, with one or two more counties to be recounted. His principal gain was made in the second Sioux City precinct where evidence of fraud may lead to charges being filed later.

SYRUP OF FIGS FOR A CHILD'S BOWELS

It is cruel to force nauseating harsh physic into a sick child.

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "dose" mother insisted on—castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it differs. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realize what they do. The little stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing, but the tender little system should not be forced to accept the severe action of purgatives. Thousands of mothers keep the bowels of their children free from constipation, sick headache, colic, simply by giving a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," which will thoroughly clean the liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and before you realize it the constipation, biliousness, fever, or colic has disappeared. You can always tell when the little bowels, liver and stomach need cleansing by the first appearance of coated tongue, bad breath, cold, cross, feverish, headache, stomach sour, diarrhoea, or little one has eaten something which does not agree with it. Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on each bottle. Adv.

Meat Eaters' Backache

Meat lovers are apt to have backaches and rheumatic attacks unless you do heavy work and get lots of fresh air, don't eat too much meat. It's rich in nitrogen and helps to form uric acid, a solid poison that irritates the nerves, damages the kidneys and often causes dropsy, gravel and urinary disorders. Doan's Kidney Pills help weak kidneys to throw off uric acid. Thousands recommend them.

"The height of absurdity!" flared the agitator. "To say that prohibition doesn't prohibit is just as sensible as to say that the man who has to ride 40 miles on horseback to get a drink will do it as often as the man who can get one by stepping around the corner to a saloon. And the patent medicine argument! There may be, I admit, here and there a drunkard who seeks such a substitute, but he is entirely a negligible factor compared to the young men who through the absence of the saloon will never learn to drink. Prohibition, Waller, is essentially the blessing and the salvation of the rising generation—and of women. Prohibit liquor today and you do away with drunkenness among all the youth of this country."

Passing through Dupont Circle, they had followed Massachusetts avenue to Scott Circle. As they turned the corner that brought them into Sixteenth street and set them face to face with the White House, Waller began a new line of inquiry.

"By the way," he said casually, "who are you, anyway?"

"What?"

Smith's tone was explosive. The question made his brain whirl. There crashed through his mind the different way in which Edith Mallon had asked him that only a few minutes before. The picture of her, swaying in the doorway, floated before his eyes. For a moment he doubted his ability to carry on any conversation at all with the man at his side. That this inquiry should come on the heels of the first, seemed to him more than he could stand. Why, he asked himself, should this curiosity about him accumulate so rapidly?

"Who are you?" Waller repeated, lifting his hat to a senator driving by.

Smith forced himself to answer smilingly:

"John Smith—John Smith of Illinois, agitator by profession."

"And who were you?" Waller's slow words had in them the ring of inevitable pursuit. They represented to Smith what he might expect from the rest of the world.

"Oh," he said, his smile not bright enough to make Waller oblivious to the weariness in his voice, "what difference does it make?"

"Some day," his friend explained, exercising elaborate care in the selection of his words, "the whisky lobby is going to attack you on your past. It's as certain as that I'm a foot high. You can't duck it. Heretofore, there have been allusions to it. They've sneered at you as a nobody, an unknown, an unimportant person without connections or any special identity. But in the last few weeks you've earned your reward. You've roused the country. You have the public on the trail of these whisky people. And you've got to face what's coming."

Smith waved his hand widely.

"Oh," he said forcefully, "they can't hurt me."

"You mean there's nothing in your past that you fear?"

"Just that."

"And you think this air of mystery can't do any harm?"

"Why should it?"

"My rooms are just a block over, on M. street," Waller replied after a moment's thought. "Come over there with me, and I'll tell you."

CHAPTER FIVE.

Waller's study faced the afternoon sunlight.

"This room," he said, wheeling a big lounging chair near one of the windows for Smith, "is like my life—full of everybody else's business, none of my own."

There was about it an air of comfort and coziness produced in some extraordinary way by the mixture of incongruous and unexpected things—Mexican pottery he had picked up on a brief inspection of Villa's army; autographed photographs of a president, a famous divine, and a woman socialist, nuggets he had accumulated in his visit to the Coeur d'Alene mining strikes; a rich Persian rug presented to him by an importer in New York; a revolver used by a murderess; curiously embroidered hangings, a gift from an appreciative friend at the Chinese legation; books and magazines everywhere; a photograph of St. Gaudens' "Nirvana," paper knives, pipes, cigaret cases, quaint Japanese jars of tobacco—all in apparent disarray.

"The people I've had to know and cultivate," he added, as if he regretted the fact, "reach round the world. They're so many that I got tired long ago. There are so few that I like."

He lit a cigar and sank into the chair near Smith.

"But you're different," he excepted. "And it's because you're real. You're a disturbance—a disturbance that really disturbs. You know, Washington is waked up every morning by the cry that a real reformer is in its midst. And it goes to bed every night with the knowledge that it has been fooled again. You are the exception to the rule."

He smiled broadly.

"I'm a son of a gun if I don't believe you're going to last," he said, affection in his voice.

Smith's impatience broke forth.

"But tell me," he said, striking the arm of his chair lightly, "what difference can be made in this fight by what I divulge or do not divulge concerning myself?"

Waller puffed his cigar twice before he answered:

"I know you pretty well. It's my business to size up men as far as I can. And I know there never has been anything particularly bad about your past—but not everybody is as charitable as I am. Remember that. Furthermore, the whisky lobby goes on the theory that, when it hurts you, it hurts what you stand for."

"If they can produce anything to my discredit, Waller, they're welcome to it."

There was in the emphatic delivery of this sentence utter finality.

Waller returned to the attack.

"Honestly," he said, a puzzled look on his face, "why don't you end all this infernal gossip about your mysterious past? You've gotten by in society thus far simply because anybody with brains can get by that way in Washington. A man who can entertain a dinner crowd need never pay for a meal in this town—even if he's an escaped convict. But there's too much speculation and whispering about you even there. And, as for the political end of it, it just won't do—that's all."

Smith leaned back in his chair, the late sunlight full on his face. It was the only time Waller had ever seen him look tired.

"Let them gossip if they wish," he answered the other's protest.

Waller got up and put his hand on Smith's shoulder.

"Old man," he said with quiet forcefulness, "you can't ignore them. The moment they convince the public that there really is something in your past life of which you are afraid and ashamed that moment you will begin to slip. And the public is a fool. It will believe anything if you print it in the newspapers often enough."

Smith made no reply. The memory of the woman swaying in the doorway, for the moment controlled his thoughts.

"You're all wrong on this," Waller persisted. "Take my word for it. This isn't because I want a story. Strange to say, I'm interested in this movement of yours—the first time I've been interested in anything of the kind for I don't know when. I want to see you get away with it. But you can't do it in this way. I know the fellows who write the stuff the people read, and they can't get their hearts into stuff about a man who has hung a mystery about his neck—particularly when his enemies claim the mystery covers something criminal or shameful."

Smith felt the convincing sincerity back of what he said.

"I'm sorry, but there's nothing for me to tell—nothing at all."

"Then," Waller said sharply, "if you won't, they will. You can bet your last silver buck on that. And, if they don't get the goods on you, the real goods, they'll manufacture something. They'll put out something, and it will be rotten, and it will hit you at the worst time. You can count on it."

"Lies don't get anywhere these days," Smith objected warmly.

"Don't they?" countered Waller. "Print one, and then see how long it takes the truth to catch up with it."

"Oh, well," he dismissed the subject. "I stand on my work and the cause for which I am fighting. It's all I can do."

The newspaper man smoked in silence. He could not understand how Smith, so clear-headed in all other things, should insist on a policy which, in the end, must be his ruin.

"You might as well know it now," he said, the drawl pronounced in his voice. "You'll know it soon enough anyway. There's somebody in this town who knows something about this precious past of yours."

"Impossible!" exclaimed Smith, jerking himself upright.

"If there isn't I miss my guess a million miles."

Smith's whole body bent toward him, as if to project with greater force the question.

"What makes you say that? What do you know?"

"I don't know anything yet," Waller replied. "So far, it's just in the air. But hints, intimations, are coming from the lobbyists, from Mitchell particularly. They say, if you don't give up the absurd attempt to lead this thing to victory, they'll show you up. They're insisting they have the man who knows the story."

"Just a threat, an empty threat," Smith dismissed the idea. idea.

"I got it from Avery of the Record," Waller said, showing more plainly than ever his belief in the story.

Smith, gazing toward the setting sun, pursed up his lips as if to whistle, but no sound came from them.

"Well, what is it to be?" Waller asked after watching him for several minutes and failing to get an inkling of what was in his mind. "Do you talk, or not?"

"Not!" was the answer.

He sprang from the chair, his alertness full upon him again. Waller followed him to the door, waving aside the thanks for his interest in the matter.

"You're making a grave mistake," the newspaper man said earnestly. "And there's one other thing. If you expect to get action on this amendment in the House in December, as you have said, you've got to hit these representatives of the people in the face with something big, a new idea. Light a fire under them. Force the fighting. This isn't a fight that can be won by the ordinary methods. Make them sit up and take notice. Compel them to act. And," he added persuasively, "get to it before the whisky crowd tries to get to you. Have things fixed by December."

Smith, leaving Waller, went to his rooms on I street. As he walked, the last drawling advice he had gotten from Waller revolved in his mind.

"Light a fire under them," he repeated to himself. "That's the thing. Get the best of the committee on amendments. Do that, and I've got the fight won."

In his apartment, a modest little affair, he paced up and down a long time, permitting himself to go over in detail the things Edith Mallon had said to him. She loved him. That was his dominant thought. It seemed to him a miracle that a woman like Edith should not only care for him but should actually come to meet him, should show him so unmistakably that she loved him, and should ask for his confidence. The most sought after woman in Washington—and he an impossibility. He remembered her again swaying in the doorway, heard the little cry with which she had turned and left him. She even had asked him if he thought it a fair thing to keep her in ignorance. Was it fair? He put the question to himself. Then, clenching and unclenching his hands until the finger nails rasped against the palms, breathing like a strong man who tries to support too great a weight, he struggled for the power to make himself think of something else.

Waller's idea! "Light a fire under them! Compel them to act!" He said these two short sentences over again and again while he paced the narrow space between his walls. Gradually he got down to something like connected thought. What could he do that he already had not done? What new thing could be injected into the fight? He worked over the problem, exercising his brain as if it had been an arm with great muscles in it. Could the new impetus come from the people? Could he furnish it? What would "light a fire?"

He had done all within his power to beat the whisky people. How could he fashion new weapons, map out a fresh campaign? Was there a path hitherto untrod? How could he show the crying demand of the masses for relief from the one thing that brought upon them more harm than all their other evils? What——

He stopped, dead still, in the middle of the room, a slow smile driving away the anxiety that had been dragging at his features. He began to laugh, but checked his mirth when it was only half done. He walked to the window slowly, carefully, the motions of his body reflecting the intensity with which he thought, and studied, and calculated. At last he threw his arms wide, raised himself on his toes, and breathed a long sigh of relief.

"Ah!" he said, like one who yields to the charm of luxurious surroundings. "Ah-h! It will do! It will do!"

And immediately he turned on the lights and began to throw a few necessary articles into a grip. He was going out of town for a day to get the material for the "fire."

In 40 minutes he was on a train bound for New York.

CHAPTER SIX.

Mr. John Smith folded up the papers he had spread out on the great man's desk. The great man, his face a moving picture of thought, left his chair and went to the window overlooking the swirl of the deep, narrow New York street. He was one of those who have done all things by striking adversity in the face and seizing fortune by the throat. He turned and faced Smith.

"Imagination," he said, "is the key to all things. Thoughts, brilliant ideas, are the foundation of business no less than of art. You have brought me a big idea."

"I come to you," said the agitator, "because I know that help must be given by those who have felt the force of the enemy. You, in your family, have suffered. That alone has taught you what the real philanthropy is—to save others from the thing that hurt you."

The great man, who handled dollars much as his visitor played with words, sighed. The sigh was almost a groan.

"My only son," he said heavily.

"And," Smith reminded him, "there are so many other sons—sons who cannot be saved by the endowment of churches or the building of hospitals or the erection of libraries—sons for whom there is only the one chance, the destruction of the worst foe youth ever encountered."

The great man returned to his desk and sat down.

"Let me see your estimate again," he requested. Smith handed him one of the folded papers.

"It is a great sum, a lot of money," the New Yorker commented, running his eye over the column of figures. "And this estimate? Where did you get it?"

"As soon as I reached here this morning, I went to the president of a big railroad. He had the calculations made. They are correct."

"The cost is very high," the man of money said smingly. And then: "You know, here we look first always at the cost. But the idea is great, the plan tremendous."

He sighed, and, letting the paper fall from his fingers to the desk, gazed out at the smoky sky.

"And my own disappointment, my own heartache," he went on, quite simply, "is your advocate."

Smith watched him in silence.

"The churches, the hospitals, the libraries"—the big man's lip curled a little—"some of them are merely advertisements of their donors. But this—this would go into the lowliest hut, into the most luxurious palace. It would reach men and women everywhere. And I need not be known in it."

He handed the paper back to Smith.

"I agree," he said quietly, assuming his real business demeanor. "I stand back of it—for the amount you mention."

A few minutes later Smith, swinging down Broadway, caught the observation of those whom he passed.

A woman with cheeks too bright and eyes too dull turned and watched him out of sight. As she resumed her walk, picking her way on the ridiculously high heels of her shoes, she murmured to herself:

WHAT A JEWELRY FIRM DID

They Invested Some of Their Spare Money in Canadian Lands.

S. Joseph & Sons, of Des Moines, Iowa, are looked upon as being shrewd, capable business men. Having some spare money on hand, and looking for a suitable investment, they decided to purchase Canadian lands, and farm it.

With the assistance of the Canadian Government Agent, at Des Moines, Iowa, they made selection near Champion, Alberta. They put 240 acres of land in wheat, and in writing to Mr. Hewitt, the Canadian Government Agent at Des Moines, one of the members of the firm says:

"I have much pleasure in advising you that on our farm five miles east of Champion, in the Province of Alberta, Canada, this year (1916) we harvested and threshed 10,600 bushels of wheat from 240 acres, this being an average of 44 bushels and 10 pounds to the acre. A considerable portion of the wheat was No. 1 Northern, worth at Champion approximately $1.35 per bushel, making a total return of $19,610, or an average of $81.70 per acre gross yields. Needless to say we are extremely well pleased with our lands."

It might not be uninteresting to read the report of C. A. Wright of Malo, Iowa, who bought 160 acres at Champion, Alberta, for $3,300 in December, 1915. He stubbled in the whole lot of it, and threshed 4,487 bushels Grade No. 2 Northern.

Mr. Wright, being a thorough business man, gives the cost of work and the amount realized. These figures show that after paying for his land and cost of operation he had $2,172.67 left.

ACTRESS TELLS SECRET.

A well known actress gives the following recipe for gray hair: To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo Compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off. Adv.

Innocent Recreation.

BILIOUS, HEADACHY, SICK "CASCARETS"

Gently cleanse your liver and sluggish bowels while you sleep.

Get a 10-cent box.

Sick headache, biliousness, dizziness, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath—always trace them to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes constipation and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months. Adv.

MRS. KIESO SICK SEVEN MONTHS

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Aurora, Ill.—"For seven long months I suffered from a female trouble, with severe pains in my back and sides until I became so weak I could hardly walk from chair to chair, and got so nervous I would jump at the slightest noise. I was entirely unfit to do my housework, I was giving up hope of ever being well, when my sister asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took six bottles and today I am a healthy woman able to do my own housework. I wish every suffering woman would try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and find out for themselves how good it is."—Mrs. CARL A. KIESO, 596 North Ave., Aurora, Ill.

The great number of unsolicited testimonials on file at the Pinkham Laboratory, many of which are from time to time published by permission, are proof of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, in the treatment of female ills.

Every ailing woman in the United States is cordially invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass., for special advice. It is free, will bring you health and may save your life.

SAINT OF CANDY MAKERS

Macarius, Egyptian Man of Fame, Properly Entitled to Such Honor As That Name Entails.

Probably few of the confectioners and candy makers who cater to the public's "sweet tooth" are aware that they have a patron saint all their own, but such is the case. He is St. Macarius. Macarium was adopted by the confectioners as their protector because he himself followed the occupation of making sweets in Alexandria before he forsook the world and its ways and retired to Thebais in upper Egypt to live the solitary and self-sacrificing life of an anchorite.

Macarius lived in the fourth century, and, if we may believe the traditions concerning him, he was a champion faster. For seven years, it is related, he lived on a diet composed of raw herbs and pulse. During Lent he ate on Sundays, and then but a few cabbage leaves. One of the remarkable tales told about the "candy saint" is that once, having killed a goat that bit him, he expiated the "crime" by spending six months in a marsh, where great venomous flies abounded, subjecting himself to such torments that he became a mass of sores.

Excessively Polite.

"Mary, how tall is a giant?" asked Henry.

"Oh, I don't know," said the nurse; "about as tall as a house."

"And how tall is a house?"

"How should I know? Don't ask so many questions. I have no idea how tall a house is."

"Excuse me, Mary," said Henry with dignity, "I forgot that you were so poor to know anything about houses."

POSTUM

"There's a Reason"

FRENCH GOVERNMENT MAY BE REORGANIZED

Napoleon's System, Still Effective, Condemned By Political Leaders.

Paris, (by mail)—France is likely to come out of the war with a new map whether her exterior boundaries are changed or not. Napoleon's organization of her 86 departments, dating from 1790, has been condemned by nearly all French statesmen as inadequate for modern France. A strong movement that has, since the war, developed into an effective experiment in the organization of "regional economic consultative committees" may bring about a political redivision of the country into something like 18 administrative and legislative "regions."

The object is concentration of regional interests now scattered among the departments, with a decentralization of administrative measures. It would bring the French republic into closer analogy with the government of the United States by giving the proposed "regions" independence as to local regulations and economic problems such as the 86 departments have never had.

System Is Antiquated.

The man who has directed the movement is one of the younger men in public life, Jean Hennessy, deputy for the department of Charente and a member of the well known Hennessy family of southwestern France. He introduced a bill to that end in the chamber in 1913. It was still unacted upon when the mobilization was ordered, and M. Hennessy joined his regiment. In the interval before the government returned from Bordeaux to Paris, he had earned the French military medal and the British distinguished service order. With the reassembling of parliament, he came back to push his project and succeeded in passing a compromise measure for the organization of economic consulting committees in each of the 19 military regions of France. A committee of the chamber has reported that the results of the experiment are excellent; they have furnished a forceful argument in favor of M. Hennessy's original proposition.

"The task of the French citizens after the war will be a hard one," said M. Hennessy to the Associated Press, "and they mustn't be handicapped by a superannuated system of governmental administration that centralizes the administrative machinery in the capital, despite the 86 departmental divisions, and cramps the economic life of the country. Heretofore everything has gone to Paris or by way of Paris. All the big railway lines converged upon the capital and left the provincial regions out of touch with each other and without adequate direct communications with foreign countries.

"This centralization has prevented France from adapting herself to the economic transformation of the epoch. She failed to profit from her incomparable geographical position and she left a great part of her enormous natural riches unexploited; her economic installations were too slow in developing; her waterways were neither properly developed nor organized; industrial organization was perfected in only isolated cases and not generalized, several hundred thousand horse power in natural waterfall was neglected; agriculture even did not produce the maximum, there was no cooperation between scientists and practical business men; our capital was mostly applied to the development of other countries than our own.

Wants Red Tape Cut.

"The only cure for all that is the cutting of the red tape that binds those regions to the capital and prevents the free play of local initiatives.

"The interests and occupations of different regions of France are quite as varied as those of the United States; their customs are even more varied, they should have the facilities for looking after their own interests—legislating for themselves and by a regrouping politically into regions that are homogeneous in their natural resources, occupations and requirements, left free to pursue their economic development unhindered by the local considerations of other regions that have not the same interests.

"Of all the great belligerent countries, France is the only one in which younger generations will not be ready to repair the losses and replace the social work of those that are dead. It will take us at least 20 years to bring our adult population up to that of 1914. This deficit of population, if we are not careful, will weigh heavily upon our destiny; all the more so since the war will result in an increased activity in the entire world. It will not only transform the political map of continents, but will have upon the development of countries which are engaged in it, as upon neutral countries, immense consequences. A new world will emerge from the great convulsion.

"The French must no longer revel in words, they must act. The government and representatives of the state, no longer capable of supervising the direction of all the public affairs arising from modern life, and the parliament, overloaded with responsibility and at times subservient to particular interests, must leave what they are no longer able to do to regional assemblies.

"It is proposed to reorganize the administration of affairs into 18 regions. Their suggested bountaries have been only approximately outlined in a map prepared by M. Vidal de la Blanche, the celebrated geographer, but they will probably have for central points the following cities. Paris, Rouen, Rennes, Lille, Nancy, Nantes, La Rochelle, Burges, Dijon, Gordeaux, Limobes, Clermont-Ferrand, Lyons, Grenoble, Toulouse, Moutpelier, Marseilles and Ajaccio."

It is proposed to elect the regional assemblies by universal suffrage, but in new groupings of voters according to their occupations or professions, so that all interests will be represented. In addition to a general group, the following professional groups are proposed: Agriculturists and laborers, merchants and clerks, manufacturers and mechanics, professional men and office holders.

Each of these categories would have representation in the regional assembly proportionate to its voting strength and in the professional categories the proportionate representation of the group would be divided between employers and employed.

The voter may register either in the general group or in the professional group for which his occupation makes him eligible.

These regional councils would approach nearer state legislatures than any bodies heretofore existing in France. They would absorb a considerable part of the work of the parliament and have far wider and more effective powers than those of the present general councils of the 86 departments which correspond to boards or supervisors in New York state, longer and more frequent sessions.

It is proposed to elect a member of the regional assembly for every 20,000 inhabitants or fraction thereof, and the members will not be eligible, as are the members of the general councils, for seats in parliament.

"Interior reforms so vast as those we have in view," concluded M. Hennessy, "are made easier by momentous events that come into the life of peoples. The great reform of 1790 was effected at the dawn of the revolution and the laws now governing the departmental organization in France were voted at the close of the Franco-Prussian war. This regional legislative and administrative reform in France may come out of the great European conflict."

Drug Fiends Held Notorious Liars.

From West's Docket

The refusal of the trial court in state vs. Fong Loon, 153 Pacific Reporter, 233, to permit a Chinese witness to answer questions relative to his use of drugs, resulted in a reversal by the Idaho supreme court. Witness was an interpreter employed by the state to take the dying statement of another Chinaman. An extract from Judge Budge's opinion for the supreme court follows: "We believe it will be admitted that habitual users of opium, or other like narcotics, become notorious liars. The habit of lying comes doubtless from the fact that the users of those narcotics pass the greater part of their lives in an unreal world, and thus become unable to distinguish between images and facts, between illusions and realities. In Wharton & Stillo's Medical Jurisprudence (3d Ed.) section 1111, it is said that 'Of the mental symptoms, in the case of a morphinomaniac or other habitual users of drugs, the most characteristic, perhaps, are the moral perversions. The chronic morphinomaniac is often a confirmed liar. The truth is not in him. * * * There is something quite pathological in this mendacity; the lying is unblushing, inexpert, spontanous—a sort of second nature * * * They have been so often narcotized, and thus cut off from actualities, living in a dreamstate, that they do not seem able to recognize realities when they see them. * * * We do not mean to hold in this case that the fact that a witness is an habitual user of opium or morphine excludes his testimony, unless it is shown that he is mentally irresponsible as a result of the use of such drug when examined as a witness. But we do mean to hold that the habitual use of morphine, cocaine, and other like narcotics, which inevitably tend to impair the mind, destroy the memory and moral character of a witness may be shown for the purpose of affecting his credibility or the weight that should be given to his testimony.'"

Wash Dishes Only Once a Day.

From the Chicago Herald.

Save up your soiled dishes and wash them only once a day. By so doing you can save something like an hour and a quarter a week. Eleven minutes per day was the actual time saved in a recent experiment, says Dr. H. Barnard, writing in Table Talk recently.

"Piles of dishes waiting to be washed three times a day year in and year out throw a damper over the finest of housekeepers. If only the drudgery of dishwashing could be disposed of once a day instead of morning, noon and night, kitchen work would be in greater demand than it is.

"The careful housekeeper will always resent the suggestion that once a day is often enough to wash dishes. She can not train herself to allow soiled plates and silverware to stack up from one meal to the next, for she has been taught that such actions are the evidence of shiftless, slovenly housekeeping. As a matter of fact, along with many other notions which are fixed to the operation of the home, both time and energy are saved by cutting out two of the three daily dishwashing jobs."

The experience of one housekeeper bears out this statement as true. "One week I washed dishes 21 times," she says. "The next week I washed dishes seven times. During the two weeks I planned the meals so that the same number of dishes could be used on each day. I found that while it took 52 minutes each day to wash my dishes three times, it took only 41 minutes a day when I washed them all at once."

This statement takes no account of the interruption of other duties. It does not estimate the amount of gas or fuel saved by heating water to boiling but once instead of three times a day and nothing of the soap saved.

Jewels in India.

From the St. Paul Pioneer Press.

For variety of precious stones no country in the world can rival India. Though she exports annually over £1,500,000 worth of jewels, she still remains today, as centuries ago, the storehouse for the nations. Diamonds, rubies, sapphires, tourmaline, garnet and many kinds of rare chalcedony are mined throughout her many provinces.

The diamond industry is carried on to a great extent in the central provinces. Rubies are mined in upper Burma, and, next to petroleum, form the most profitable of the mineral resources of that state.

One ruby of 75 carats, taken out a few years ago, was valued at $125,000; sapphires are mined in Kashmir, but the mines, after having been worked for over 900 years, are now said to be giving out, though the yellow, white, blue and green varieties are extensively found in the ruby bearing gravels in Burma.

Garnets form a valuable trade in Kishangarh, while large quantities of turquoise come from Sikkim and Tibet, those from the later country being harder and of darker and more liquid luster, and having therefore greater value.

SISAL DUTY PROVIDES CARRANZA WITH FUNDS

El Paso, Tex. (By mail).—Export duties on sisal fibre from Yucatan and on crude oil from Tampico are the chief sources of income of the Carranza government, according to a financier just out of Mexico. Owing to reduced importations the ordinary customs are a minor source, he explains, while the suspension of work in the mines and factories and the unprosperous condition of the ranchers has materially reduced the amount received in taxes.

Mines and factories have suffered in some parts directly from bandits and rebels, but everywhere from lack of chemicals and other materials for which Mexico had formerly depended on Europe. Currency troubles and lack of sufficient coin to do business with, have further had a depressing effect.

A decree issued by First Chief Carranza calling on all banks to liquidate will clean up a number of insolvents. As the banks in Mexico are almost all run by Britis hand French capital, this should give the banking interests of the United States an opportunity to get a foothold in Mexico when its government is put on a basis capable of attracting investors, he declared

Jean Webster.

D. Z. D., in Century

"The career of Jean Webster McKinney, who died last June on the day that her little daughter was born, was remarkable for its steady, sure progress. Mourned by hundreds of thousands, her great personal charm, her warm sympathies, and above all her penetrating sense of humor made her toward the last a very potent influence in semi-public life. Absolutely the artist, yet absolutely without the usual vagaries of the artistic temperament, and possessed of an indomitable will, only her untimely death prevented her from reaching her goal—a place in the front rank of American writers.

"Jean Webster's large hearted interest in humanity was always the actuating motive of her pen. There is a pretty play of sentiment in everything she wrote, but her wholesome sense of humor always saved her from sentimentality, and no writer of our time was more skillful than she in those pleasing contrasts of humor and pathos that are characteristic of modern American fiction.

"Jean Webster was in no sense a reformer 'Daddy-Long-Legs' was the spontaneous creation of her brain, inspired, no doubt, by her passionate love of children. As a play, even more than in book form, it did more good than a thousand tracts in pointing the need of institutional reforms. Its effect was so immediate and so widespread that the author found herself at the center of a reform movement. As a result she wrote her last published work, 'Dear Enemy,' which, beneath the light, engaging love story that plays about the surface, presents the last word in the care of dependent children—a book destined to do more effective service in behalf of these unfortunates than all the treatises yet published. Such is the magic of personality when combined with a seeing eye and a singing pen. The names of her characters, whimsically enough, she usually chose from the telephone book, but the characters themselves were always taken from life both in her fiction and in her playwriting.

"She had evolved a thorough technic, she was master of the tool she wrought with, and at the time of her death she lacked only complete maturity of mind and experience to achieve the great things she was potentially capable of. As it is, what she has left us will stand the test of time, I believe, as the best of its kind."

Canal Tolls.

From the Indianapolis News.

In an address in Chicago recently, Maj. Gen. George W. Goethals told members of the Chicago Association of Commerce that it was his belief and the belief of many American shippers that congress should take immediate steps to remedy the present toll rule in force at the Panama canal. The trouble goes back to the government's decision expressed through an act of congress, to admit to American registry foreign built ships with their registry certificates. It was found, after the bill was passed, that the net registered tonnage of various countries differed. In one ship which came in with its British measurement there was a saving of $1,000 on tolls between that ship and an American ship having the same cargo carrying space differently distributed.

When the question of tolls first came up, there was a great deal of discussion as to the propriety of giving to American coastwise shipping free use of the canal. It was decided that this would be a treaty violation. In theory, all ships of all nations were put on an equal footing as far as tolls were concerned. But the rule has worked against American shipping. The government has gone to the extreme of charging American ships more than foreign ships—all because the method of computing tonnage in foreign countries happens to differ in some cases from the American method.

Congress is aware of this unjust discrimination against American registered ships. A bill to remedy the condition has been introduced. But, like other bills, it has been laid aside for the revenue, pork and other appropriation bills. All that is needed is a bill to empower the commissioner of navigation to adopt a tonnage standard to which all ships will have to conform in paying the toll. And, of course, provision should be made for an appeal from the commissioner's decision. The bill is simple and should be passed.

Be True.

Suspicion always haunts the guilty mind,
And is more apt to be untrue than just.
They seldom see true virtue in a soul
Whose own thoughts seek no higher realm than lust.

Suspicion is not truth's nor virtue's friend,
But is an enemy to happiness and bliss.
The poison that to friendship it emits,
In nature's much the same as Juda's kiss.

A nobler and a wiser man is he
Whose own mind is so far from thoughts impure
That he suspects and ever fails to see
But truth and virtue which alone endure.

There is no one without defect, 'tis said,
No lives without some failings small or great,
Yet balanced on the same scales as ourselves,
We're ever ready to distrust their weight.

Should we be shocked at balance wanting found?
We should be more so if one withstood the test;
Since we with insufficiency abound,
Pray why be so exacting of the rest?

By loving ourselves less and others more,
Our lives with God will soon seem more in tune,
Likewise from envy, selfishness and pride
Our hearts may hope to soon become immune.

Today is all the claim we have on life,
Yesterday's passed into eternity for aye;
And left us only memories of good or bad,
In thoughts or deeds committed on that day.
The greatest conqueror that dwells below,
Is he who masters his own tongue and will,
And o'er defect of neighbor, friend or foe
Is silent, or speaks well instead of ill.

Backache

In spite of the best care one takes of [illegible] any part of the human mechanism is liable to become out of order. The most important organs are the stomach, liver and kidneys.

The kidneys are the scavengers and they work day and night in separating the poisons from the blood. Their signals of distress are easily recognized and include such symptoms as backache, depressions, drowsiness, irritability, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic twinges, dropsy, gout.

"The very best way to restore the kidneys to their normal state of health," says Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., "is to drink plenty of pure water and obtain from your favorite pharmacy a small amount of Anuric, which is dispensed by almost every druggist." Anuric is inexpensive and should be taken before meals. You will find Anuric more potent than lithia, dissolves uric acid as water does sugar.

BANISHED—pimples, blotches, sores, humors, and eruptions by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. For a poor complexion, and for the poor blood that causes it, this is the best of all known remedies.

In every disease or disorder of the skin or scalp, in every trouble that comes from impure blood, the "Discovery" is the only medicine sold that does what it promises.

Scrofula in all its various forms, Eczema, Tetter, Salt-rheum, Erysipelas, Boils, Carbuncles, Enlarged Glands, and Swellings, and every kindred ailment, are benefited and cured by it.

COAST GUARDS SAVED DEER

Rescued Animal When It Had Broken Through Ice, Revived It and Set It Free.

Humanitarian activities of the coast guard extend to the saving of wild animal life. A deer chased by dogs attempted to cross the ice, crashed in, was rescued, nearly done for, by the coast guard crew of the station at Quonochontaug, R. I.; was taken into the station boat and thence to the station; was worked over until it revived, and then was set at liberty.

The tale comes in the report of the keeper of the station. The incident happened on the morning of January 3, when, about ten o'clock, the station crew sighted the deer, pursued by dogs, crossing a marsh about a half-mile away. The hunted animal attempted to cross a pond on thin and rotten ice. It was observed to fall through, and try in vain to extricate itself.

Three surfmen launched a small skiff and reached the deer after an hour's work in breaking through the ice. The deer was nearly dead from its struggle in the icy water.

FALLING HAIR MEANS DANDRUFF IS ACTIVE

Save Your Hair! Get a 25 Cent Bottle of Danderine Right Now—Also Stops Itching Scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its luster, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any store, and after the first application your hair will take on that life, luster and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance; an incomparable gloss and softness, but what will please you most will be after just a few weeks' use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp. Adv.

Would Get Him Out.

A school-inspector, who was examining a class of boys in arithmetic, set the following question:

"If a cat fell into a bottomless pit, and climbed up two feet for every three it fell, how long would it take to get out?"

This proved a regular puzzler to the lads, and one little fellow went at the problem with a will, and covered both sides of his slate with calculations.

"Here'" exclaimed the inspector, as he noticed him hard at work. "Stop doing that. Haven't you the sense to see that the cat couldn't possibly get out?"

"Oh, yes, he could, sir," replied the boy, brightly. "If you'll only give me time I'll bring him out at Australia."

One day he and a "partner" he had picked up in Dawson were going on a trip in midwinter. The cold was, of course, intense.

Just as they were on the point of starting, his companion dumped a number of hard, sharp-pointed articles in the sleigh, pitching them rather unceremoniously on top of a sack of oatmeal.

"Look here," protested De Windt, "don't put those tent pegs on the oatmeal. They'll poke their points through the bag and there'll be a leak."

"Those ain't tent pegs," explained the other, rather scornfully; "they're beefsteaks."

And so they were, cut and ready for use on the line of march.

More Than Money

It takes more than money to build a good low-price car.

It takes money wisely managed. It takes brains, experience, and money to build a dependable car.

A car must be a complete mechanical harmony. The relationship of one part to another must be true. And it is most important that each unit---the motor, clutch, transmission, and axle---be built of exacting materials.

The Chevrolet, built by one of the most powerful motor car organizations in America, conforms to these ideals.

And the popularity of the Chevrolet proves that the extra effort necessary to build a good car is worth the extra labor required.

We find pleasure in the accomplishment for the reason that we have pleased so many thousands of owners. And we can please you.

Memoir of Catherine Elizabeth Wellemeyer

Catherine Elizabeth Wellemeyer was born on a farm near Garner, Iowa, April 20, 1876. She died at the Deaconess Hospital, Marshalltown, Iowa, February 9, 1917.

Her early life was spent in a parsonage, her parents being Rev F. H. and Mary M. Wellemeyer. Her elementary education was received in the public schools of several towns of Iowa and sorrounding states. Her subsequent education was received at the Decorah high school, Charles City College and the State Teachers College at Cedar Falls

Following this preparation she taught in the rural schools of Hancock county, Iowa and in the graded schools of Britt, Iowa. Music had always been a cherished art and she now decided to devote her life to its cultivation. She spent a number of years studying music under the masters in Chicago, notably Arthur B. English, Karleton Hackett and Wm. L. Tomlins. After this special preparation, she taught vocal music to private pupils and also was voice instructor at Graceland College, Lamoni, Iowa.

At the mature age of thirty and with a complete surrender of herself to service she went to Marshalltown in 1909, and for seven years was a factor in the musical life of that city. The story of her last illness is briefly told. About three weeks ago she was a patient in the Deaconess hospital suffering a severe attack of la grippe The following week she resumed her work, but did not seem to have her usual strength and color. On the stormy Sunday of February 4th she was at church directing the music there and attended to her usual school duties on Monday. In the evening she met with the Standard Bearer organization at the church. Early Tuesday morning she told members of the household where she lived that she was having indigestion. She returned to her room for rest and was found at about six or six-thirty a. m. in an unconscious condition. Doctors were summoned at once and as soon as possible she was taken to the hospital. Here she was placed under the care of special nurses and competent physicians, who cared for her day and night. Her mother, a sister and two brothers were also at her side. For three days her physical nature fought against the attack of uremic poisoning and at 7:15 Friday morning she passed to the Great Beyond

Members of the immediate family are the mother and Ruth, of Charles City, Mrs. R. W. Merten, of Guthrie, Oklahoma; Carl of Ealrville, Iowa; Arthur, of Klemme, Iowa; Ernest of Colton, California and Fletcher of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. The father and two sisters, Estelle and Lois had preceeded her in death.

To form a true estimate of her life and character we need to consider her work at Marshalltown. Here she found a three-fold field of labor in the schools, in the M. E. church and in community. In her school work she taught and supervised music in the grades and high school, organized glee clubs, orchestra and band, and started classes in harmony and musical history. She was a pioneer in the movement to secure a credit in college of musical work done in the high school. While her body lay in state in Marshalltown over twelve hundred pupils passed before her to pay their last respects.

In an official way, she was president of the music section of the Iowa State Teachers Association; she was leader of the music section of the Northeast Iowa Teachers Meeting, and represented the Marshalltown schools in the National Supervisors Meetings held at Pittsburg, Pa., and Lincoln, Neb.

Miss Wellemeyer had an abiding faith in the fundementals of the Christian religion, and was from childhood a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal church. Her natural cutlet for the expression of religious belief and experience was through song. Her constant striving in the church choir was to lead others to express themselves in the same way. In community life she believed in the elevating effect of the right kind of music. She was successful in arranging for a rendition of the "Messiah" which was a strong factor in raising the musical tastes of the city.

Miss Wellemeyer was of pure German extraction and held membership in "Der Deusche Unterhalting Kreis" being president of this club.

Her work with the children made her name a household word.

"To live in hearts we leave behind, is not to die."

How a terrible fire that gutted an entire New York tenement house was caused by a combination of a milk bottle a lamp and a peaceful tabby cat is one of the incidents brought out in an article on "Curious Fires," by Charles T. Hill in St. Nicholas. The cat in question was reposing in the open back window of a first floor flat in the tenement occupied by a spinster who was called into the front room just at the moment when an irate lodger in the house at the rear exasperated by the nocturnal concert of two undomestic tabbies on the rear fence, shied a milk bottle at them which landed wide of its mark and crashed against the tenement window sill. The spinster's tabby, dazed with fright, gave one fearful leap clutched at the table cover and overturned the lamp.

Besides its regular laundry work one Illinois laundry company carries on an active cleaning and pressing business. This branch of the work is not done at the shop, however, but at the door of the customer's house. Steaming and pressing machines have been placed in a large inclosed automobile, and the customer can watch the work if he chooses. Delays are done away with in this way, and freshly pressed garments spared the wrinkling they sometimes receive in crowded laundries.

A California inventor has perfected a machine which picks prunes from the ground where they have been allowed to drop. The machine is pushed along and the prunes collected by a revolving drum covered with sharp spikes. The fruit is then dropped into a hopper at the rear of the drum, separating the fruit from the stems. It is believed it must be picked before the prune is dried.

The huge revolving light which has been placed in the tower on the island of Helgoland in the North sea is perhaps the most powerful of its sort in the world. It is said to have candle power and to be seen for a distance of 35 miles. The tower in which the light is located is 472 feet above sea level and cost $8,000 a year to maintain.

NO HOPE OF A 70 DAY SESSION NOW

Impossible to Complete Work in That Time—Discuss Taking a Week's Adjournment.

Des Moines, Ia. Feb. 17. The dream of a 70 day session of the legislature has vanished and the administration proposal for an adjourned session is fading away into oblivion rapidly.

The session is now 37 days old, and there are no evidences that it will be finished any earlier than is usual.

Plans for the usual March 1 recess are now being discussed.

Representative Walter Anderson, of Greene county has prepared a resolution which he will probably introduce today, providing for a recess beginning one week from Saturday February 24 and extending one week from the following Thursday which will bring the date of reconvention to March 6.

Speaker Pitt is understood to favor a somewhat shorter recess but the Anderson resolution will bring matters to a head.

Plenty of Work Yet.

There are now 44 bills on the house calendar enough to keep that body busy for two weeks. In addition, the right on the road bill and the consideration of all of the appropriation measures yet to be undertaken the coal question question is still to be settled the state printing fight is to come and no committee action on Governor Hardings plan to [illegible] special commission on classification of offices has been taken.

Under a resolution passed early in the session all measures containing appropriation of funds save only committee bills, were required to be introduced by February 15.

The day of grace expired yesterday and Chairman Johnston of the house appropriation committee says that future appropriation measures will go to the ways and means committee. Practically all of the big appropriation bills are with the exception of the normals and some of the institutions.

OLD SCULPTOR'S BRIDE DIES.

Paris Feb. 16. The Petit Journal reports the death at Meudon after a long and painful illness of Madame Auguste Rodin the wife of the famous sculptor. Madame Rodin whose maiden name was Rose Beurre was married on January 29 to the sculptor.

The marriage of Auguste Rodin last January came on the heels of a report that the sculptor who is 76 years old, was seriously ill. The marriage took place at Meudon and was attended by only a few intimate friends of the bride and groom.

EXTENSION GETS A SEVERE JOLT

Measure Brought Out of Committee Repeals Tax—Would Sell Part of Capitol Grounds.

Des Moines, Ia. Feb. 17. Foes of capitol extension won a point late today in the senate when they took the Whitemore bill which had been reported as indefinitely postponed away from the committee and placed it on the calendar by a vote of 23 to 27. This measure repeals the capitol extension tax after this year. The vote is hardly a test as some who are in favor of selling part of the capitol grounds opposed the bill today as it is not going far enough.

The house passed the banking committee bill providing for separate banking department and removing same from the state auditor's office by a vote of 83 to 29 with five absent.

Griffin of Woodbury presented a measure to amend the Iowa Sunday blue laws by exempting theaters, movies amusement parks, bath houses, baseball games, etc.

ACCUSED OF BURNING HORSES; MEN ARRESTED

Day Before Fire, It Is Charged, Good Animals Shipped to Sioux City.

Runnels, Ia. Feb. 17.—Two Runnels men, J. J. Heller and C. A. Anson were arrested last night by Deputy Sheriff Henderson on the charge that they set fire to their barn, drove into it eight head of horses and mules and burned them to death.

It is charged that on the day preceding the fire these men shipped their good horses to Sioux City and placed them in charge of a horseman at Morningside. They then bought eight head of "critters" worth in total about $200, placed them in the barn and burned the entire outfit. They then put in a claim for insurance on the good animals. FORT Dodge Iowa lost its oldest inhabitant and one of its oldest men when Abraham Barger died at his home near Lehigh Tuesday. Barger would have been 101 if he had lived four days longer for he was born February 18, 1816, in Perry county Indiana. Although he was born in leap year and lived through 25 leap years he was impervious to Cupid and never married. With his brother Henry, he came to Iowa in 1852. They drove overland with oxen. With the exception of the few years spent as a soldier during the civil war he lived continuously on his farm near Lehigh.

ESTHERVILLE.—Howard L. Beach the 16-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. V. E. Beach was struck on the head and instantly killed here by a falling tree. Young Beach had been helping his father saw down trees in a woodlot near the Beach house. The funeral services will be held at the Moose Lake church and will be conducted by the Rev. J. C. Ellis. Interment will be made in Riverside cemetery at Moose Lake.

ESTHERVILLE. The Elks lodge has named a committee to look after the building of their new club house in the spring. The plans call for an expenditure of $70,000. A larger amount will be spent before the building is ready for use. The lodge has just completed a campaign for new members which resulted in somewhere over 100 new names being added to the list.

ASK GAS MASKS FOR USE IN UTAH MINE

Carbon Dioxide Gas Carries Death to All Workmen in Miller Hill, Officials Say.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Feb. 15.—Baffled by a flood of death dealing carbon dioxide gas, which has halted operations in the Miller Hill mine east of here, officials of the company today appealed to the United States government for gas masks such as are used in the trenches in Europe. Unless these masks are received officials of the company say operations in the mine must remain at a standstill.

TAUCHER SAILS ON SHIP WITH DIPLOMATS

New York, Feb. 15.—Hans Taucher, husband of Mme. Johanna Gadski and agent of the Krupp interests in this country, sailed on the Frederik VIII. Taucher, with Wolf von Igel, was indicted in connection with the alleged plot to blow up the Welland canal, but was acquitted after trial. Taucher is said to have been provided with a safe conduct, although his name did not appear on the list of Count Bernstorff's party.

ROAD INSURGENTS HAVE 55 MEMBERS

Majority Indicated in House for the Pitt-Johnston Highway Faction—Lytle Bill Is Adopted.

Des Moines, Ia. Feb. 16. In a meeting of the house highway committee held last night behind closed doors the Pitt-Johnston road bill was given its final touches and probably will be introduced for passage late today. As the result of a rather careful canvass the forces seeking to abolish the state highway commission and substitute a commissioner-engineer, claim to have 56 house members, enough to carry the program. The house members said to be aligned with the Pitt-Johnston faction are Anderson of Davis, Anderson of Winnebago, Andre, Bailey, Becker, Benn, Boies, Coakley, Crozier, Edington, Ebbs, E. Finch, Garber, Giltner, Griffin, Hall, Helming, Hitt, Jackson, Johnston of Humboldt, Johnston of Lucas, Kern, Kimberly, Krause, Lake, Laughlin, Lenocker, Lewis, McFerren, Mead, Meredith, Miles, Mowery, Newton, Nordyke, Peters, Price, Rayburn, Reed, Rees, Richards, Roberts, Rogers, Rowley, Scott, Smith, Stanley, Starzinger, Tucker, Ustad, Walrath, Wilson of Cherokee, Wilson of Mahaska, Wilson of Mitchell, Wormley.

It is somewhat uncertain what the senate will do with the house road bill but the members of that body also realize that the highway commission was one of the issues in the 1916 election and that its operations did not receive approval.

If the highway commission is abolished it will be about the first case on record of retiring a board or commission after its personal machinery has been put in running order. The highway board is making a hard fight to remain in power however, and has the general backing of other officials, boards and commissions as they wish to discourage all efforts at abolition of existing positions.

Lytle's Bill Indorsed

Permission for manufacturers of patent or proprietary medicines and for dentists to purchase alcohol or vinous or spirituous liquors was approved today by the senate pharmacy committee in its report of two bills for passage. The committee acted favorably on Senator Lytle's bill permitting bona fide manufacturers of patent and proprietary medicines who have not been convicted of violation of the liquor laws during the last three years to purchase alcohol under certain restrictions.

HOUSE PASSES BILL TO PROBE STATE FAIR FINANCES

Des Moines, Ia. Feb. 16. The Iowa house yesterday passed the Lane bill calling for appointment of three representatives and three senators to investigate alleged extravagance in the handling of state fair funds. The vote was 89 to 4. Mr. Lane made a speech in which he demanded that the fair management be placed on a business basis. He said the state fair payroll totals $33,000 and that $25,000 of it is spent during the fair.

SPECIAL COURT SESSION TO TRY ALLEGED EMBEZZLER

Cedar Rapids, Ia. Feb. 16. Judge Rockefeller called a special session of the district court to grant a new trial to Guy Brent young bank bookkeeper who was arrested and charged with embezzlement last June following the suicide of the vice president of the bank.

The jury at the first trial disagreed. Brent is charged specifically with embezzling $5,000 of the bank's funds. This amount was found in his effects after the suicide of the vice president, with whom Brent had formed a close friendship. Brent's mother and an aunt, Mrs. E. A. Crosswhite of Kansas City, testified they gave the young man the $5,000, "part as a loan and part for investment."

FORT DODGE OFFICERS RESENT CLUB ACTION

Protest Against Efforts to Get Them Home From Border —Ready to Stay

Webster City, Ia. Feb. 16. The action of the Fort Dodge Commercial club in seeking to bring pressure to bear to get the Iowa troops home from the Mexican border has raised the ire of the Second infantry, the only Iowa regiment left on the border. The action of the Fort Dodge Commercial league was made public through Webster City due to the fact that Webster City men received letters from the Fort Dodge league asking their assistance in the matter. Similar letters were written to every town represented by companies in the Second infantry. But just as soon as the regiment learned what was going on the boys protested at once. A mass meeting was called and a letter was prepared by the Fort Dodge companies as a protest to the commercial league of their home city. The Iowa boys hold that they answered the call of the president and that while they were anxious to come home they would not think of coming so long as any emergency exists for keeping them in active service. The protest of the Fort Dodge companies in behalf of the Second infantry was signed by Capt. F. R. Frost, company G, Capt. H. R. Heath, company F, First Lieut. James F. Barton, company G, first Lieut. E. R. Appel, company F, second Lieut. Theo. Munson, company F.

PHILADELPHIA PAST SUB DANGER ZONE

First U. S. Liner to Leave Since Blockade Is Believed to Be Safely on Way to U. S.

Liverpool Feb. 17.—The Philadelphia, the first American liner to leave Europe since Germany's declaration of unrestricted submarine warfare, sailed from here late Wednesday afternoon. She carried 95 passengers of all classes of whom 38 were Americans.

The Philadelphia was unarmed. In addition to her passengers, she carried a general cargo of what is known as express freight and two tons of dispatches from the American embassy in London for the state department in Washington.

Most of the passengers comforted themselves with the thought that Germany, in spite of threats to torpedo anything in the prescribed war zone, would not go to the length of sinking an American passenger liner.

New York, Feb. 17.—The Philadelphia should by this time be well beyond the submarine zone American line officials said today. The ships had on board, according to their advices, 237 passengers divided as follows: First class, 61, second class, 66, and steerage, 110.

TUSCANIA STARTS ACROSS.

New York Feb. 16. The Anchor line steamer Tuscania carrying 14 cabin passengers, of whom four are Americans, sailed today for Glasgow.

The Tuscania is in the same service as was the steamer California, torpedoed last week off the coast of Ireland, with the loss of 41 lives.

BANDITS LOOT LINCOLN BANK

Lincoln Neb. Feb. 16. Robbers today at noon locked the cashier of the National Bank of University Place in the bank vault and escaped with $2,500.

A steady nerved robber strolled leisurely into the First National bank, at University Place a Lincoln suburb. There was no one in the bank but the president. The robber a young man about 23 years old flashed a gun in the officials face and ordered him to retreat to the vault. Upon locking him in the vault the robber picked up $2,500 in currency scorning a large amount of silver and gold and made his escape.

Within 30 minutes after the president, B. H. Schaberg had managed to unlock the combination of the vault the little town was swarming with parties in search of the robber.

PAPER MAKERS MAY REDUCE PAPER PRICES

Proposal to U. S. Trade Commission Follows Opening of Probe to Discover Trust.

Washington Feb. 17.—It was authoritatively announced here today that a number of the largest print paper manufacturers have submitted to the federal trade commission a signed statement proposing that the commission take certain action which will be of the utmost importance to newspaper publishers and relieve the present situation of prohibitive prices. An official statement will be made later today.

The action of the manufacturers follows two days of conference with the commission. The manufacturers hurried here soon after it was announced that the federal grand jury in New York had been asked to return indictments charging criminal violations of the anti-trust laws."

No Shortage Apparent.

The commission's report of its investigation of the news print paper industry is about ready to be presented to congress. It is understood to show that there is no real shortage of news print paper as the manufacturers have contended and that the paper mills of the country are in position to meet all ordinary demands.

New York Feb. 16.—Officers of the news print manufacturers' association, an organization of 68 individuals and customers appeared as witnesses today before the special federal grand jury, which is to investigate whether increase in the price of news print paper involves a violation of the anti-trust law. After the manufacturers have testified a number of newspaper publishers will be called, and it is expected that the investigation will last at least a month.

GERMANS HAVE BASE IN LOWER CALIFORNIA?

Supplies for Raider Believed Stored—Three Jap Warships Sighted Off Cape San Lucas.

San Diego, Cal., Feb. 17.—Information tending to support recent reports that a German steamer had been plying along the Lower California coast for the supposed purpose of collecting and caching supplies for a German raider was brought here today by Capt. L. K. Brandt, of the schooner W. and K., which arrived from Magdalena bay.

Captain Brandt said he was told by Enrique Flores, jefe politico, of Magdalena bay that early in December a steamer flying the German flag had entered the bay and remained more than 12 hours. The vessel, he was informed had a funnel and was equipped with wireless.

Reports have been received here that three Japanese warships were sighted recently off Cape San Lucas at the extreme tip of Lower California.

ANTI-JAP LAND LAW MAY YET BE PASSED IN IDAHO

Agitation Against It Found to Have Come From Boise Attorney, Instead of Tokio.

REPRESENTS JAPS IN U. S.

Borah's Request That Measure Be Withdrawn May Be Recalled When Facts Are Established

Boise, Id., Feb. 17.—The [illegible] land ownership law, rejected by the legislature a few weeks ago at the request of the state department after representations from the Japanese embassy, may yet become a law [illegible] believed here today by its supporters. Their hopes have been revived by the publication today in the Idaho Daily Statesman, of special dispatches from Washington, which says affidavits filed with the state department show the protests against the proposed [illegible] tion to have originated not at Tokio but at Boise, Id., with the [illegible] for the Idaho-Japanese association.

The bill, was drawn at the request of United States Senator Borah was admittedly aimed at Japanese [illegible] in sugar beet growing in Idaho. According to the dispatch C. M. Booth attorney for the Japanese association quoted in the affidavits as saying the Japanese ambassador knew of the pending legislation until [illegible] through Washington connection it to the ambassador's attention.

U. S. SEES NO CHANGE

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—[illegible] department officials said today [illegible] saw no reason for altering opposition to the anti-alien land ownership bill, rejected recently by the Idaho legislature at their request. The position was due entirely to the fact that it was an unwise procedure at this time, they said. That these attitude is fully known to officials here, who feel that no state legislature should in any way control the broader international [illegible] be entrusted to the state [illegible].

Senator Borah said today he had not withdrawn his opposition to the bill and was waiting to see if Secretary Lansing would view the matter filed with the state department by citizens of Boise purporting to show that the protest against it was instigated by some lawyers and was not spontaneous. If the state department believes Japan is not protesting, Senator Borah said, he would be willing to withdraw his opposition to the bill and see it become law, otherwise he would continue to hold that the Idaho legislature should not embarrass the federal government.

The affidavit signed by W. [illegible] Hugh H. Rankin, William Winch [illegible] Ned Hasbrouck, recites that on February 3 they were invited to the home of C. M. Booth, an attorney [illegible] who told them:

Worked Up By Lawyer

"I was sent to Boise by the Japanese association of Idaho, to kill the 'anti-alien bill' which I have accomplished by acting in direct opposition to my instructions from the Japanese association and the Japanese consul. I found the sentiment strongly in favor of the bill in both houses."

Booth, the affidavit says, declared he instructed one Herrick, a Washington D. C., attorney to file a protest in the name of the Japanese embassy.

"Mr. Booth," the affidavit continued, also made it plain that the Japanese ambassador had no intention whatever of taking any action in the matter at this time, unless forced to do so by the action of Mr. Booth; that Mr. Booth's attorney in Washington, had practically forced the Japanese ambassador to file the protest with the Washington government and 'stand pat' and that all the acts of the Japanese ambassador at Washington, were direct results of the activities of Mr. Booth."

BARS LIQUOR ADS.

Columbia, S. C., Feb. 16.—The South Carolina house of representatives has passed a bill preventing liquor advertisements in newspapers of any form in this state. The bill has already passed the senate.

DISCUSSES RIGHT TO BE WELL BORN

W. E. D. Stokes.

W. E. D. Stokes, New York millionaire, is a disciple and apostle of the new theory in eugenics which teaches that the same principles that are applied in the breeding of animals should be applied to human beings. Mr. Stokes' new book, "The Right to Be Well Born," has caused a great sensation among eugenists throughout the country.

FRUIT LAXATIVE FOR SICK CHILD

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm tender stomach, liver and bowels.

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs" that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish, or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic remember, a good 'inside cleaning' should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs" handy, they know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs" which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Adv.

Real Helpmeet.

"Does your wife assist you in your work?" queried the bore of the party. "I see her at your desk quite often."

Yes," replied the self-confessed humorist. "She destroys all my wife and mother-in-law jokes."

WOMEN! IT IS MAGIC! LIFT OUT ANY CORN

Apply a few drops then lift corns or calluses off with fingers—no pain.

Just think! You can lift off any corn or callus without pain or soreness.

A Cincinnati man discovered this ether compound and named it freezone. Any druggist will sell a tiny bottle of freezone, like here shown for very little cost. You apply a few drops directly upon a tender corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears then shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you can lift it right off.

Freezone is wonderful. It dries instantly. It doesn't eat away the corn or callus, but shrivels it up without even irritating the surrounding skin.

Hard, soft or corns between the toes as well as painful calluses, lift right off. There is no pain before or afterwards. If your druggist hasn't freezone, tell him to order a small bottle for you from his wholesale drug house. adv.

A mounting of recent invention permits a single lens camera to take a stereoscopic picture.

Whenever there is a tendency to constipation, sick headache or biliousness, take a cup of Garfield Tea. All druggists. Adv.

Housecleaning is over as far as the poems written about it.

Feel Achy All Over?

To ache all over in damp weather, or after taking a cold, isn't natural, and often indicates kidney weakness. Uric acid causes many queer aches, pains and disorders of the organs. Well kidneys keep uric acid down. Tired, dizzy, nervous people would do well to try Doan's Kidney Pills. They stimulate the kidneys to activity and so help clear the blood of irritating poisons.

A South Dakota Case

Mrs. H. Bitner, Main St., Flandreau, S. D. says: "My kidneys troubled me for a long time and my back ached intensely. I couldn't stoop or straighten without pain. My sight was affected and bright spots flashed before me. Finally, I used Doan's Kidney Pills and the backache and other ailments left me in a short time. I have recommended them at every opportunity."

PENFIELD BREAKS RELATIONS BETWEEN U. S. AND AUSTRIA

London, Feb. 17.—The negotiations between Frederick C. Penfield, the American ambassador at Vienna, and the Austro-Hungarian government have been broken off, according to the Berliner Tageblatt, as quoted in an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Copenhagen today.

Paris, Feb. 17. Americans in Austria have been warned from Washington to leave that country.

Washington, Feb. 17. State department officials, discussing the report from Paris that Americans had been warned from Washington to leave Austria said no instructions to this effect should be sent to Ambassador Penfield. They considered it probable that Ambassador Penfield might have taken such action on his own initiative.

Officials say they still hope that a break with Austria may be averted but admit that all recent indications are to the contrary.

Official reports of the release of the 72 American prisoner taken to Germany on the prize ship Yarrowdale had not reached the department early today. The protest against their detention may go forward as a matter of record and as offering a means of showing the treatment accorded German crews here.

The transfer of Joseph C. Grew formerly secretary of the American embassy at Berlin, to the embassy at Vienna, was announced today at the department where it was said that his knowledge of the situation in Germany and the attitude of the American government would be of great aid there.

Berne, Switzerland, Feb. 17. The last contingent of the American colony arriving here from Germany left tonight for Paris on their way to Spain and home. The expected arrival of an additional number of Americans from Germany including American consuls has not occurred and in consequence reports are rife that they are being detained by the German government.

Vienna, Feb. 17. During the last three days the telegraphic exchange of cipher telegrams between Washington and Vienna has been interrupted. At the American embassy it was said today that the outlook was decidedly hopeful. It is understood that Joseph C. Grew who was secretary of the American embassy at Berlin was intercepted by telegraph by the state department at Berne for the purpose of transfer to Vienna. So far he has not arrived and the delay is believed to be due to difficulties in crossing the frontier.

On the whole the interest of public and press in the intentions of the United States regarding the central powers appears to be flagging considerably, a much greater interest being felt in the submarine operations, the development of which is awaited with eagerness.

FRENCH SHIP WINS FIGHT WITH SUB

Honduras, Attacked, Fires 30 Shells, One of Which Takes Effect, Officers Say.

New York, Feb. 17. Officers of the French steamer Honduras, which arrived here today from Bordeaux brought reports of a battle with a German submarine on December 7, 1916, 20 miles from Brest.

The officers believed the submarine was hit.

The submarine came up astern and opened fire with a deck gun. Twenty-eight shells were fired, some hitting the ship.

The fire was returned with a 6 inch gun mounted on the after deck of the Honduras. Thirty shots were fired. The U-boat suddenly ceased firing and drew away, giving evidence of having been hit.

FEDERAL TROOPS GUARD BIG BRIDGES

Ninth Coast Artillery Will Be Distributed Along Rivers Under Orders of Gen. Wood.

Stamford, Conn., Feb. 17. The Ninth company, coast artillery corps, fully equipped for active service, left here today for guard duty at the important railway and highway bridges along the Connecticut coast from Coscob to New London and along the Housatonic and Connecticut rivers. Orders for the service were issued by direction of Governor Holcomb, who acted upon the request of Major General Wood, commanding the department of the east.

CALL FOR BOY SCOUTS.

New York, Feb. 16.—Six hundred thousand boy scouts throughout the country have been ordered by the national council of their organization to prepare for active service in the event of war.

ELECT NEWSPAPER MAN.

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Feb. 16.—Freeman Conaway, owner of the Mason City Times, has been elected secretary of the Cedar Rapids Commercial club. He will assume his duties at once.

TOLL OF PLUNGER.

London, Feb. 16. Lloyds announces the British steamer Longspar, 2,777 tons; the sailing ship Percy Roy, 110 tons and a trawler have been sunk.

The British steamer Margarita, 375 tons gross, and two trawlers have been sunk.

The sinking of the British steamer Greeland, of 1,757 tons, is also announced by Lloyds. The crew was landed.

The British steamer Kyrunsti has been sunk.

Lundendorff, Enemy of U. S. Rules Germany: Hopes to Beat England in Three Months

Paris, Feb. 17.—Americans arriving in the French capital today from Berlin who were in a position to see what was taking place behind the screen regard General von Lundendorff, the first quartermaster general of the German imperial army, as the most vital person in the small group surrounding Emperor William responsible for the German policy.

The real reason for the deportation of the Teutons the American arrivals say, appears to be that General von Lundendorff's plans preconceived the retirement from the greater part of France and Belgium to shorten lines if forced to do so by the offensive this year of the entente allies.

General von Lundendorff, the American says, appears to be the brain that conceives the military plans while Field Marshal von Hindenburg, chief of the general staff, is the hand that executes them. General von Lundendorff is described as being of a military mind rather than of a political one.

Yet his immense influence in the entourage of the German emperor gives him a voice in purely political and foreign policies.

Beat England in 90 Days.

Americans whose business in Berlin was to study the springs of action of the German government, say they know that General von Lundendorff dislikes Americans and has contempt for their military strength, that is while aware of their potentialities, yet so far as any organization and application of them is possible they could not in the opinion of the German quartermaster general be brought to bear upon the present war which in his behalf will be finished before the United States could get into action.

The conviction in the small group responsible for the acts of German government appears to be that the submarine war can be successful against England within three months. That in any event it is a powerful arm for immediate and continuous use until the war is ended. Consequently it will be used for all it is worth.

Man Power Shortage.

The military situation in Germany according to the same source of information, is regarded as beginning to be affected by the exhaustion of man power. Every man in the country between the ages of 18 and 45 has been gathered for the army and replaced by men physically unfit for active service or below or beyond the age limits.

The German losses in dead officially placed by the last public announcements as having reached slightly beyond 1,000,000 officers and men, is according to cautious estimates 200,000 or 400,000 beyond that figure. The military service of the German army has been very good and because of this a high percentage of wounded soldiers has been able to return to the active army. Yet the number of permanently disabled among the wounded probably will bring their losses considerably beyond the 2,000,000 mark.

BERLIN HOLDS U. S. CONSULS

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17. Inquiry has been sent to Germany through the Spanish embassy regarding the delay in the departure of the second train load of former American officials from Germany for Switzerland. It was announced officially today. The train should have left Munich early this week, carrying the 86 former American consuls and their families and an unknown number of other Americans.

Ministers Are Silent.

The arrival of the second train load of consuls and Minister Stovall at Berne, neither of whom has given any more detail than "some" in the past week. Several requests for information have been sent to Berne, but no decoded replies have arrived. It is believed here that Germany is holding the train and may permit it to leave Switzerland shortly.

CUBAN REBELS HOLD ALL OF SANTIAGO

Menocal Claims Navy Remains Loyal and That Bandit Bands Are Being Pursued

New York, Feb. 17. — All officials have been deposed and virtually the whole of the province of Santiago de Cuba is in possession of the insurrectionists, according to a cable message which Dr. Orestes Ferrara, speaker of the Cuban house of representatives, and Dr. Ramundo Cabrera, now in this country as special representatives of the liberal party of Cuba, announced they had received last night. The messages, they said, were signed by Luis Mola, military governor of Santiago, and R. Fernandez, commander of the guard.

Menocal Navy Loyal?

Havana, Feb. 16.—In spite of a plot against the government discovered among certain members of the Havana police force, there was a more optimistic tone in government circles, due to the loyalty of the navy, several vessels of which made their escape from Santiago, and also the belief that Santiago soon will be recovered from the revolutionists by the government.

Telegraphic communication has been restored with the province of Camaguay, where heavy fighting is reported between 800 loyal troops against an unknown number of revolutionists. Baldomero Acosta and Pino Guerro, with their bands of revolutionists, are still making for the Pinar Del Rio hills.

Returns Held Up.

According to an official announcement made at the palace, difficulty has been encountered in communication with several districts of Santa Clara province where the elections were held Thursday. Three of the districts heard from, Purial, Ranchuelo and Guadalupe, showed that the conservatives have obtained a majority over the liberals.

INFANTILE PLAGUE SWEEPS WEST VIRGINIA

Fairmount, W. Va., Feb. 16.—The Rockefeller institute will investigate the infantile paralysis epidemic in Fairmount, according to an announcement made here today. Through the efforts of former United States Sen. Clarence M. Watson, Dr. Simon Flexner, head of the institute, has agreed to send a representative here to assist in stamping out the disease and ascertaining the cause.

SCARLET FEVER EPIDEMIC.

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Feb. 16.—Owing to a contagion of scarlet fever originating among students of Cornell college, public meetings have been abandoned at Mt. Vernon. It is probable that one of the public schools will be ordered closed today.

ALLIES' LINE THROWN BACK

Berlin, Feb. 17.—The Germans began an attack in the Champagne yesterday. The war office announces that they captured ground half a mile deep on a front of one and one-half miles, and took 558 prisoners.

Heavy fighting occurred on Hill 185.

The official French staff map gives a Hill 185 in the Champagne two-thirds of a mile east of Tahure, which probably is the point referred to in the German statement. It is on the high road between Somme Py and Cernay, about 30 miles west of Verdun and 30 miles east of Rheims.

The extent of ground gained and the number of prisoners taken mark this as the most important battle of the year indicating that the Germans may have begun an offensive campaign. The German attack was made at the same section as that selected for inaugurating the offensive in 1916 which was begun on the Verdun front on February 21.

YARROWDALE MEN FREED

Washington, Feb. 17. Unofficial advices that Germany has released the 72 American seamen, held prisoners, which were brought in by the prize ship Yarrowdale reached officials today just as a peremptory demand was about to be made on the Berlin government for the freeing of the Americans. A note embodying this demand had been prepared and approved by President Wilson, but if official confirmation of Germany's reported action is received, it is probable the communication will not be dispatched. It is said also that the German government has modified its orders which would have compelled retirement from Belgium of American relief workers.

Many serious problems yet remain, however, and were to be discussed at today's cabinet meeting. Prominent among them was the congestion of freight along the Atlantic seaboard.

PRESIDENT MAY ASK ADDED POWER SOON

Wants Legislation Allowing Him Blanket Authority Before Present Session of Congress Ends.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—The approach of the end of the session has created a situation which makes it necessary, if the president gets means and authority from congress to protect American rights at sea, for him to take the matter up with the House and Senate soon. Presumably when he does take it up he will address congress, but the necessary legislation could be initiated without this. If the matter should lie dormant until the last week of the session it is uncertain whether the needed legislation could be passed.

Delaying tactics by the opposition might kill it. For this reason many expect a decisive move by the president within the next week unless tension is relieved. The president could call congress back in extra session in case of necessity. However, he does not want an extra session if one is not essential.

ONE CENT LETTER LOST.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 16.—Proposed increased postage rates on newspapers and magazines and provision for one cent postage or drop letters finally were eliminated from the postal bills today on a point of order by Senator Lodge that they had no place in such a measure under the Senate rules. This action is expected to end the fight at this session for the provision.

ASKS 9,000,000,000 FRANCS FOR THE WAR

Minister of Finance Wants Increase of 900,000,000 Over Amount Last Voted.

Paris, Feb. 17.—Alexandred Ribot, minister of finance, today asked the French chamber of deputies to appropriate 9,574,000,000 francs to cover the government expenditures for the second quarter of the present year. This was an increase of 900,000,000 francs over the amount of the appropriations for the first quarter.

CLEAR LAKE MAN BIGAMIST VICTIM?

C. F. Berthelson, Farmer-Capitalist, Causes Arrest of His Wife—She Took $5,000?

Chicago, Ill., Feb. 17. — Because of one husband too many and an overwhelming desire for bright lights, Edith Harkey-Bethelson departed from Clear Lake, Ia., some weeks ago. With her, it is alleged, went $5,000 of her putative husband's money. She was arrested in a Detroit cabaret and will return to Chicago to face a bigamy charge. She scraped acquaintance with C. F. Berthelson a Clear Lake farmer and financier last July through an advertisement in a matrimonial publication.

Berthelson answered the advertisement. They met in Chicago. There Berthelson's subjugation was complete — so complete that he failed to wonder at the continued presence of one George Carson, also known as Charles Clampit, supposedly a stepbrother.

Berthelson and Miss Harkey were married in Chicago August 9, last with the stepbrother as best man. The wedding trip included the Catskills, New York, Boston and the Thousand Islands. Wife just couldn't bear to be separated from her dear stepbrother, so Carson became a portion of the entourage—at Berthelson's expense. When the family returned to Clear Lake Carson matriculated as star boarder.

Soon the cows and chickens lost their appeal and one week ago Mrs. Berthelson and Carson departed. Berthelson says $5,000 disappeared at the same time.

A letter brought the news to Berthelson that the bright lights had called and Mrs. Berthelson and Carson ("By the way, my real husband") would not return.

Berthelson came to Chicago, enlisted the aid of Detective Sergeant William O'Neill and caused circulars to be sent to all cities in the middle states asking the arrest of Mrs. Berthelson for bigamy.

Detroit detectives located the woman in a downtown cabaret.

In Detroit the woman denied she was a bigamist. She said that her first husband's name was Beirsdorf. He was killed in an automobile accident in 1916. She married Clampit when she says, was never divorced from his first wife. She married Berthelson last August.

RAIDER SUNK; TWO ESCAPE?

Rio Janeiro, Feb. 17.—An officer of the British cruiser Glasgow has confirmed reports of a recent naval battle off Fernando De Noronha, 125 miles off the east extremity of Brazil, according to the newspaper Rua. The Glasgow received a report of the fighting through a wireless message from the British cruiser Amethyst, which alone gave battle to the German raiders.

Before 6 o'clock in the evening the Amethyst sighted some steamers which she signaled to come nearer. They did so. Then it was seen that these vessels, not two, as at first supposed, but three large steamers, were clearing for action. Almost immediately they opened fire.

The Amethyst returned the fire and steamed toward the enemy, whereupon the raiders took to flight, but continued firing.

The real fight occurred near Fernando De Noronha. One of the raiders, seriously hit, was observed to be sinking. The others escaped. Night prevented the Amethyst from ascertaining to what extent they had been damaged. One raider is believed to have been beached in a battered condition.

The Amethyst suffered slight damage.

U. S. TO KEEP UP WORK OF BELGIAN RELIEF

Surprise Caused by Action of Germans in Rescinding Order Against Americans.

London, Feb. 17.—Representatives of the American Commission for Relief in Belgium will not withdraw from the occupied portions of Belgium and northern France as previously arranged, but will remain for the present, it is now stated.

The commission received a dispatch yesterday from its office in Rotterdam stating that at a meeting held in Brussels the German authorities announced that all representatives of the commission might remain in Belgium and northern France on the same footing as heretofore. Present at this meeting were Baron von de Lancken, civil governor of Brussels, the American and Spanish ministers, representatives of the Belgium relief commission and the Belgian national committee.

FOUR MORE SHIPS SAIL.

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 16.—Four more ships sailed from this port for points in or near the war zone. They were the British steamship Strathdon, bound for Gibraltar with a general cargo of merchandise, the Cyrienne, British, for Barrow, with 2,400,000 gallons of benzine, the Joaquin Mumbru, Spanish for Barcelona, with lumber, and the Drammen, ren Norwegian, with grain for Gibraltar.

The tonnage of the four vessels aggregated 10,211.

MEXICAN SLAYS BOYHOOD FRIENDS; WOMEN MAY DIE

Mob of Men Armed to Funeral Crowd Is Slain by Villa Band. Spurning U. S. Guard.

CAPTURED ON U. S. SIDE

Widow of Peterson Is Dying — Wife of Jensen and Mother of Acord Under Physician's Care.

Hachita, N. M., Feb. 17. Mrs. Andrew P. Peterson, who was widowed when the Mexican ranch raiders killed her husband late Monday, was in a critical condition early today following the receipt of news at Peterson's ranch home of the murder of her husband. Mrs. Peterson is about to become a mother and she was attended throughout the night by physicians and nurses who feared she could not live 24 hours.

Mrs. Burton Jensen, whose husband was also killed by the raiders, fainted when told of the triple murder, and is under a physician's care. Jensen left two small children. Hugh Acord's aged mother was prostrated from the shock of her son's death. Acord was unmarried. Peterson was 39 years old, Jensen was 32 and Acord 22.

The Mormon colony here set aside today as a period of mourning and prayer for the dead ranchers and all business was suspended.

There is doubt as to whether the raid was led by Prudencio Miranda or Silvestro Quevedo. As all survivors were made prisoners, it has been impossible for the army and civil officers to determine who was in command, although it was generally admitted the band was operating under Salazar's orders.

Killed Boyhood Friend.

If Quevedo led the raid he killed the companion of his boyhood as he was reared at Colonia, Diaz, where the three victims were born and they attended school with Quevedo, it was said by a Mormon church official.

Armed Mormon men and women have been leaving here all morning for the Campbell ranch 20 miles southeast of here, to attend the triple funeral of the victims of Monday's raid on the Corner ranch. The funeral services will be held late this afternoon. Lieut. Col. I. C. Waterman offered the mourners an armed escort to Campbell's ranch but this was refused. All are heavily armed and the procession was led by Lem Spillsbury, the Pershing scout who found the bodies late yesterday below the border.

It was first planned to bring the bodies to Hachita today, but this was abandoned when couriers arrived late last night with the information that decomposition had set in. It became known today that but one of the three men was armed. Monday Acord carried a 25-30 rifle. There is no doubt that the men were captured on the American side of the border.

Fought For Life.

According to the story told by Spillsbury and companions, each victim had been shot in the head several times. Acord's head had been mutilated with a machete. The clothing had been torn from all three and there were numerous cuts and bruises, indicating a desperate struggle of the Americans against heavy odds.

Border towns are fearing a repetition of the Columbus raid March 9 last.

Ed (Bunk) Spencer, the American negro ranch foreman for the E. K. Warren & Sons interests, who reached the border late Tuesday with a demand for $5,000 in gold, also brought with him a verbal statement which he claimed Jose Ynez Salazar made to him at Ojitas, Chihuahua, the purport of which was that he, Salazar, intended to raid an American city or town on the border which would surpass Villa's raid at Columbus, N. M., and in which all "men of gringoland will have to take care," but that women and children would be protected.

GUARD TROOPS LEAVE.

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 16.—As the result of the raid on the Corner ranch and the activity of Salazar's forces south of the border, American patrols in the border territory west of Columbus are to be strengthened, General Funston announced today. Although bandits are showing greater activity in the border section than for several months there is no indication that the return movement of state troops will be halted.

LEADER OF "ROUGH RIDERS" IS DEAD

Col. Melvin E. Grigsby, of Sioux Falls, Was a South Dakota Pioneer.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Feb. 17.—Col. Melvin E. Grigsby, of Sioux Falls, pioneer South Dakotan, well known in political life and famous as one of the two leaders of Spanish-American war rough riders, died last night in Birmingham, Ala.

Col. Melvin Grigsby was one of the best known pioneer residents of South Dakota. For a period of 40 years he had resided in the territory and state, and during the greater part of that time had been a prominent figure in the state. He held positions of trust, among them the attorney generalship of South Dakota.

Grigsby was the originator of the rough rider idea, and during the Spanish-American war commanded a regiment of rough riders. He served in the union army throughout the civil war, and was one of the best known living veterans of that war.

Colonel Grigsby was appointed United States attorney for the district of Alaska by President Roosevelt during his second term.

ARRANGEMENTS PUSHED.

Washington, Feb. 16.—Details of the arrangement for examining eastbound trans-Atlantic shipping at Halifax, N. S., instead of at Kirkwall, are being worked out rapidly through exchanges between the British admiralty the Canadian authorities and the British embassy here.

ENCOURAGE LOCATION OF INDUSTRIES

Do we want more industries, more people, more wealth in this town? If so, here are a few vital points to consider

The live town is always on the lookout to add another industry to its list

Industries make work, and work attracks workers, and of workers the town is built.

A manufactoring plant added to your town means a positive addition to the earning capacity of every citizen of the town. So that, in encouraging new industries you are not only patriotically aiding your community, but you are directly promoting your own fortunes.

We have seen a few so-called business men who are satisfied with the population of their community -didn't want any more people, didn't want any more trade, didn't want any more money

Those towns were dead and did not know it but the community DID know it

The town that makes a determined effort to attrack men and industries will GET them. Its facilities may be limited; its wealth may not be great; its situation may even not be advantageous, But a LIVE PUBLIC SPIRIT - an appreciation of every added asset---is the feature that most attracts the intelligent business man who is seeking a location.

No manufacturer wants to conduct a business in a dead town. It matters not that the town may not use a dollar's worth of his goods The very atmosphere of the dead town is like a wet blanket on his business.

The town with pep, with ginger, with hustle, injects the same qualities into every business within its environs. Screwed business men know this, and hunt for just such towns.

If we would grow as a town we must show that we WANT growth And we must offer INDUCEMENTS.

For instance -

We want to land a manufacturing plant. We go after it. The managers stipulate for a convenient site donated We donate it We secure the plant.

Now, did the donation of the site secure that plant? It DID NOT That was the smallest consideration The SPIRIT that PROMPTED the donation was the magnet that did the pulling The managers of the enterprise wanted to locate in a community where that spirit ruled They could afford to pay for a site but there was no way of determining whether the community really WANTED the enterprise located in its midst.

And thus it goes on and on

It is not the bonus, or the site, or even the exemption from taxes that is the real drawing power in locating new enterprises that are found in building up and developing our communities

It is the SPIRIT BEHIND these actions It is the BROAD and JUST view taken by the CITIZENS of the community a view that RECOGNIZES the VALUE of the enterprise so that CONCEDES its USEFULNESS as a FACTOR in the community.

We are all human We like to be appreciated at what we feel and know to be our real worth Even the hardest headed business man among us is susceptible to a just appreciation of his worth to the community.

So when we show to industry that we WANT it when we say to it, by our words and actions, that we APPRECIATE it and value it at its TRUE WORTH it feels that it is the welcome conceives a desire to be among us and of us.

Our town will be as our genuine ambition It will be as progressive as we are. And the spirit of the population we attrack will be OF THE SAME KIND as our own spirit

You never find a live person under a slab in a grave yard. And towns that are collections of people and enterprises from which those people live-

WHAT ARE WE?

SCHOOL AND COMMUNITY LIFE

Probably no other agency of man's creating has such far-reaching power for good in the community as good, live, up-to-date schools.

The time is long past in this country when "just any old school" will serve the purpose.

In no age of the world was business competition ever so keen and relentless as at the present, and never before was it so imperative that our young brains be trained and developed to their full capacity

Nothing is truer today than that a community is known by the quality of its schools, for it is a fact that the school is a perfect barometer for the community. As the community, so the school; and conversely, as the school, so the community.

But aside from the mere educational considerational, a progressive school in a community exerts its influence in other directions frequently very little regarded by the community generally,

In the first place, a real, live, progressive school is never found in a dead community. As well expect mushrooms from a barren soil as to expect educational perfection where none is expected or demanded.

So, then, the really progressive school presupposes a like spirit in the community.

Men of observation and intelligence have this fact in mind when seeking a location for a home.

Probably the two first questions asked by nine out of every ten home seekers are "what of your schools?" and "what of your churches?"

The really desirable citizens, with a family of sons and daughters to rear, is always suspicious of the town without good school facilities. He is aware of the fact that the mere absence of these facilities argues a lack of interest on the part of the community at large, and rightly refuses to cast his lot with them

So that, from a material point of view, the higher we build our schools, the stronger their drawing power in the material things of life

We have said that the school is the barometer for the community. It is pre-eminently so from a standpoint of morals.

The old adage, "As the father, so the son," is fast losing its force in this day. Instead, we are tending to coin a counteradage, "As the son, so the father." So that, as we build up our schools year by year to a higher and higher state of efficiency, they in turn are building up the individual numbers of the community, gradually trimming off crudeness and coarseness, elevating the character and generally remodeling and revitalizing the entire body politic.

Then what of the schools of this community? Are they our first consideration? They should be

What other interest in life have you, reader, that can for a moment compare with the welfare of your children?

And what other influence in the child's life is there to compare with the welfare of your children?

And what other influence in the child's life is there to compare with that of his school?

Get this fact firmly fixed in your brain and heart As your school, so will your child be. The child will be a faithful product of the school that moulds his character.

Are we afraid to invest a few hundred dollars, or a few thousand in modern school facilities?

No community ever yet made the investment, that it was not returned many fold Viewed from a purely financial standpoint, it is the safest investment we can possibly make.

There is absolutely no excuse for a poor school in any community of self-supporting men and women.

The community that refuses to give of its best to its schools, will find itself as the years go by gradually losing in the race of life.

And the people who deem no sacrifice too great to be made for their children's welfare will year by year climb higher.

What of this community?

Iowa Germans Have Trouble

Cedar Falls, Ia., Feb 13.—Rumors of a radically un-American statement, by some citizens in the little town of Berlin, over in Grundy county, that have brought United States secret service men there with threats to take naturalization papers away from German born residents confiscate their property and deport them to Germany, were received in Cedar Falls today.

The citizenry of the town and the surrounding countryside, as the name Berlin implies, is practically all German-born or of German parentage and the prevailing sentiment since the outbreak of the European war has been strongly pro-German.

Reports today from Berlin say that several citizens of that town recently signed their names to a paper mailed to President Wilson at Washington in which it was stated that in case of war with Germany, Wilson "need not bother on us" to fight against the fatherland.

It is said this paper, which was liberally signed, brought to Berlin very soon a secret service man who visited the signers. He is said to have told them that henceforth they would be under constant government surveillance, and that another such un-American move would result in their being disfranchised and deported to Germany, their property to be confiscated by the government.

That there has been some stir among the German citizenry of Grundy county recently is indicated by in carefully worded editorials appearing in current issues of the Grundy Center newspapers the county seat of a county that is largely German-American.

Practically every family in Grundy county has from one to a dozen relatives fighting for Germany in the European battlefields and the pro-German sentiment when expressed is usually of the most intense nature.

GOODELL

J. Brennen returned from Des Moines, Saturday. While there he bought a new moving picture machine to be installed in the opera house.

There was great excitement in town Friday when it was discovered that the north elevator was on fire. It had gained such headway before it was discovered that nothing could save it. It took a crowd of men all night to save the lumber yards, stock yard and depot. Several thousand bushels of grain were destroyed.

Arthur Ruka and Florence Thompson were married at Belmond, Wednesday.

Timely Tips for the Week

Don't wait until spring time comes to begin conditioning the horses for work.

See that that the work harness is repaired, oiled and made ready for spring work.

Now is the time to rid your herd of lice.

The early hotbed should be constructed now. Prepare the manure in advance.

It pays to advertise and no advertising is better for a sale than space in your home paper.

Thumps are prevented by sunlight, exercise and not too heavy feeding. Keep the pigs "on the go."

A warm, dry shed for the old ewe is preparedness for early lambs.

Rev. Rolfing Dies

Rev. W. H. Rolfing, who was well known here and especially to German Methodists, died suddenly in Sioux City, Wednesday, February 7, of heart failure. This news came as a shock to all who knew him, as he was well known here and highly respected.

At the present time he was Dist. Superintendent of the Sioux City District which also includes Garner and Hayfield, as well as Klemme and Germantown, having assumed this work last September. This was the second time that he served in this capacity. It was during his term of office and especially through his efforts the district camp ground, located at this place, was purchased and built up. Mr. Rolfing was a born leader and a pulpiteer of extraordinary ability, and his death means a great loss to the branch of the church that he served.

He preached 12½ years without intermission. His first pastorate was here at Garner where he preached in the old Concord Court House located where the campground tabernacle is now.

After brief services in Sioux City, in which many pastors notably Dr. Craig and Dean Hilmer of Morning Side College took part, the remains were taken to La Crosse, Wis., where the deceased formerly had lived in the capacity as pastor of first church and also as Dist. Supt. of the Charles City district.

Funeral services were held Saturday, Feb 10, 1917. Many ministers attended. Rev. A. W. Gauger of the local church went Friday to attend the funeral services, returning Sunday afternoon, to be here for the funeral of Miss Elizabeth Wellemeyer, whose remains were buried here on Monday.—Garner Democrat.

Farewell Surprise

Last Friday evening Mr. Bert Goodell and wife were decoyed over to the home of Mr. and Mrs. George George Wilson where their friends and neighbors came upon them about fifty strong with a farewell surprise. The evening was spent very pleasantly together, playing games and singing. After all were tired and as the clock struck the midnight hour, a bounteous lunch was served by the guests who had made ample provision for something over sixty hungry people.

The community regrets very much to lose these two splendid neighbors but all join in wishing them success in other parts, and also that they may find as good neighbors in their new home as they had around the Wayside school house.

May our serious loss be some other commmunity's rich gain.

A Friend.

THE WIN ONE CLASS

The Win One class of the English M. E. church had its regular monthly social meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Gimer last Wednesday evening. On account of the and deep snow there were only twenty one of the young people present, but all report a delightful evening.

The meeting opened with songs and prayer, followed by a short business session, after which games and laughter made up the evenings program, until a late hour when a splendid lunch was enjoyed by all present.

The last number on the program was some taffy which brought some hearty laughs, some stuck up fingers, ask Elvin how he likes taffy.

Twelve o'clock brought the parting hour, at which time all thanked the good hostess for the good hostess for the splendid evening in her pleasant home and we all hope that the Gimers will invite us again some time.

AVERY CENTER

Mrs. W. L. Sherwood is very much much improved. Miss Griggs is still staying with her.

SEVEN YEARS AGO AND TO-DAY

Then He Had 6 Mules, $660 Cash and Some Equity—Today He Has $20,000 and Owns 2 Sections of Land.

The story of the wealth of Western Canada cannot be told too often the facts will bear repeating. And in this story it is hoped that advantage will be taken of the great opportunities that Western Canada offers by those who are today struggling for a bare existence, by those who are occupying lands, high in price and high in rentals.

From grain, live stock and dairying in 1916, there was a return from the three Prairie Provinces of $258,000,000, or an increase of four million dollars over 1915 and 118 million dollars over 1911.

A prominent Trust Company says: Some of our contract holders have paid off their purchase money on lands they bought a year ago out of this years crop alone. What one man can do another can do. Thousands of Southern Alberta farmers harvested an average of 30 to 50 bushels of No 1 wheat to the acre. These farmers have more real money to spend than any other people on the American Continent. J D Johnston of Bladsworth, Sask left Johnson County, Kansas, seven years ago. When he left he had $660 in cash six mules some settler's effects and an equity in some prairie land. Mr Johnston tells his story:

"In my seven years' residence in Saskatchewan I have raised seven good crops the value of this years crop alone being Twenty thousand dollars. I now own Two Sections of improved land, 17 horses and mules, 40 cattle a large steam thresher and a full line of farm machinery."

We have made five trips to Kansas, one trip to the Pacific Coast and return. We have enjoyed the society of a class of people than whom none better can be found. The climate is healthful and invigorating. The soil is deep and productive, well adapted for the production of the best quality and large yields of all cereals and vegetables wild and tame grasses. It is an excellent stock country.

The question of taxes is one that appeals with considerable weight coming from a man like Mr Johnston the right weight should be given the answer. He says:

"The tax system especially commends itself to me as being simple, reasonable and just. All direct taxes are based on the land at its appraised market value, exclusive of improvements. Improvements are exempt from taxation. This tends to discourage the holding of lands by speculators who reap profits only by advancement in price created by the growth and development of the locality in which the land is situated. A tax of the local field assessor. It tends to encourage the settler to rear substantial improvements upon their land without penalizing them in the form of taxation. It encourages the erection of buildings and the possession of other personal property necessary to the comfort of the country.

"I believe myself entirely capable to record my vote on election of members of the Government and members of the Provincial Assembly who on questions of school improvements and school matters the franchise is exercised by ratepayers irrespective of citizenship.

"The people are enterprising school districts are good Education is free and compulsory. Military service voluntary. Patriotic fervor unsurpassed. Law and order the rule and crime the rare exception. It is the land of good schools telephones, grain elevators broad fertile acres good citizenship and abounding opportunities for the industrious man or woman of good morals in short the land of promise and fulfillment. I know of no better anywhere."

"Why does Mr Grabcoin give a recital once or twice a year? She has no voice for music."

"It's true but Mrs Grabcoin is the only woman in our town who can afford to pay a grand opera star $1,000 for two or three songs and she feels in duty bound to remind her neighbors of that fact."

A MINISTER'S CONFESSION

Rev. W. H. Warner, Myersville Md., writes: "My trouble was sciatica. My back was affected and took the form of lumbago. I also had neuralgia cramps in my muscles, pressure or sharp pain on the top of my head, and nervous dizzy spells. I had other symptoms showing my kidneys were at fault, so I took Dodd's Kidney Pills. They were the means of saving my life. I write to say that your medicine restored me to perfect health." Be sure and get "DODD'S," the name with the three D's for diseased, disordered, deranged kidneys; just as Rev. Warner did, no similarly named article will do.—Adv.

new."

He hurried through his breakfast and went to the office building near the capitol. The one room he had occupied at first had grown now into three and he had found it necessary to employ two stenographers in order to keep up with the correspondence that poured in upon him from every state in the union. His mail had been stacked on his desk. The first letter he picked up was on Senate stationery. It was signed by Thomas J. Mallon and read as follows:

Washington, D.C.
Owing to the radical difference between our views on certain political questions which is of so fundamental a character and because of the rather personal line of the letter I am returning your communication unopened. I feel sure you do not realize the embarrassment that might follow our meeting in a social way anywhere. Consequently you do doubt will observe the necessity that I shall in the future avoid the possibility of any such encounter.

I have communicated to my daughter my views on this subject.

Very truly yours, etc.

Without reading it twice, he tore it into small pieces, throwing the fragments into the waste paper basket. His face did not change expression. There was no nervousness in his hands or in his movements. He looked up Waller's apartment telephone number and called for it. While he waited for the response, he looked through the window to the gorgeously colored foliage in the capitol grounds. His attitude was that of any man who uses the telephone on a matter of routine but somewhat important business.

"Hello!" came Waller's voice.

"Good morning," Smith replied. "Sorry to bother you so early in the day, Waller. Fact is, I didn't stop to think of the hour. But there's something I want you to find out for me."

"Go ahead!" Sleepiness was in Waller's tone. "What is it?"

"Get a line on why Senator Mallon is so bitter toward me."

"But can I?"

"Certainly you can."

"All right. I'll begin on it today."

"That's the man! And I want it as soon as I can get it."

"That's me!"

"And, Waller, do it quietly."

"How do you mean, quietly?"

"I don't want him or anybody —anybody —to know that I care to find out about it."

"Leave it to me," Waller assured him. "Say, where have you been?"

"New York."

"Anything doing?"

"Yes. Meet me in Mannersley's committee rooms at 2 this afternoon."

"Mannersley's?" Waller's astonishment made the receiver rattle.

"Yes—at 2."

few minutes before noon, she looked at the golden brown and russet red of the trees which stretched like two big folds of fairy embroidery, on both sides of the street. It was a day when the world seemed awash with gold. A touring car, crowded with girls and young men overtook and sped past her. On the sidewalk at a corner, an Italian ground his organ while golden haired, freshly dressed children danced to the music.

"In the aggregate," she thought, "on the whole, the world is always lovely, always beautiful as it is today. But, to make up that whole, how much of pain there is, how much of suffering!"

Her father's words at the breakfast table that morning still rang in her ears.

"I wrote to your friend Mr Smith yesterday, forbidding him the house."

What an outrage that was! Why should anybody, her father even, presume to say who should be her associates or who should not? Of course it would be impossible for him to come to the house. She could subject neither him nor herself to the awkwardness of it, but, equally, of course she would see him quite frequently elsewhere.

Why had she committed herself so utterly in her own heart? Why had she accepted, without argument, the fact that she loved him? Suppose she were called on to explain her feeling — what would she say? She dismissed these reflections as rapidly as they came. She loved him. And, since she did love him, she could see no reason for trying to disguise the fact to herself. She was like that.

Late the night before, with her brain reeling from the intensity and constancy with which she had reviewed and re-reviewed that scene with him when he had refused her his confidence, the truth had come to her as a certainty, a conviction. She knew now. Nothing could have shaken her belief in the truth of what she knew. She knew, and she loved him. For her, those were the only two really important things in the world: her belief in him, and her love for him. She remembered a famous evangelist having said to her once: "There are only two big things in this life, Miss Mallon—the things we do to those who love us, and the things that are done to us by those whom we love." That had expressed her philosophy exactly. She was going now to call for John Smith at his office.

As far as she herself was concerned, her own intentions, her own trust in the future nothing annoyed her. That which did attack her happiness was the fear of what he, through his quixotic ideas, his conscientious regard for her, might consider it his duty to do. Her memory of the grief that he had felt in refusing her what she had asked, the story of his life, was vivid before her. She feared to distress him again.

Edith Mallon was an unusual woman. Old Senator Watrus called her "the most wonderful among women." Washington is a city famous for its men rather than its women. The women, surrounded by affairs of state, immersed in a flood of political gossip, breathing always the atmosphere of national affairs, seldom make an effort to study and understand the very thing in which their husband live and move and have their being. Edith was one of the two women in Washington who read the Congressional Record every morning. Her mornings she kept to herself. Senators and representatives charged with the framing of legislation affecting the humanities better working hours for women, better health conditions, legislation affecting food, the betterment of children's conditions found her a valuable adviser, sought her opinions on details which many hours of public hearing had not made clear. She was far more than a delightful partner at a dance, a center of brilliance at a dinner, a woman whom men sought in marriage. She was a student. And like Cholliewollie she knew her Washington. Cholliewollie who knew everybody, had told her once, at the end of an interview with her for his paper:

"You'd better look out for this woman suffrage stuff. Some day it will result in defeating your revered father and making a United States senator out of you."

In addition to the special and imperious attraction John Smith had for her, she realized to the full the greatness of the work he already had done. His conquest of society as Waller had pointed out, had been complete. That had been due entirely to the charm of his personality and the delightfulness of his wit. People had accepted him at face value. He was he that was enough. And when the gossip had started about his mysterious past old Mrs Grover who always suspected any strange man of being a chauffeur in disguise, had said: "If his past is as charming as his present it has no terrors for me." a sentiment that was received as an accurate description of the whole city's attitude toward him.

But the impression he had made on men, on officialdom had been far more remarkable. Congress is like any other large assemblage of men. It is docile. The small group, a little band of leaders in the House another in the Senate. It must be so. Unless it were nothing ever could be accomplished. And the leaders in regard to outside considerations never discuss anything other than the legislative program laid down in the conferences between themselves and the president. That is the disregard of the popular voice, that vague, powerful, irresistable thing which they call "public opinion," begins to cry like a wanderer in the wilderness. Even then they disregard it until it reaches a key which shows that, unless it is answered, vengeance will be visited on the responsible party at the polls.

She knew this as well as any of the lawmakers knew it. She knew, also, that the prohibition agitation had been for 30 years a cry in the wilderness, a call that congress had disregarded. Since she had met Smith, she had studied that problem as thoroughly as she had gone into many others. She knew the reluctance of any politician to touch the question. She remembered the motto in Washington:

If you're for liquor off goes your head; if you're against it, off it goes. She knew that the bulk of the members had proceeded on the policy, the convenient policy of saying: "This is nothing for the federal government to interfere with. Let the states or the various communities deal with it as they see fit." Of course it was cowardice, she argued, when makers of the law kept their hands off what they knew was an evil and excused their apathy by contentions that contained no common sense. But the lethargy had continued.

Then when Smith had appeared, his first attack had been on what he termed "the hypocrisy, the smug slumber of congress." He had called them cowards openly, had stated in his speeches and interviews that only cowards would refuse to fight a wrong that was patent to all. And what was far more effective he had told them, in terms startlingly clear, of the woe alcohol brought to the people, of the waste it put on the country. He had made he public see the individual sorrows of the burdened women, the pathetic ruin of the men. And, as is always the case in such an agitation, the response had come slowly at first—so slowly that it had hardly dimmed the smiles of derision with which he had been welcomed to Washington and then in increasing volume until members had begun to "sound out" the sentiment in their districts and the whisky interests had sent into Washington a regiment of their smoothest, suavest men to act as lobbyists.

Now the fight was on. Only Mannersley and a majority of his committee stood in the way, refusing to report to the House the resolution authorizing the constitutional amendment. The House could not act without anything before it. And Mannersley and his colleagues, for reasons known only to themselves, shut their ears to argument and sat, stubborn, unyielding, unreachable by the friends of prohibition, while Smith and the organizations in sympathy with him headed the country's clamor.

Edith, making this mental catalog of the marvelous work the man had done, was passing Lafayette park on Jackson Place when she caught sight of him on the sidewalk in front of her. The first idea that came into her mind was that he had never looked so electric, so so impregnable—was the word she hit on finally. She drew up longside of him.

"On such a morning," she invited, as he stepped forward to meet her, "and with such a chauffeur, won't you come with me?"

She thought he hesitated for a fractional moment. Then, stepping around to the other side of the machine, he opened the door and took his place beside her.

"Anywhere," he laughed, his eyes all compliment with such a chauffeur!"

In spite of her air of lightness, he saw immediately that she was troubled. He wondered if she knew of his having received the letter from her father.

"Where have you been?" she inquired as they bowled down between the White House and the state war and navy building toward Potomac park.

"I've just back from the British embassy," he explained.

"And the secret mission?"

"The ambassador wanted to tell me that Lord Kitchener is about to issue a proclamation asking the people of Great Britain to cooperate in his plan to keep liquor out of the army on the continent. You know the ambassador got from me some months ago data about the physical effects of alcohol on the liver."

Isn't that splendid!" she applauded. "The Russians have come to the same way of thinking. The consul told me yesterday that the czar is much pleased with the effects of his order prohibiting vodka drinking while the military operations continue. He is so pleased with the benefits to the peasantry that he has instructed his advisers to draw up a financial scheme which will make the government independent of the revenue it now gets from vodka. He wants no more of it in Russia."

And yet," he said indignantly, "we Americans, who boast of our common sense submit to whisky!"

She turned the machine to the right past the Corcoran art gallery.

"Have you time for a run round the speedway?"

Her manner was suddenly quite grave.

"Oh, yes," he answered, looking at her keenly.

"There is something I want to talk to you about," she continued, "something that troubles me greatly."

"I think," he said, his voice warm with gratitude, "I know what it is."

But I am wondering," she mused gently, "what you will say."

She had turned sharply to the right again, taking the long, flat road that leads straight into the west and seems to run sheer against the Virginia foothills, the white columns of Arlington, and the flags of Fort Myer.

Is it," he asked, "so serious as that?"

Quite," she said, turning to him so that he saw all the grave loveliness of her face.

CHAPTER EIGHT.

He had intended to tell her of the thing his trip to New York had developed, but his thought of her trouble kept him silent for the moment.

"I got your father's letter —this morning," he said at last, seeking to make it easier for her.

He was wondering that she should be so friendly, so personally interested, toward him after his behavior two days before at her home.

There was a sharp little intake of her breath between her lips.

GIRLS! GIRLS! TRY IT, BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR

Make It Thick, Glossy, Wavy, Luxuriant and Remove Dandruff—Real Surprise for You.

Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a Danderine hair cleanse. Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt and excessive oil and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair.

Besides beautifying the hair at once, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair.

But what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use when you will actually see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair and lots of it, surely get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any store and just try it.—Adv.

Our Flag.

From the Cedar Rapids Gazette

Created to symbolize the demand of an enlightened people for freedom, next unfurled in war to protect the ... already won, then carried ... troops sent to place the wild and ... cally unpeopled land north of the Rio Grande under humane rule, once more unfurled to make the black man free and again to liberate an oppressed colony near our shores, never has the Stars and Stripes led a greedy people in unworthy cause.

Throughout Europe, in Asia and in Africa, and among the islands of the seven seas, it has been carried as the ... honorable business and friendly intercourse or as the rainbow of hope to famished and stricken peoples, proclaiming that mercy still lives and that the brotherhood of man is not forgotten as a poet's theme.

In Europe, especially on many occasions, in many states and among peoples of diverse races, tongues and creeds, that flag has floated over the advance guard of surgeons, physicians, nurses, dispensers of food, but never has it there floated over cannon and rifles, sword and bayonet. The people of all tongues beneath the sun could read the simple message of the Red, White and Blue and they have looked upon the stars in their blue field as on a scrap of heaven brought to earth as a pledge of love.

If, through no fault of ours, that flag must now be carried to the mouth of hell, if it must ruffle to the breeze that lifts the pennons of lust of power and hate of fellow man, if it must front again the banners of those who preach with word of mouth and by the power of steel that God made some men kings and some men slaves, we can do nothing else than follow where it leads. It will go from our shores in sorrow, deep and genuine. It will return in victory with fresh honors wraped in every fold.

It means to us today just what it meant to Washington from Valley Forge to Yorktown, just what it means from Philippi to Appomatox, just what it meant to those who dwelt in hut or palace in Cuba and the Philippines.

German Children Taught to Strafe.

It is rather hard for me to find out how the war is taught in the schools, as I don't speak German, but, as far as I can tell, it is different in different schools. They are not allowed to speak of peace, but the teachers read the newspapers to the pupils. Of course, what they read depends on the newspapers they take. In one school I know of, the children go through a short hate ceremony. When the teacher says "Gott strafe England," the pupils answer: "Gott strafe es." They are still taught English and French, but they are not allowed to use a word of either language outside of their lesson.

Cabbage Stuffed With Sausage.

Mix the very best fresh pork sausage meat with an equal part of cracker or dry bread crumbs. Prepare a small cabbage head by removing the outer leaves. Wash thoroughly, then cut a thick piece off the top. This to serve as a lid. Scoop out the inside of the cabbage, leaving a thin wall. Stuff the cabbage bread with the sausage mixture and place the top on. Tie in a pudding bag and boil until done. Serve hot and slice right through cabbage and sausage. Serve with baked apples. Save the inside portion of the cabbage for cold slaw the next day.

Appropriations by congress will not meet the need. There must be a ruthless cutting of red tape, a frank facing of conditions which make for delays and inefficiency and a determination to allow no tradition to stand in the way of that thorough preparation without which the United States will inevitably suffer not only in prestige but in far more material and vital ways.

Examinations.

From the Milwaukee Journal

Abolishing school examinations as the prerequisite for passing from grade to grade seems to be the order of the day. It is well if this problem has been solved. Examinations never were any sort of test of education as we think almost all educators admit. For lack of something better they were pressed into the gap. Now, one assumes there is to be a better way of knowing whether a pupil has learned enough about the things he has studied to be ready to study something else. The best way of course is not to give teachers so much to do and so many pupils to take care of that they can't tell any moment just where a pupil is. But we're afraid of being called Utopian, particularly here in Milwaukee of the crowded classes, if we talk about that. Meanwhile examinations the best way in the world of discovering which pupils can resist the most nervous strain are to have a partial rest. Knowing something on a particular day is, we trust, to give place to knowing something all the time.

To Seek a New Education.

The general educational board, founded and endowed by John D. Rockefeller, has reason to believe that teaching in the common and high schools is a failure. It finds that boys and girls are burdened with useless information and are not taught those things which would enable them to assure progress in the workaday life. Therefore the board has announced that it will soon establish an experimental school at Columbia university, where new schemes of education will be tried.

The experiment is to be worked out for the benefit of the whole country and its results will be given wide publicity in the hope of having new systems adopted by the various states. Prof. Otis W. Caldwell, now of the University of Chicago, will have charge of the school.

Latin and Greek will not be included among the studies, but modern languages will be stressed. New methods of teaching history and civics will be put into practice. An attempt will be made to connect up the study of mathematics with some of the branches of work to which it applies. Organized recreation, play and games will be provided. And, it is said, that theory of education known as "formal discipline," will be discarded.

City Air as Good as Mountain Air.

"I have known city men, hundreds of them," Dr. Louis R. Welzmiller is quoted in the World's Work, "who had a firm conviction that one of the greatest obstacles in their way to becoming healthy lay in the fact that city air has less ozone in it than the air upstate or at the seashore. True, the air down by the sidewalks would not assay as high in ozone as that in the Catskill mountains — but the difference chemically is so slight that it isn't worth talking about."

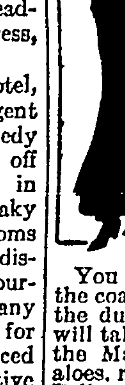
Uric Acid!

Ever since the discovery of Scheele in 1775 that uric acid was found within the body—most eminent physicians agree that rheumatism is caused by it; also many distressing symptoms as headache, pain in back, stomach distress, swollen feet and ankles, gout, etc.

It was Dr. Pierce of the Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N.Y., who discovered a new agent—called Anuric, a harmless remedy that if taken before meals will carry off the uric acid from the system and in this way the pains and aches, the creaky joints and all the distressing symptoms of rheumatism and other maladies disappear. You can easily prove this yourself, by obtaining Anuric at almost any drug store, or send Dr. Pierce 10c. for trial package. Try it and be convinced that Anuric is many times more active than lithia and eliminates uric acid as hot water melts sugar.



WITHIN THE REACH of every woman—health and strength. They're brought to you by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Take this medicine, and there's a safe and certain remedy for all the chronic weaknesses, derangements, and diseases peculiar to the sex. It will build up, strengthen, and invigorate every "run-down" or delicate woman. It regulates and assists all the natural functions.

At some period in her life, a woman requires a special tonic and nervine.

If you're a tired or afflicted woman turn to "Favorite Prescription," you will find it never fails to benefit.

Sold in tablet or liquid form.

You will escape many ills and clear up the coated tongue, the sallow complexion, the dull headache, the lazy liver, if you will take a pleasant laxative made up of the May-apple, juice of the leaves of aloes, root of jalap, and called "Pleasant Pellets." You can obtain at drug store these vegetable pellets in vials for 25c.—ask for Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

The Quinine That Does Not Cause Nervousness or Ringing In Head

Because of its Tonic and Laxative effect, LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE can be taken by anyone without causing nervousness or ringing in the head. It removes the cause of Colds, Grip and Headache. Used whenever Quinine is needed.

Canada's Liberal Offer of Wheat Land to Settlers

is open to you—to every farmer or farmer's son who is anxious to establish for himself a happy home and prosperity. Canada's hearty invitation this year is more attractive than ever. Wheat is much higher but her fertile farm land just as cheap, and in the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta

160 Acre Homesteads Are Actually Free to Settlers and Other Land Sold at from $15 to $20 per Acre

The great demand for Canadian Wheat will keep up the price. Where a farmer can get near $2 for wheat and raise 20 to 45 bushels to the acre he is bound to make money — that's what you can expect in Western Canada. Wonderful yields also of Oats, Barley and Flax. Mixed Farming in Western Canada is fully as profitable an industry as grain raising.

The excellent grasses, full of nutrition, are the only food required either for beef or dairy purposes. Good schools, churches, markets convenient, climate excellent. Military service is not compulsory in Canada but there is an unusual demand for farm labor to replace the many young men who have volunteered for the war. Write for literature and particulars as to reduced railway rates to Supt. of Immigration, Ottawa, Can., or to

Wichman Loyal To Uncle Sam

"Altho I am of German descent, I do not believe the United States should permit itself to be insulted by Germany or anyone else," declared Representative Wichman of Hancock today.

Wichman's statement was made during the argument on the Gilbert bill which provides for increased pensions at the Marshalltown Old Soldiers Home Mr Wichman took exception to statements that old soldiers were dying off rapidly and that the proposed addition at Marshalltown would soon be unnecessary

"The United States will probably go to war in years to come The present crisis with Germany should demonstrate that possibility. I believe the money should be appropriated and the old soldiers made comfortable.—Des Moines Capital

Consolidation Successful

Mr L Nee e,
Superintendent of Schools,
Klemme, Iowa.

Dear sir:—

In reply to your communication of February 13, we will say that there are now 214 consolidatsd school districts organized in the state. All but 17 of these have been organized since April, 1913. Such districts are being organized more rapidly than ever before. Not less than 8 such districts have been organized since Jan. 1. Three have been organized in Story county within the last four weeks and they are preparing to call other elections Last year 50 districts were organized between February 1st and September 1st. It is probable that a larger number than that will be organized this year during the same period of time.

The consolidated school, like the automobile, has come to stay. It will be adopted by the greater portion of the state of Iowa for the reason that it is a good thing and Iowa people know a good thing when they have have had it fully explained to them.

Yours truly,
A. M. Deyoe,
Sup't of Public Instruction
James A. Woodruff,
Inspector of Rural and Consolidated Schools.

Makes Good Living from 20 City lots

On 20 city lots, averaging 50 to 100 feet, O. Burton, market gardener of Sibley, through skillful managing, grew from $1,200 to $1,500 worth of vegetables last summer. Upon each lot planted to potatoes he secured 65 bushels, or nearly 400 bushels to the acre. By growing other crops with like skill, he made up the total income.

Miner Bros.' Duroc Bred Sow Sale Brings Top Notch Prices

Miner Bros. who held their first annual sale of pure bred Duroc Jersey Brood Sows, Wednesday, was attended bv a record breaking crowd of interested bidders and everything offered was sold at a very good price, the top being $175 00 and the average for the 41 head offered being $93.50, close to the one hundred dollar mark. While these prices did not run up into figures like some pure bred sales have the past season, it must be taken into consideration that this was the first attempt of holding a sale and naturally did not attract the attention of as many breeders as they will in the future if they keep up the quality of their product. Some of the heavy breeders who attended who attended from out of town and who have attended many sales this season stated that a number of their offerings were just as good in every particular as has been sold by old established breeders for $500.00 to $600.00.

Through a judicious advertising campaign and good weather there were a number of out town breeders in attendance and together with the local buyers present made the bidding lively. The total attendance would easily reach two hundred which is very good for a sale of this nature, and the large share of them were there to do business. We are pleased to see the Miner Bros,' first sale prove a success and that the quality of their herd is being recognized and wish them continued success and prosperity.

THE GAUGE OF AN HONEST GATE

THINGS are not always what they seem. It is important to know about the tubing in steel gates. To see that it is full size is not enough. It may look the same outside and be too thin.

Only "IOWA" gates have the heaviest weight of high carbon steel tubing in the frame. Many other features make "IOWA" gates better.

KLEMME, IOWA

There are 4,000 or 5,000 inhabitants on the Magdalen islands, and, because of the remote location of this land in the widest part of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, 50 miles north of Prince Edward island, they have been practically isolated during the greater part of the year, as few boats had occasion to pass in their vicinity. The Canadian government has arranged a weekly wireless service of 800 words covering the news, which is received by the ministers of the islands and read to their parishioners at church on Sunday

IOWA JUDICIARY LAW WILL STAND

Senate Indefinitely Postpones Helmer Bill and Blocks an Effort to Kill the Law.

SHERIFF FEE INCREASE PASSES IOWA SENATE

The senate today passed the bill giving Sheriffs 15 cents per meal instead of 10 cents for feeding prisoners, and increased the mileage to 10 cents per mile instead of 8 cents

Des Moines Ia., Feb 21. The state senate today disposed of an effort to kill the nonpartisan judiciary law in its 8 to 10 to indefinitely postpone the Helmer bill

The death sentence was passed following 30 minutes of debate in which both sides were frank to discuss the real issues at stake without mentioning names

The vote was 29 to 20 with the democrats voting with the other champions of the nonpartisan law and Senator Kimball not voting.

Ben Salinger justice of the supreme court is credited with being the father of the nonpartisan judiciary law. He was elected a member of the supreme bench under it. When the movement for a repeal of the law started its support was immediately taken up by Justice Salinger's two sons, Ben jr., and Lou Salinger the latter of Carroll, and the former of Sioux City.

Lou Salinger has been particularly active in lobbying against the repeal. He said two days ago he was ready to go home because he was certain that opponents of the bill could not muster enough strength to pass it.

The Helmer bill was first smothered in the committee but Senator Helmer attached an amendment to the Kimball bill to include repeal of the non-partisan judiciary as a part of the program to amend the primary laws the desired result of forcing the bill out of committee was obtained. The Helmer bill was reported out for indefinite postponement with the understanding that the Helmer amendment to the Kimball bill would be withdrawn.

Here was reached the point by getting a majority vote of the house. Senator Helmer then moved to withdraw and the motion was withdrawn.

The next duty was to place the bill on the calendar.

Pass Primary Amendment

The senate today passed the Kimball bill to amend the primary law so as to provide for the office of governor 38 to 10. The house passed the Coakley bill making it a felony to transmit venereal diseases 79 to 9.

CAPITOL EXTENSION IS "A HIGH HANDED GAME," CHARGE

Des Moines Ia. Feb 24. The capitol extension project was branded as the most high handed game ever played in Iowa by Representative John Rowley, today in addressing the Iowa house in favor of his bill to sell a chunk of the extension tract.

He said that W. J. Dixon was given his job on the state board of control for his share in the quasi conspiracy. An amendment was adopted by vote of 56 to 28 providing that the state shall not sell any of the property, but shall not improve all of it.

C. L. SIVERLY BECOMES HEAD OF AMES BANKS

Ames Ia. Feb 24. Following on the death of the late Capt. Wallace M. Greeley banker of Ames, who was president and majority stockholder of the Union National bank which he founded in 1873 the board of directors of the Union National elected C. L. Siverly to become president of the institution. Mr. Siverly has been connected with the bank for a number of years. He entered the banking business as cashier.

Mr. Shiverly also became president of the Union Savings bank a separate organization of the Union National. Seaman Knapp who has been serving as assistant cashier of both institutions, was elected cashier. Both men were trained in the banking business by Captain Greeley. Mr. Siverly is also president of the Gilbert Savings bank.

DUBUQUE. One hundred and fifty students in the high school at Independence, Ia. 30 miles west of here went on a strike because they had been refused a half holiday. They paraded the streets to call on the members of the board of education, but were denied a hearing after which they paraded the streets with flags and band during the remainder of the afternoon.

DUBUQUE. A package containing 50 sticks of dynamite two boxes of caps and several feet of fuse was found about five blocks from the Iowa end of the railroad and wagon bridges spanning the Mississippi river. It is known that government secret service men have been notified. Belief is expressed that the explosive was intended to blow up the railroad bridge.

CEDAR RAPIDS. Several county superintendents and similar educators from various parts of Iowa are here today to attend the funeral Saturday of A. B. Alderman. He had been superintendent of Linn county schools 11 years. He was recognized throughout Iowa as an authority on school matters.

DES MOINES.—Horace E. Teachout died here of heart disease. Mr. Teachout was 72 years old and built the first street car line in the state. At one time he was a member of the legislature, and as a capitalist was known throughout Iowa. He was a prominent Knight Templar.

ROCKWELL. The entire business section of this town was threatened for over two hours by a fire that destroyed three buildings in the main business street, including that occupied by the Rockwell Tribune. The loss will aggregate about $6,000.

SCRANTON.—The Scranton Farmers' elevator burned, together with 10,000 bushels of wheat and 8,000 bushels of corn. Insurance, 50 per cent; loss about $25,000.

HOLSTEIN.—Mrs. William Flanagan, an aged resident of this place died at her home here after a short illness. The body was taken to Ida Grove for burial

Animals have no sense of rythm, though they may be taught to "dance." This is the announcement of Dr. Craig, of the University of Maine. "Horses driven in span," he says in the Guide to Nature, "make no attempt to step together. Two birds, however sweetly they sing solo never sing in time with one another nor with any other music. Even the so called dancing animals of the circus get their rythm from the trainer, not from the tune."

DRASTIC "DRY" LAW IS PASSED

Whitmore's Bill, Making Place of Delivery the Place of Sale Has Been Adopted.

Des Moines, Ia., Feb 24.—Senator Whitmore's bill making the place of delivery of liquor the place of sale, passed the senate today, 31 to 18. This bill absolutely prohibits the delivery of liquor into Iowa and is in effect a "bone dry" measure.

Senator Helmer, of Carroll, offered an amendment leaving it in such condition as to permit the bringing of liquor by automobile, wagons or similar conveyance. This was voted down, 27 to 16.

Senator Eversmeyer, of Muscatine, opposed the bill openly, and asserted that it violates personal liberty rights.

"About the only thing we can do now is to go to the movies take a glass of soda water, or go to church and Sunday school," he said

DRUGGISTS OPPOSE RATCLIFF MEASURE

Des Moines Ia., Feb 24.—Wholesale druggists of Iowa are asking that they be not entirely shut off from securing alcohol and alcoholic liquors as would be the case if the bill introduced by Senator Ratcliff, of Montgomery county to take away all druggists' permits, becomes a law. This opposition was voiced at a meeting of the senate committee on the suppression of intemperance.

Frank H. Garrett of Council Bluffs manager of a wholesale drug house and I. T. Jones, of Des Moines an attorney representing wholesale druggists in Des Moines, appeared before the committee and argued that some law be provided whereby wholesale druggists might secure alcohol and alcoholic liquors to supply legitimate trade

WILL ENFORCE ALL BLUE LAWS, HAVNER ASSERTS

Des Moines, Feb 24. Attorney General Havner renews his declaration that he will enforce the Sunday blue laws if they remain on the statute books of Iowa when the legislature adjourns.

"The only way the theater men can escape closing their shows on Sunday is to have the law repealed" declared the attorney general.

The attorney general also made it plain that he intends to enforce the laws uniformly that saloons will be barred in all cities and towns and that all forms of Sunday amusements will be stopped in communities large and small

IOWA LEGISLATURE HONORS MEMORY OF WASHINGTON

Des Moines Ia. Feb 24. Former United States Senator Lafayette Young, Senator L. I. Gibson of Corning, and Representative George W. Crozier, of Knoxville were the speakers on the Washington day program given before the 37th general assembly in joint session in the house chamber at 11 o'clock this morning.

The program was opened with the singing of America. Mrs. P. J. Kimker, of Denison wife of the representative from Crawford county gave a whistling solo. The first rhymn of the Republic was sung by the assembly led by Dr. J. J. Gibson state veterinarian. Miss Maurice Cleaver sang Iowa.

In Switzerland there has been invented an electrically operated coin in the slot machine for cleaning the sides and soles of the shoes of pedestrians.

CEDAR RAPIDS. Through a campaign inaugurated by Verne Marshall editor of the Cedar Rapids Evening Gazette and aided by Bob Toms of Marion both of whom saw six months' service in the ambulance corps in France—Marshall at Verdun and Toms in Belgium—Cedar Rapids has contributed $1,800 to the fund for relief of Belgian children. Two Belgian children whose mother is dead and whose father is in the army or dead were brought to this city and will live with relatives.

CEDAR RAPIDS. Senator Charles B. Hamilton of Colorado, proprietor of the Hotel Montrose here for the second time since January has been summoned to Denver. The democrats control the Colorado senate by his vote. His first call was made necessary to allow the party to organize that branch of the general assembly. In this case his support is needed to confirm the nomination of democrats to appointive offices.

RED OAK. Attorney General Havener has informed the county attorney of Montgomery county that his office would assist the county authorities in their efforts to solve the ax murder mystery which has baffled every one who has tried to unravel it in the last five years. This is the first time the state authorities have taken any hand in the matter.

HOLSTEIN.—Holstein's new $60,000 high school building will be dedicated Friday afternoon. High School Inspector J. L. Cherny will give the address. The building has 39 rooms and is fully equipped to offer four complete courses—classical, industrial, commercial and scientific. FORMER BRITISHER TO OPPOSE ENGLAND

London, Feb 22.—The Rheinsche Westfaelian Zeitung is quoted by the Exchange Telegraph company's Rotterdam correspondent as announcing that the Pan-German party has subscribed 3,000,000 marks for the purchase of the Berlin newspapers Neuste Nachrichten and Deutsche Zeitung. The purchase, it is stated, would be with a view to prosecuting the Pan-German, anti-British agitation under the direction of Professor Schaffer and Houston Stewart Chamberlain the author, a former British subject recently naturalized as a German

CAT REVEALS MURDER.

Chicago, Feb. 22.—The yowling of a hungry cat led to the discovery of a murder here. For a week two physicians living at 328 East Fifty-first street had been annoyed by the cat in the flat below. They thought that the cat was starving, and yesterday pushed a flat ash tray of milk under the door.

The animal was quieted for a time, but started again last night. The physicians and other neighbors broke into the house. They found Mrs. Pearl Levinsky, 19 years old, strangled to death. Death came a week ago, it is believed. Detectives are hunting for her husband.

HARDING GETS A "POT OF GOLD"

Bill Appropriating $25,000 to Hire Special Agents an Extravagance, Is Charge.

Des Moines Ia., Feb 23. It took the full pressure of the administration exercised by Governor Harding through the leaders of the controlling faction in the Iowa house, to obtain a favorable recommendation of the house appropriations committee on the Larson bill appropriating $25,000 per year for the use of the governor and attorney general for hiring special agents.

The bill also makes it possible for the governor or the attorney general to press into service any peace officer of state county or municipal government at any time.

This bill, defeated once in the house committee 18 to 17, was reconsidered and was ordered reported out favorably by a 21 to 16 vote after the hottest verbal battle of the session.

Polk Representative in Fight.

Representative Peter Klinker of Crawford county, and Otto Stanzler of Polk county both of whom are considered as aligned in sympathy with a liberal construction of the liquor laws, led the fight on the appropriation.

Representatives Rube McElrren Guy Roberts and W. E. Giltner were the chief speakers for the administration and pleaded for the enforcement in order to help carry out the party pledge of law enforcement made during the last campaign and in order to express confidence in the governor and attorney general.

Representative Klinker opened the fireworks by attacking the bill tooth and nail.

I am not in favor of granting this appropriation of $25 000 a year this pot of gold into which the governor and the attorney general can reach down any time they see fit

Calls It Extravagance.

"It is extravagance, pure and simple and the present appropriation of $10,000 per year for special agents is ample and sufficient," he said

"What is this bill anyway. It is brought in the house by Representative Larson, of Montgomery county and in the senate by Senator Haskell of the same county.

"It is merely an effort on the part of Montgomery county to get the state to advance money to ferret out the perpetrators of the Villisca ax murders. I am opposed to this bill and I hope that it will be killed."

House "Turns" Down Resolution

Under the leadership of Rep. Jimes B. Weaver, of Polk the house today pulled the fangs from the senate resolution condemning the war department and the regular army for their treatment of the Iowa national guard.

Amendments striking out certain words, phrases and sections that some speakers characterized as insulting to the men entrusted with the fighting forces of the nation were adopted by a vote of 53 to 48 after an hour's debate.

The amendments were drawn by Representative Weaver, introduced by him and saved from threatened defeat by a telling stroke delivered by the author just before the vote was cast.

The amendments left the paragraphs that denounce the war department and the regular army for its treatment of the fighting men of the Third Iowa infantry. They eliminated parts carrying a general excoriation of the war office and the officers of the regular army and phrases that Senator Frailey who drafted the resolutions declared should remain because they express in plain Anglo-Saxon," the sentiment of the people of Iowa.

To Augment Supreme Court

Epps introduced a bill in the house today to increase the number of supreme court justices from seven to eight. The committee introduced one to put telephones under the control of the state railroad commission.

Other bills introduced were by Miller, putting insurance companies in process of organization under state insurance department by Mead providing for four year terms for county elective officers.

Lake Bill Is Passed

The house today passed the Lake bill making it a misdemeanor for persons to board a train with the intent of avoiding the paying of fare

JUSTICE DEEMER IMPROVES.

Red Oak, Ia., Feb. 21.—The condition of Justice Horace E. Deemer, of the Iowa supreme court, who has been critically ill here for several days following a nervous breakdown, is improved, according to his physician, who said "there is hope, though the crisis is not passed." The justice has regained consciousness.

THIRD IS MUSTERED OUT.

Des Moines, Ia., Feb 21.—The Third infantry, Iowa National guard, has been mustered out of the federal service, and today all companies had entrained for their home stations. The Council Bluffs company remained at Fort Des Moines until today. The Iowa field hospital corps and the ambulance corps are still at Fort Des Moines.

CRESTON.—George S. Waite, aged 42, and Mrs. Alice L. Waite, aged 45 both of Massena, were married here last night. The groom was the bride's brother-in-law

N. B. BRYANT, LEMARS, OLDEST COUNCILMAN

Pioneer "City Daddy" Announces He Will Not Again Be a Candidate.

LeMars, Ia. Feb. 22.—Active retirement from municipal life of a man who is believed to be the oldest member of a city council in Iowa was foretold in the announcement this week of Alderman N. B. Bryant that he would not again be a candidate for office.

Alderman Bryant is the First ward's representative in the city council. When, during the last week in March, he steps out of office, he will have passed the allotted span by almost 12 years. Born on June 16, 1824, Mr. Bryant is 24 years older than the next oldest member of the LeMars city council. He said today that so far as he had been able to learn, he is the oldest councilman in the state.

Unusually active and mentally alert for one of his years, Mr. Bryant's record is commendable, if for no other reason than he "held up his end" on the busiest council that ever directed this city's affairs.

Although the city council meets in regular session only on the first Tuesday after the first Monday of each month, making 24 regular meetings for each two-year term no less than 175 meetings have already been held during the life of the present council. The records show that the number of sessions held was more than double that of any previous LeMars council. With the exception of two or three meetings from which he was absent last fall, through illness Mr. Bryant has not missed a council meeting.

Some of the business, in the execution of which Mr. Bryant has assisted, was the passing of 14 ordinances and 19 resolutions the construction of 51½ of the city's 62½ blocks of paved streets and the purchase of the city's first automobile fire truck.

MINISTERS ARE SPLIT OVER SUNDAY BLUE LAWS

Des Moines Ia. Feb 22. Des Moines ministers have divided ranks over the Griffin bill to repeal the Sunday 'blue laws' and lined up on opposite sides of a joint debate before the house committee on police regulations.

The Rev. J. Edward Kirbye pastor of the Plymouth Congregational church and Rev. W. Ostrander Seventh Day Adventist, appeared in behalf of the bill while half a dozen ministers including Rev. John L. Hillman, pastor of the First Methodist church, and Rev. Noah B. Wickham, head of the Lords Day alliance opposed it.

Rev. Mr. Kirbye declared that the workingman was just as much entitled to see a movie or attend a baseball game as the rich man was to play golf.

Road Fight Warms Up.

The road fight is getting hotter. The Elwood-Mackeye substitute for the Johnston administration bill was slipped in to the records in the form of an amendment to the original bill thus placing it before the house without reference to committee and further in position where the amendment must be voted upon before the Johnston bill can be touched.

Speaker Pitt is arranging an organization of statewide nature to circulate petitions in favor of the Johnston bill.

Firemen Lose Out.

Senator Haskell, of Cedar Rapids, has dropped his fight to compel all Iowa cities to adopt a double platoon fire department system. He will instead bring in a bill making it optional for cities to use two shifts of men.

Increase for Jurors

Jurors of the state will probably get $ per day pay in the future instead of $2.50. The Rayburn bill to this effect which has already passed the house has been acted upon favorably by a senate committee.

Condemn War Department

Resolutions condemning the war department order that guardsmen of the Third Iowa infantry must pay for their old uniforms as another move by the regular army to kill the national guard and demanding its immediate countermanding were drawn for presentation on the floor of both the senate and house today. The resolution directs the secretary of the senate and the chief clerk of the house to wire President Wilson and Secretary of War Baker, asking them to take the proper action to reverse the judge advocate general's ruling.

Pass Erickson Bill.

After a strenuous argument the house passed the Erickson bill appropriating $749 to reimburse the Lyon County Fair association for premium money paid out. The state auditor refuses to issue warrants in the above amount on the advice of former Attorney General Cosson who declared the association forfeited its right to state aid by operating a doll rack. Cosson said the concession was a gambling device.

Proposed New Measures.

Senator Jackson of Chickasaw introduced a bill to recompense the Greater Iowa association $35,000 for the Iowa building at the San Francisco exposition. Representative Neff offered a bill putting police chiefs under civil service.

The Adams bill providing for licenses for ice cream factories bakeries and candy factories was defeated in the senate 21 to 18.

Pass Text Book Bill.

The McFarlane free text book bill passed the house today 91 to 9. It provides that districts in which free books are desired may decide the question at an election called after the petition has tors.

Stuart's bill, creating an architects' been signed by 10 per cent of the electommission and taxing a license fee to an architect was killed, 60 to 38.

The house made the Rowley bill, to sell part of the newly acquired capitol extension tract, a matter of business for tomorrow at 10 30 o'clock.

The senate refused to do away with three chairs of surgery in the homeopathic hospital at Iowa City, as recommended by the committee on retrenchment and reform. It failed by two votes.

SHELBY.—People in portions of three counties—Pottawattamie Shelby and Harrison will vote February 26 on a consolidated school proposition to take in the independent district of Shelby and territory contiguous.

CORRECTIONVILLE PIONEER DIES AT MARSHALLTOWN

Correctionville Ia., Feb. 20.—Word was received here today announcing the death at Marshalltown of Harley Reynolds a Correctionville pioneer. The body will be sent here for burial, the funeral probably taking place Thursday.

Mr. Reynolds was one of the best known residents of this place. He was a veteran of the civil war and two weeks ago he was removed to the Soldiers' home at Marshalltown on account of a serious illness. He had lived here for over 30 years. One grandson, Clyde Conley of this place, survives.

No great loss was six additional fires. The Paxton hotel was twice in flames and all the guests were hustled to another hotel. The St. James hotel, two blocks away, caught fire. Trunks and traveling bags at both hotels were piled into the streets.

Walls Fall In Street

The Continental building's walls, four stories high, fell straight across Fifteenth street, breaking a number of windows and injuring slightly three firemen. When the wall fell, in the rush of the crowd, which had pressed to Douglas street, several persons were knocked down and trampled, but none of them was hurt.

At 5 o'clock, two hours after the fire started, the last wall fell, but showers of sparks still threatened other buildings over which streams of water were being played. Not until 8 o'clock were adjacent buildings no longer endangered.

Twenty-five years ago the same block was burned and four firemen were killed.

GERMANY LOSES ALL COLONIES, ALLIES SA

Japan to Have Her Way in East and Colonial Africa Will Be Shifted.

London, Feb 10.—(By mail)—The death knell to Germany's colonial possessions has been sounded, so far as the entente allies can effect that result by the simultaneous announcement of the British minister of colonies, Mr. Long, the Japanese minister of foreign affairs, Mr. Motono, and the prime minister of New Zealand, Mr. Massey who voiced the view of Australia as well as New Zeland. Together three statements declare there will be no return to Germany of her colonies in Africa Asia and the Pacific.

New Colonial Policy

This attitude is not only held by Japanese and the British colonists chiefly concerned, but it has the backing of the British and French governments which have the largest interests in colonial Africa and Asia. It develops the fact also that the late Asquith government was opposed to any extension of British colonial possessions in Africa, whereas the new Lloyd George government approves this extension. This in turn has established that there will be a general re-shifting of African colonies, so that the possessions of England, France, Portugal and Belgium will be made more homogeneous instead of being scattered and irregular in outline as at present.

WHITMAN URGES FOOD DICTATORSHIP PLAN

Women Say if $1,000,000 Is Not Given for Food, Kids Will Quit School.

Washington, D C, Feb 24—Senator Lewis, of Illinois, today introduced as an amendment to the revenue bill, a provision to authorize the president to seize food stuffs deemed to be monopolized in violation of law Food stuffs so seized would be disposed of at public sale under government supervision

Plans for relieving the food situation in the east by putting American vessels in the coast-to-coast trade thus releasing freight cars was proposed to President Wilson today by Chairman Denman, of the shipping board Amendments to the shipping bill, which is expected to be passed by congress before it adjourns, would make available a large amount of tonnage which the shipping board could buy or charter for service through the Panama canal.

New York Feb 23 Definite measures to meet the food situation were considered by state and city authorities Governor Whitman and some of the members of the state legislature see hope in the immediate passage of the food and market bill introduced

The Woman's Anti-High Price league sent a delegation to the board of estimate this morning to demand an appropriation of $1 000,000 to be used in buying food to be sold to the poor at cost This organization announced that if its plan was unsuccessful it would urge that beginning Monday, children be kept out of school until conditions had improved

The food and market bill which the governor is known to favor, contains an emergency clause which authorizes the commission that would be created under this act to take such measures to secure relief as it may deem desirable in case of an emergency creating or threatening to create a scarcity of food One authority today expressed the opinion that if a real crisis arose the food commission would have virtually dictatorial powers

NEBRASKA COURT DEFINES "LOVE"

Aged Husband Is Awarded a Divorce by Supreme Court on Cross Petition—Court Decisions.

Lincoln, Neb., Feb. 24—The refusal of a bride to kiss her husband, when followed up by violations of her contract to furnish love, affection and kindly care, constitutes extreme cruelty and justifies a divorce, says the supreme court of Nebraska This was decided in the case of Druzilla Stephens against William Stephens, the latter winning on his cross petition. Stephens testified that she not only refused to kill him, but that he was rebuffed when he offered her his arm and was told later on that she would sooner sleep with a dog than with him. She told him that she did not love him and had only married him to get a home for herself and her grandchild The groom was 70 and the bride a widow of 54 when the wedding occurred. The minister who performed the ceremony testified that in the 8,837 marriages he had performed the conduct of this bride was the strangest.

Decision Favors Brothers.

The court decided that the four brothers of Henry F. Merchen, living near Crofton, Knox county, need not pay the shortage in the accounts of Henry with the Krotter Lumber company when he was their manager at St. Charles, S D The shortage was found to be over $2,000 and the brothers agreed to make good if there was no prosecution. Henry left the state but was followed by Krotter, who induced him to come back and talk the matter over with the brothers. The latter claimed they were forced to sign the agreement by the threat of Krotter to send Henry to prison.

Rules for Landlord.

Holding that the landlord of a house has no reason to believe that a gas company repairer will leave the plumbing in such a condition that the tenant is asphyxiated or that he will foresee the tenant will sleep with his window closed, the court refused to give Mrs. Fred Spratlen a verdict for damages against her landlord, Mrs. J. C. Ish. The woman had already received $3,000 from the gas company

Appropriation Bill Passes.

The salaries appropriation bill passed the house. Among the other bills passed was a memorial to congress to give the Interstate Commerce commission power to relieve the car shortage and providing that decrees of divorce shall not become final until a year after the decision is made.

The house and senate appointed committees to prepare a program for a joint celebration on Thursday, March 1, of the admission of the state to the union The senate adopted a memorial to congress similar to the car shortage bill.

BILL PROVIDES YEAR'S TRAINING FOR EVERY BOY

War Department Measure, Sent to Congress, Holds Men in in Reserve Until They Are 45 Years Old.

EXEMPTIONS MENTIONED

Small Body of Regulars for Frontier Duty and Instruction Would Be Kept Up.

Washington, D C Feb 24 The war department made public today a synopsis of the universal service and training bill which also was sent to congress The main essentials of the plan are

One year of military training for all boys in their 19th year except those exempted because of physical or mental unfitness and those who are the only support of destitute dependents

Training to consist of 11 months during the first year and two weeks during the second year and third year of a reservists liability

Long Held in Reserve.

"War service to be required of all who have been trained in the first and second reserve, the first reserve duty to extend over a period of four years and one month after training, and second reserve duty for seven years

"At the conclusion of service in the organized reserve the men would remain liable for duty until they reach the age of 45.

"In case of war the reserves would be called out in their order, but further exemptions of a temporary character would be granted to those who have become the sole support of destitute dependents after training had been completed and those whose position in civil branches of federal or state governments are indispensable to the conduct of war

Small Body of Regulars.

"Organization of the over sea garrisons would remain substantially as at present. There would be, in addition, small detachments of regular soldiers for frontier duty and also the training units which would be employed to instruct the annual classes of reservists. It is proposed to recruit this training force from the national guard, organized militia and enlisted force of the regular army"

The synopsis lays stress on the fact that the plan proposes to establish "only a reasonable measure of defense of the United States from successful invasion."

PRESBYTERIAN BUDGET INCLUDES $6,250,000

Atlantic City, N J, Feb. 23.—A budget of $6,250,000 for the coming year was authorized today by the executive council of the general Presbyterian assembly in session here.

The total is about $1,000,000 more than in 1916 and has been made possible by added endowments, trusts and greatly increased incomes from the various branches of the church

Two and one-quarter millions will be spent on the foreign fields About $2,000,000 has been apportioned for home missions and $2,000,000 to other boards and beneficial agencies

Member German Reichstag Is Glad "Gerard Has Closed His Espionage Office."

London, Feb. 24—"At a meeting of the German Agricultural league, says the correspondent at Rotterdam of the London Evening News, Dr. Wildbrub, a conservative member of the reichstag, said:

"Now that Mr. Gerard has closed his espionage office the German people will breath freely and will be relieved of an intolerable nightmare, provided he does not return before peace is declared.

"Mr. Gerard's residence in Berlin and his intimate relations with our responsible authorities were painful to the German people, but the climax of pain was reached when Mr. Gerard had the insolence to describe the imperial chancellor as his friend. Next to England, America is our worst enemy."

SUB KILLS U. S. CITIZEN

Washington, D. C., Feb. 23.—Robert Allen Haden, an American Presbyterian missionary, stationed at Foo Chow, China, perished when the French liner Athos was destroyed by a submarine, 210 miles east of Malta, February 17.

Consul Keblinger, at Malta, cabled a report of Haden's death to the state department today, and said that the missionary's address was given as in care of the Presbyterian mission board at Nashville, Tenn.

A later dispatch from Consul Keblinger said the Athos was carrying troops and may have been used as a transport. No steps can be taken until this fact is definitely determined. This government probably will have no cause for action if such is the cause.

The later dispatch added that Haden was drowned while going back to the ship to assist some others. The submarine showed neither flag nor number The later dispatch, however, established that the Athos was torpedoed without warning

CAR SHORTAGE BRINGS HIGHER FOOD PRICES

Washington, D. C., Feb. 24—More complaints of a car shortage continued to roll in today from Iowa, Nebraska, the Dakotas and elsewhere. Along with them come complaints of high prices through these are mainly from large centers. Senators Kenyon and Norris are taking an active part in conferences of progressive republicans. The senators are looking to find some relief from the food shortage which is causing riots in New York and elsewhere.

HE'D TEACH ENEMIES JUSTICE AND LOVE IF U. S. IS INVADED

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—Fifty young men and women college students, representing the Emergency Peace federation, called on Chairman Flood of the House foreign relations committee today and told him through half a dozen speakers that they did not want this country to go to war.

"I would teach my enemies justice and love," declared Carl Binder, a Harvard student.

"What would you do if an enemy invaded this country?" asked Mr. Flood

"I believe in nonresistance," replied Binder

Mr Flood indicated strongly that the views of Binder and himself were wholly dissimilar.

PRESIDENT CALLS SPECIAL SESSION

Vice President Will Be Inaugurated in Senate Chamber as Usual Ceremonies Taking Place March 5.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 24—Plans for President Wilson's inauguration, hitherto indefinite, because March 4 falls on Sunday, were cleared today by announcement that the usual special session of the Senate will be called for March 5, to consider nominations.

This will permit the inauguration of the vice president in the Senate chamber as is the custom

President Wilson himself, it was also announced, will take the oath of office privately in the White House Sunday, March 4 It was not made clear whether he has decided to take the oath again at the public open air ceremonies on the plaza at the capitol on March 5, or whether he merely will make the ceremony the occasion for delivering his inaugural address.

From The Tribune Washington Bureau.

Washington, D C, Feb. 24—At a conference of republican senators today, no formal action was taken, but it was decided that measures before the Senate should be discussed fully. This includes the revenue bill, which is not yet out of the woods, and which may be blocked.

Back of the movement for an extra session is the feeling of republican senators, or most of them, that congress should be here in the German crisis. They are advised the president will, not later than Monday, ask blanket authority to deal with protection of American rights at sea.

"We cannot prevent the granting of such authority, but we want to be here when the president exercises it," said one republican senator

Republican senators disclaimed a purpose to filibuster, but they showed a disposition, after the conference, to consume time with the revenue bill. Part of the republicans oppose the excess profits tax and would like to kill it, but the real motive for the extra session is the indisposition to let the president handle the German situation without reins in the absence of congress.

GERMAN-AMERICAN PASTORS BLAME U. S.

Say America Is Guilty of Prolonging War and Ask Prayer for Peace Sunday.

Chicago, Feb. 24—A call on all churches of all denominations to make February 25, a day of repentence and prayer to supplicate God to avert war by the United States, was issued today by the executive committee of the association of German-American pastors.

"The guilt of America for the prolongation of this slaughter of human beings and the wanton destruction of property by furnishing all kinds of weapons of destruction in immense quantities cannot be denied," says the call.

BRITAIN NEAR HUNGER MUST REDUCE FOOD

Lloyd-George Stops Imports of Fruit, Vegetables, Fish, Tea, Coffee, Cocoa—Cuts Print Paper.

INSURES FARMERS PROFIT

Doubles Farm Hands' Wages as Aid to Agriculture Allies' Business Hit by Order

London Feb 24—The stocks of food in Great Britain at the present time are lower than they ever have been before, Mr Lloyd-George said It is essential for the life of the nation, he declared, that every possible effort be made to increase home production.

Mr Lloyd-George the British prime minister today presented to the house of commons in a speech lasting an hour and a half his program for coping with the serious situation arising from the shortage of shipping space, depletion of food stocks and the German submarine menace

To Force Cultivation.

The premier advocated the increase of home food production and the curtailment of non-vitual imports To this end he outlined a program for speeding up the farmer by guaranteeing good prices for commodities over a period of years This he supplemented by the announcement that the land owner would be forced to cultivate his land

The speeding up of the farm laborer was provided for by the premier by guaranteeing him a minimum wage of 25 shillings per week instead of the present 14 to 18 shillings.

Cuts Paper Again.

By curtainment of imports Mr. Lloyd-George said, he expected to reduce the demands on cargo space by several million tons. Food stuffs of which 16,000,000 tons were imported last year, will be cut nearly 1,000,000 tons by lopping off certain luxuries. Paper users who already have been considerably curtailed, must henceforth get along with only half the supply they are now receiving, this saving 640,000 tons Certain savings also will be effected in the import of ore, which now amounts to 8,000,000 tons annually and in lumber, which at present is 4,000,000 tons.

"Farmers can increase even now by hundreds of thousands of tons for this year," said Premier Lloyd-George, "the food supplies of the country. If all the plans are carried out a very considerable quantity of tonnage will be saved, but future tonnage is urgently needed The French ambassador has been here begging for more ships and the Italian ambassador has just left after making the same request. We need an immediate and substantial saving of tonnage. Let us come down ruthlessly on imports which are not essential. It is idle to suggest that we who are comfortable at home should not be prepared to surrender the things unnecessary"

The next heaviest item of import is iron ore Regarding this item the premier said,

"We are importing millions of tons, but the importation cannot be diminished unless more iron ore is found in our country. There is plenty of low grade ore, however, in this country, and if the supply of labor can be augmented we can increase enormously our output. The saving of tonnage would be large, but unfortunately it would come late in the year."

The importation of apples, tomatoes and fruits will be prohibited entirely

The only exceptions made in the prohibition of fruit importations will be in the cases of oranges and bananas in which the amount brought in will be restricted 25 per cent. The same restriction will apply to nuts. Canned salmon importations will be reduce 50 per cent.

The importation of foreign tea, coffee and cocoa is prohibited and even the amount of India tea which may be brought in is reduced.

Effective at Once.

These restrictions would be imposed immediately, said the premier Steps would be taken to prevent speculative buying and if necessary the food controller would take control of the commodity.

All essential articles of food, he continued, would be on the free list, but certain articles would be reduced or prohibited. The stoppage of importation of coffee, tea and cocoa for the time being was due to the fact that large supplies were on hand. The premier said he regretted very much the cutting off of certain luxuries which came from France and Italy.

Shortage Hits Army.

Mr. Lloyd-George said that for some time there has been a shortage of tonnage required for the general needs of the nation and even a slight shortage in the tonnage for military purposes. The nation should realize absolutely what the conditions were.

"If we take drastic measures," he continued, "we can cope with the submarine menace, but if the nation is not prepared to accept drastic measures for dealing with the menace, disaster is before us.

TOLL OF THE PLUNGER

DEATH OF ONE OF IOWA'S STRONG MEN

The death of Justice Horace E Deemer is a distinct loss to the state Justice Deemer had devoted his life to judicial work His first office was that of district judge. He was chosen to that place when he was 28 years old His promotion came naturally enough and was on its merits His service of twenty years on the supreme bench will remain as his monument Lawyers considered him a strong lawyer, a good judge of law, with an analytical mind, capable of dealing with the facts if necessary, Justice Deemer was re elected last year for a six-year term, and that term would have made nearly thirty years on the supreme bench, beating all previous records'

Notwithstanding his service at the state capitol, he maintained his home at Red Oak, a town which he loved He told the editor of The Capital one time more than twenty years ago that he could not make up his mind to leave Red Oak

Thirty years ago two young lawyers, just out of the law school, Joseph Junkin and Horace E. Deemer, opened a law office in Red Oak In the course of time Deemer became a judge and later Joseph Junkin became a state senator In that position his service was conspicuous Justice Deemer had a taste for a more active life and at many different times was tempted to leave the bench but in the crisis could never make up his mind to do so. However, he did not dismiss himself from all public affairs on account of the judicial office He felt that it was his duty to be active in every influence promoting the welfare of the state His death removes from the services of the state an upright judge, a devoted public servant, and from the community where he lived a man who was ever ready to respond to the general demands of citizenship. Des Moines Capital

UNIVERSAL SERVICE

A year ago only a handful of people could be found who were in favor of universal military service. Now the man who opposes such service is the exception. Americans are essentially a fair minded people when facts are brought forcibly to their attention, and this fact has been amply exemplified in the tremendous change of national sentiment regarding universal service. Daily papers of the great cities assert that the principle objection to universal service comes from the rural districts. But the daily papers are wrong The young men of our own community are on a par with those of other rural districts, and yet we unhesitatingly assert that no where in this broad land will be found a more unified or patriotic sentiment than that which exists in the hearts of our own young men. If the best interests of the country demand that each one, rich and poor alike, shall serve his six months in a training camp, then when the time comes we will find them stepping briskly to the front, with heads erect and eyes upon the flag of freedom. There will be no shirking, or quibbling, or hanging back on the part of OUR young men.

AND THE WOMEN, TOO

The imminence of war for this country has brought our women to the front with a rush. Noble women! There never was anything on this earth to compare with them. Hundreds of thousands of them in all parts of the country have announced their readiness to serve their country in hospitals or anywhere else their services may be utilized to advantage. It is like them, it is what we might expect of them and it is what will happen when the crucial moment arrives. There is no uncertainty as to the attitude of our women.

WATCH EDISON!

A year or so ago it was announced that if this nation is forced into war Thomas A. Edison would spring a new implement of warfare of incalculable value to our country and its defenders. We are even now on the brink of war, and Edison is in his secret laboratory with an armed guard around him day and night. Watch Edison!

Berlin, Ia., Says Story is Untrue

Berlin, Ia., Feb. 27, 1917.—Editor Capital: In answer to the various rumors which have been published quite extensively in newspapers of the state of Iowa relating to the unpatriotic, un-American sentiment of the citizenry of Berlin, Iowa, and vicinity, we have to say that all these rumors are false, offensive and vicious: that to the best of our knowledge there has been no petition circulated indicating disloyalty in any degree to President Wilson or the United Stated of America, and we further state that to our knowledge there has been no secret service men in or around Berlin.

The people of Berlin and vicinity are no more in favor of war than in any other community, but sincerely hope that the difficulties between this country and foreign powers may be settled in a peaceful manner. However, should the president of the United States become in need of support we can assuredly say that the citizens of Berlin and vicinity will respond to the call of the Stars and Stripes as loyally as any other community in the United States.

It is therefore earnestly requested that the above be published in an equally prominent place and serve as a retraction and denial of the article appearing in the Register of February 14, 1917, and all other publications which reprinted said article and their editorials thereon.—THE BERLIN COMMERCIAL CLUB.—Des Moines Capital.

THE GUEST

By OLIVER LORING

Jerry opened the kitchen door with floury fingers to let in the man with the groceries.

Half way across the kitchen floor his ice-crusted heel slipped on the linoleum and he went down with a crash

"Good gracious!" cried Jerry, "are you hurt?"

"No," he said, getting to his feet and eying the conglomeration of broken bags on the floor

"My, I thought you were Patsy!"

"Patsy? No my name is Dennis"

"That's a wretched joke," said Jerry with contempt

It isn't a joke" said Dennis "It's the truth How could it be a joke?

Look here, I haven't got time to stand here and answer riddles. Just how [illegible] and then at the [illegible] over my [illegible] to get [illegible] to

Jerry looked at her smooth flushed cheeks snapping gray eyes and the rebellious hair that shook curls over her forehead when she talked

Just look at it, I say'

This time his eyes followed the direction of her finger and he saw a table full of pots and pans, bowls and spoons ready for washing

Jerry regarded him curiously. "Say, are you really a [illegible] or what' a [illegible] And what's the matter with Patsy today?'

"Patsy couldn't come, so I came in his place"

Oh I see' Well do you know what Patsy would do if he spilled the beans and coffee and things?'

"He'd apologize' I suppose."

"Apologize' Humph' He'd pick 'em all up.

But I was just going to."

"Going to? You're a cyclone, aren't you''

Dennis looked puzzled but without more talking he put up his trousers, got down on his knees and went to work.

"Say," said Jerry finally when three neatly-assorted piles had been brought out of the chaos. 'Do you like chocolate cak ?"

I adore I do," admitted Dennis.

"And doughnuts?"

"You're right"

"And mince pie?"

"I like it very much indeed."

"Well I'm going to give you a sample of each while I'm washing these dishes. Sort of try 'em on the dog, you might say to see how they go. I'm going to let you in on a secret. I'm not the girl. I'm the [illegible] of one of them There's three of us, Aunt Genevieve and Meg and me You'll get to know us better some day We're [illegible] and proud as Lucifer the whole bunch of us That is Aunt Genevieve and Meg are I'm not."

Jerry set a plate of good things before him and perched on the edge of the table Well they think I'm the limit because I've got no family feeling as they put it Our mother's father was the seventh son of a seventh son of other and our fathers relatives are all away from England I [illegible] to visit some of them Jerry stopped then suddenly. Say, how's the pie?"

"It's just splendid," said Dennis. "I never tasted anything like it. You are a wonderful cook, aren't you?"

"They all say that, and that's the trouble. When anybody's coming I have to spend days in the kitchen here to get ready, and I'm nearly dead. Why, you ought to see that pantry I've baked doughnuts and cakes and pies and all sorts of things to get ready for the earl."

"The earl?"

"Oh I forgot I didn't finish about Meg When she went to England there was an earl she liked very much and when she found he was coming to America this week she invited him to visit us. He's coming tomorrow. That's why I'm fixing things. Gee, I'm tired."

"It's too bad" said Dennis sympathetically, looking down at the head of flying curls. "But I'm going to help wash these pans and things. You don't need to worry about my place. The grocery boy had an accident and I was passing. They took him home and the truck to the garage. There was only one box of groceries to be delivered, so I said I'd bring it in my car. Come on, what do you do first?"

Jerry looked away in dismay. "Nothing. I'm not going to let you help now. You run along home to your wife and family and tell them the joke on me."

"I have no wife and family, and I can't see any joke on you. Come on and show me what to do."

"No."

"You must. I've never had my word disputed and I'm not going to now Get me the—the towel and you wash the things."

Suddenly Jerry laughed. "I hope Aunt Genevieve and Meg don't come in and find you here."

"I hope they do," declared Dennis. "I'm proud of my company, and I was never so happy in my life."

"But it isn't a question of you. It's me. Won't you tell me your name and where you live?"

The kitchen door opened suddenly and Meg hurried in.

"Perhaps Miss Meg can answer for me," said Dennis

And Meg did "The earl," she gasped just loud enough for Jerry to hear

A DIFFERENCE IN THE INVESTMENT

The Western Canada Farm Profits Are Away in Excess.

[illegible] H Barr, of Iowa, holds [illegible] acres of land in Saskatchewan [illegible] he has fenced and rented [illegible] for pasture or cultivation, [illegible] good interest on the investment.

[illegible] Barr says that farm land at [illegible] is held at $150 per acre. [illegible] farms are in a high state of cultivation with splendid improvements [illegible] barns stables and silos and [illegible] average return from the [illegible] to three per cent per annum on investment.

In 1915 his half share of crops on a quarter section in Saskatchewan [illegible] on new breaking gave him 85 per cent on the capital invested [illegible] acre. The crop yield was 35 bushels per acre. This year the same quarter section sown to Red Fife on stubble gave 3,286 bushels. His share 1,643 bushels of 1 Northern at $1.56 per bushel, gave him $2,563.08. Seed half the twine and half the threshing bill cost him $453.00. Allowing a share of the expense of his annual inspection trip charged to this quarter section even to $110.00, and he has left $2,000.00, that is 50 per cent of the original cost of the land. Anyone can figure up that another average crop will pay not 2 or 3 per cent on investment, as in Iowa but the total price of the land. Mr. Barr says: "That's no joke now."

Mr Barr was instrumental in bringing a number of farmers from Iowa to Saskatchewan in 1913. He referred to one of them, Geo. H. Kerton, a tenant farmer in Iowa. He bought a quarter-section of improved land at $32.00 an acre near Hanley. From proceeds of crop in 1914, 1915 1916, he has paid for the land. Mr. Barr asked him a week ago: "Well George what shall I tell friends down home for you?" The reply was: "Tell them I shall never go back to be a tenant for any man." Another man, Charles Haight realized $18,000 in cash for his wheat crops in 1915 and 1916.

Mr Barr when at home devotes most of his time to raising and dealing in live stock. On his first visit of inspection to Saskatchewan, he realized the opportunity there was here for raising cattle. So his quarter sections not occupied, were fenced and rented as pasture lands to farmers adjoining. His creed is "Let nature supply the feed all summer while cattle are growing, and then in the fall, take them to farmsteads to be finished for market. There is money in it." Advertisement.

Stinging Retort.

There was a grim determined look in little Jones' eye as he walked into the optician's imposing premises.

"I want a pair of glasses immediately," he demanded. "Good strong ones."

The assistant glanced significantly at the card labeled "Sight Testing Room," and switched on his best professional smile. Then switched it off again as he observed by little Jones' manner.

"Good strong ones," he inquired.

"Yes, strong ones," affirmed Jones. "I was fined in the county yesterday and made a fearful blunder."

Oh! The assistant rubbed his hands together. "Mistook a stranger for your wife, perhaps?"

"No, not the blunt reputable, trustworthy. Bought a violet."

"CASCARETS" FOR SLUGGISH BOWELS

No sick headache, sour stomach, biliousness or constipation by morning.

Get a 10-cent box now.

Turn the rascals out—the headache, biliousness, indigestion, the sick, sour stomach and foul gases—turn them out to-night and keep them out with Cascarets.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never know the misery caused by a lazy liver clogged bowels or an upset stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse your stomach, remove the sour fermenting food; take the excess bile from your liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret to-night straightens you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from any drug store means a clear head, sweet stomach and clean, healthy liver and bowel action for months. Children love Cascarets because they never gripe or sicken. Adv.

The Man Who Forgot

A NOVEL

By JAMES HAY, JR.

GARDEN CITY NEW YORK
1915

"It was such a brutal thing to do!" she exclaimed, "and so unnecessary, so inexcusable, so unforgivable!"

"All of us make mistakes," he said gently.

"I did not know of it until this morning," she explained further, shame for her father's discourtesy flushing her cheeks. "He told me at breakfast what he had done."

"I am sorry—sorry it has annoyed you," he assured her.

"I can't understand," she said, "why he did it." She added: "Even if he disliked you, disapproved of you, why couldn't he have made some allowance for—for the fact that I was your friend?"

Perhaps he smiled, "that was what he didn't exactly like."

When they had swung into the road that follows southward along the bank of the river, she stopped the machine.

"I think I'd like to walk down there and stand on the edge of the river," she informed him. "Somehow, talking, real conversation, is so very difficult in a machine."

They went down the sloping bank, the long grass pulling at their feet, and stood on the rocks that riprapped the bank. Behind them was the tall, wavy curtain of the great willows. Before them the river, slow and heavy, was like dulled silver except when, here and there, the breeze moved it to catch the whiteness of the sunlight. Beyond the water were the Virginia hills, all yellow and gold and crimson, a light blue haze hanging over them like a thin veil. A freight train, bound southward, rattled across the long bridge. And far down, below the bridge, sounded a steamboat's whistle.

They seemed strangely alone, unnaturally isolated from the rest of the world.

"What a lovely city it is!" he said, voicing his enthusiasm. "And what lovely places hedge it about! It is the loveliest city in all the world!"

"Yes," she agreed absently.

She was drawing off one of her gloves, not knowing at all what she did. She was regarding the haze covered hills.

"I wanted to tell you," she began, a little hesitant, "that I—wanted to tell you with all the earnestness of which I am capable that I always shall be your friend."

He was unaccountably touched by her manner.

"You are very kind," he said, making a bow which, in spite of its apparent lightness of gesture, somehow emphasized his real feelings.

"Oh!" she replied desperately, "it's so easy to be kind!"

"Not altogether, I think."

"But," she continued, "I am also very humble."

She drew her lower lip between her teeth, and stood a moment, pulling slowly through her gloved hand the glove she had taken off.

"Humble!" he exclaimed.

"Yes," she said, her voice lowered, "humble."

She turned to him abruptly, dropping her hands to her sides so that she faced him, willowy straight, her eyes soft and glowing with the golden sunlight that fell full upon her face. Her lips trembled.

"I know! I know now!" she said.

Involuntarily, he took one step backward, away from her.

"Know what?" he asked, wondering.

She was pressing her lips together now, to imprison sobs.

"It was so foolish of me not to have known the other day!" she reproached herself. "You cannot tell me who you are because you don't know."

Her eyes were a mandate that he tell her the truth.

"That is true," he said, inexplicably calm. "I do not know who I am."

He waited for her to speak and saw that she could not.

"I should have told you when you asked me," he added. "I should have known that you would have understood."

"How foolish I was! How foolish we all are!" she said at last, trusting herself to speak. "Unless tragedy is plainly labelled and unless it cries aloud to us in the streets, we never see it. We never remember that all tragedies are clothed in commonplace."

"Don't! don't!" he begged. "I cannot endure to see you grieved."

"But you are so brave," she excused herself anew. "You laugh, and work, and do great things—I—I never suspected."

He held out his hand as if he supplicated her.

"Please," he implored, "do not—this little trouble of mine should not—should not distress you so."

"Ah," she sighed, "but it does."

He felt his helplessness keenly.

"But it shouldn't," he urged. "Why should it?"

Her eyes, meeting his, were deep and unafraid. His momentary thought was that she was very brave.

"Because you love me," she said, her glance still unwavering.

He smiled and bowed again, reverence possessing him.

"Ah, you have seen it!" he observed, lifting his head so that the sunlight left no line of his face untouched. As he spoke, there was a gentle raillery in his tone. It was like a delicate armor to enable him to withstand her loveliness. "But let me, in my own justification, explain."

"Ah," she breathed, "tell me."

"You have been to me," he said, the false levity lacing his words together, "what any man's conscience is to him, if he regards his conscience as his king. That is what you have been to me—something enmeshed in the glamor of the moon—a far glimpse of the lovely flowers of paradise."

"I should not have been that," she interrupted quickly, reproaching him.

The tenderness in her eyes throve.

"But to you I could have been——" he began, more than ever the graceful actor of a light comedy. "Why, I was like a jester in varicolored hose dancing on a battlement, dizzy high, for the passing pleasure of a lady of the court."

He smiled and spread out his hands in deprecation. The comedy was weakening.

"You know," he reminded her, "the clowns were always funnier when they were maimed."

"How can you?" she rebuked him.

"It could not have been otherwise." Rebellion against what he had suffered forced him to seriousness. "That is what I am—a jester, a thing for all the world to laugh at—the sport of fortune! Why, I don't even know my own name. My blank past robs the future of the promise of any good thing. I cannot remember. My memory is dead."

"And you have never known—who you were—since that night in the mission—in my mission?"

"Never—since then."

She looked again toward the hills. A touring car whizzed along the road behind them. The boat's whistle, far downstream, blew again. From somewhere up the river came the voices of fishermen in a rowboat. The world was all about them, but, to him, it had shrivelled to the width of a woman's eyes.

"And drinking, dissipation, whatever you please to call it," she said, her glace still toward the hills, "did this thing to you?"

"It must have; I am persuaded of that," he answered, bending forward a little, as if his longing impelled him.

She turned and took one step toward him. They were very close together. As they stood so, he caught the fragrance of her hair.

"Why don't you try to find it—this past?" she asked.

She spoke the language of resoluteness.

"I have tried to find it," he answered, a trifle heavily. "I am trying. My life is an agony of exploration, an anguish of disappointment. I have employed agents, trusted men. I employ them now. The absurdity of it! They search the world to find out who I am!"

"They will find out! They must!"

He stood and regarded her, worshipping the valor in her eyes.

"So far," he said, "they have proved only that I amounted to nothing. Nowhere have they found even the shadow of my vanished personality." Despair clouded his face for a moment. "It seems incredible that any human being could have amounted to so little!"

Anxiety, something like indecision, assailed her for the first time.

"And the effect of all this on your work—here now?" she asked, her lips uncertain again.

"You were right in what you told me the last time I saw you," he admitted. "I know now they will attack me—the lobbyists—on the assumption that I have something in my life to conceal." He laughed lightly, without mirth. "That, you know, is rather amusing."

She did not smile.

"And it will hurt the work?" she persisted.

"I hope not," he said. "There is this to our advantage—it has gone so far, this movement, that it will keep on, no matter what happens."

She stood, leaning all her weight on one foot, her position making it seem that her shoulders stooped a little. Her eyes were still a question.

"I see now," he upbraided himself, "how foolish, how tragically foolish, I was in the beginning in trying to run away from my trouble—my disgrace. Nobody asked questions when I first began this work. Who was I, that anybody should bother? I was a nondescript, a nonentity, circusing on the street corners. Then, later, when a few began to look up to me, I told myself it did not matter what I had been."

"It didn't, really," she comforted him. "People are forever asking what a man has done. That is now what matters. It is what he is, what he wants to be. If they would only understand that about everybody!"

"The truth is, I suppose," he went on, eager to make her understand, "I was ashamed of not being like other people. And I tried to hide my difference from them. That was my great mistake. We can't hide anything we've ever done, can we? We are today very much what we did and thought yesterday, and we will be tomorrow, in great part, what we do today."

"Yes," she assented, "each year is beautified or made hideous by the lengthening shadows of those other years we have left behind."

"So," he forced again the raillery into his voice, "there is nothing more—nothing at all, is there?"

"Is it too late now to stop hiding?" she put a final question.

He could see that she was fighting against her bewilderment, trying to beat down the doubts that assailed her.

"Under the circumstances, yes," he declared, putting with emphasis the result of all the thought he had given the problem. "Nobody would believe nobody in all the world but you."

She smiled sunnily.

"You will know always that I do believe?"

"That knowledge," he said earnestly, "is to me like an order of knighthood."

She held out her hand and shook his, manlike.

"Now," she concluded, "let me drive you back. Gracious! How long we've been!"

Her cheerfulness, however, was assumed. It disappeared utterly when she felt the trembling of the hand which he put to her elbow as she stepped into the machine. As they rode, they were silent, or, when they did speak, it was of inconsequential things. He felt that there was nothing more to say. There was nothing, he knew. That was his tragedy. There was nothing more she could say. That was her grief.

In spite of his protestations, she drove him to his office.

"Always," she said, as he told her good by, "you will know that I believe."

"Yes," he replied; "and always you will know that I—"

He checked himself.

"Yes," she said gently, the candor of her eyes like a benediction, "I shall know—always."

CHAPTER NINE

Waller, languid and slow, entered the reception room of the offices occupied by the committee on amendments to the constitution. Then, very deliberately and with great care, he removed his hat and held it, with his cane, in his left hand while he closed the door.

It was a hobby of his that stupid people were the most interesting in the world.

"They have a secret," he explained, "something about them mysterious, which, so far, nobody has been able to analyze. Why are they cheerful? Why are they glad to live? What makes them contented? Wrapped in dreary ignorance, they enthrone themselves on content and defy the world. Why is it? It's a pretty little psychological problem which, by careful study, I hope some day to solve."

He found himself now in a position to continue his studies. The room was occupied by Miss Elsie Downey, a stenographer. She was blond, by birth, and of a perfect complexion, by purchase. She had blue eyes, like a doll's, and she overshot the height of fashion in her dress. Her smile was eternal. Her voice went into the nasal on her high notes, and it was always on a high note that she ended her sentences.

"Blond headed, boneheaded and garrulous—but good hearted," he had described her on a previous occasion, and had added: "I wonder why she is good hearted. I wish I knew."

"Good afternoon, Miss Downey," he greeted her, going slowly toward the typewriter desk at which she sat.

"How do you do, Mr. Waller!" She made the response shoot up in linguistic sound, like a ladder.

"Is that high minded, constructive statesman, Mr. Mannersley, around—or any other noble defender of the grog shops?" he inquired, swinging his cane and smiling.

Miss Downey became indignant.

"You shouldn't talk about Mr. Mannersley that way!" she objected.

"You are a disappointment, Miss Downey," he sighed. "You, too, spring hotly to the defense of anybody who happens to be your payroll."

"Oh, Mr Waller!" She turned toward her notebook.

"And Mr. Smith—has he been in?"

"What Mr Smith?"

"The only Mr. Smith in the world—the somewhat energetic gentleman who'll make the skylights of the House rattle before he gets through."

"Oh, that Mr. Smith!" Miss Downey's enthusiasm broke her record for staccato enunciation. "I'm just dying to see him. Madge Atkins—she works down in Congressman Blore's office, you know—Madge says she's seen him. She says his shoulders are just loves!"

Waller balanced himself against his cane and looked at Miss Downey in frank and open admiration.

"Will you," he asked, "tell me something?"

"Why, certainly, Mr Waller!"

"Now, then, do you believe life's worth living?"

"Of course it is."

"I thank you. If you have found it so, it must be so. I bow to your superior judgment." He bowed almost to the floor. "But Mr. Mannersley—is he in?"

"Yes, he's in, but he's engaged."

"Then I'll wait."

He took a chair at the table in the center of the room. On his right was the door leading into Mannersley's private office, and on the left another opening into the meeting room of the committee.

He addressed another question to Miss Downey.

"I beg your pardon," he said, in his most winning tone, "but do you drink?"

"Oh, I take a cocktail whenever I go out to dinner, Mr. Waller."

"You do?" His surprise seemed immense.

"Why certainly!" Her manner would have been the same if she had slapped him on the wrist.

"Why?"

"Oh, you know everybody thinks you ain't exactly—well, swell, if you don't do that!"

Cholliewollie looked at her in silence a few moments.

"I was right," he assured her solemnly. "I've been right all along. These whisky people who say prohibition isn't worth anything because, while the "dry" territory grows, the per capita consumption of alcohol increases, have overlooked the real facts in the situation. You see, now, the women drink. Not so many years ago only the men drank. I must tell Smith about that."

"All my girl friends drink—when they go out," she confided. "It gives you an appetite."

"For what?" Cholliewollie, having asked the question without due consideration, hastened to say: "Never mind! For the food, of course."

"Of course!" Miss Downey stabbed his ears with the exclamation.

"You see," confessed Bella, rather shamefacedly. "I'm a bit of a novice at cooking. Tell me, do you make cakes from a recipe or a pattern?"

LIFT YOUR CORNS OFF WITH FINGERS

How to loosen a tender corn or callus so it lifts out without pain.

Let folks step on your feet hereafter, wear shoes a size smaller if you like, for corns will never again send electric sparks of pain through you, according to this Cincinnati authority.

He says that a few drops of a drug called freezone, applied directly upon a tender, aching corn, instantly relieves soreness, and soon the entire corn, root and all, lifts right out.

This drug dries at once and simply shrivels up the corn or callus without even irritating the surrounding skin.

A small bottle of freezone obtained at any drug store will cost very little, but will positively remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet.

If your druggist hasn't stocked this new drug yet, tell him to get a small bottle of freezone for you from his wholesale drug house.—adv.

FRENCH TRADE DANGER AND REMEDY DISCUSSED

Paris (by mail)—Frenchmen who believe in developing the home market as the best means of promoting and economic recovery after the war are calling for a "grand master" of raw materials, or something like the imperial office for the economic transition period in Germany. A competent man with sufficient legal authority and will full control of the utilization of the natural resources of France, they think, would accomplish in the restoration of general industries a work comparable to what M Albert Thomas, the minister of munitions, has accomplished in the production of arms and projectiles.

The French colonies, it is pointed out, would be a rich field for the efforts of such a department Algeria has petroleum, coper and zinc Other North African colonies have rich deposits of copper, zinc and antimony while the southern Sahara, Dahomey and Congo are rich in vegetable oils and seeds for the manufacture of vegetable fats Of this production Germany bought and exported 75 per cent before the war

Great Britain is profiting from the blockade and from the poverty of the French merchant marine to displace Germany in this African trade, buying up allogeneous products of the French colonies for the time being. The danger of being distanced by Great Britain in the utilization of the products of their colonies is not overlooked by Frenchmen who, after 25 years of comparative neglect, realize now what they lost by too little attention to the resources of the colonies.

The development of those resources by the aid of a rebuilt merchant marine and the extension of her new chemical industries and new steel and iron works born of war needs, is much counted upon for the revival of French trade.

Ruthless War at Sea.

From the Chicago News.

Germany's announcement to the United States that unrestricted warfare at sea will begin today gives the final blow to the rights of neutrals. Former promises are abrogated and the plea that necessity knows no law, international or other, is made with perfect calm Germany apparently is ready to take any consequences which may follow this methodical invasion of neutral rights at sea

The American public within the last few days has been officially informed for the first time of the extreme seriousness of the food shortage in Germany and Austria-Hungary On Tuesday Raymond E Swing correspondent of the Daily News in Berlin, was permitted to say in a wireless message on the food situation "Conditions have reached a critical stage" Thus is the plea of necessity presented In its note to the American government Germany says "The British government persists in its war of starvation, which certainly does not touch the military strength of its adversary, but which forces women and children, the sick and aged, to undergo painful privation for their country's sake which is harming the national vitality" The new situation arising from its enemies' refusal to enter into peace negotiations, says Germany, forces it to new decisions.

The people of the United States necessarily must view with gravest apprehension the present mood of Germany Unrestricted submarine warfare can scarcely fail to force this nation into taking stern action. Much will depend, perhaps, upon the effectiveness of the preparations of the entente nations to combat the enemy submarines, of which there are known to be a great many, including mine laying submarines which do their work below the the surface of the water

In England the belief is freely expressed that another great fight between British and German battle fleets is impending, the fight being preceded by increased activity on the part of Austrian warships in the Adriatic Such activity recently has been in evidence. On land the preparations for desperate offensives on both the eastern and western fronts seemingly are now far advanced Britain has thrown additional troops into France and has taken over more of the fighting line Portugal has sent considerable forces to aid the French and British From the point of view of the neutral nations, indeed, the efforts now being put forth by all the belligerents to accomplish something decisive at the earliest possible moment give them cause for both apprehension and hope—apprehension that their rights will be invaded to an intolerable degree and hope that the intensity of the impending struggle will make it relatively short

Ten Reasons for Universal Training.

From the Universal Military Training League.

First—It would apply alike to poor boy and rich boy, put both in the same tent, lead to a better understanding between them, make for a better democracy and eliminate caste and snobbery in America.

Second—It would take the lad in his 19th year when his earning power is small and before he has undertaken the marriage relationship and upbuild his physique, teach him respect for his flag, and make of him a trained defender of his country.

Third—It would not put the boy into a regular, professional army, but would send him back into the paths of industry a stronger and broader character.

Fourth—It would make the trained lad the chief protector of the nation and thus relieve husband and father, the mainstay of the family, of industry and commercial enterprise, from military service.

Fifth—It would make the weak lad virile and the strong lad sympathetic and respectful

Sixth—It would be actually "universal" in that wealth could not purchase immunity and all mentally and physically fit would have to train

Seventh—It would create a new national morale and insure for the future strong fathers, healthy men and women in the centuries to come.

Eighth—It would be the antithesis of militarism, as under universal military training the defense of the country (except for the first line) would rest upon trained citizens. This would render a large standing army unnecessary and get entirely away from militarism

Ninth—It would revive patriotism in America—not the brass band and parade the street sort—but real patriotism which says that inasmuch as all of use share the nation's perils and responsibilities, all of us, in short, must so love our country as to train and be ever ready to defend her honor

Tenth—It would make America ready and therefore safe.

As the Seed So the Crop.

From Financial America.

Secretary Houston, of the department of agriculture, has issued a warning to the farmers of the country regarding the grain seed supply for the next crops. He calls attention to certain facts which farmers should keep in mind in order to insure themselves of a supply of good seed grain for sowing next spring.

The wheat crop of 1916 in the spring wheat states of the upper Mississippi valley was badly injured, it is remembered, by rust and other diseases. Not only was the yield much reduced, but the quality of the grain was generally poor. Much of the grain was light in weight and was shrunken, and contained many diseased kernels. Seed is procurable from such plants, but obviously some of it may be diseased and may cause disease in plants grown from them, induce death before maturity, and may spread to other plants.

Secretary Houston recommends a careful screening and fanning of seed to remove all those grains which are not good for sowing, and urges that in no case the farmer be tempted, even by high prices, to part with his good seed wheat and thus place himself in the way of having to rely on shrunken and diseased seed for sowing purposes.

Gen. Funston, Philippine Hero And U.S. Commander on Border, Dies as He Talks With Friends

San Antonio, Tex., ...s.—The body of Maj Gen. Frederick Funston, who died here suddenly last night, will be taken to San Francisco tonight for burial.

Short services will be held at Fort Sam Houston this afternoon and the body will then be taken to the Southern Pacific station to await the train for the west. It will be accompanied by Capt. Fitzhugh Lee, aide to General Funston, and a guard of six enlisted men.

Mrs. Funston is at her home in San Francisco, and requested the body be sent there for burial.

Major General Pershing notified the war department today that he had assumed command of the southern department, embracing the American forces on the Mexican border, which post was held by Major General Funston. Secretary Baker said General Pershing's succession was automatic, he being the next in grade to General Funston General Pershing will retain command until a permanent successor is named by the war department.

General Funston was 51 years old Ever since March, 1916, when he was placed in command of all United States forces on the Mexican border, General Funston had worked at an unusual pace. At critical times in border developments he frequently remained on duty 24 hours at a time The handling of regulars disposed at various stations on the border, the Pershing expedition, and of later rearrangement of regular troops while providing for the return of national guardsmen, have entailed an enormous amount of detail work, probably exceeding that which fell to any commanding general of the United States army since the civil war.

Served Country 19 Years.

Only yesterday General Funston completed orders for the return of the last of the guardsmen.

The picturesque and dashing capture of Aguinaldo, the Filipino rebel chief, was the achievement which brought Funston prominently to the attention of the American people, but he performed many services for his country besides that which were probably more difficult. His administration of affairs in Vera Cruz, where he carried out the president's orders with a firm hand, simply holding the city when every influence about him was centered upon forcing the American army into actual fighting with the Mexicans, probably was the most notable service in his career.

The American troops had been in possession of Vera Cruz only a few days when one of the Mexican generals sent in a message saying in most polite terms that he was unable to longer restrain his troops, and that they were about to advance and drive the Americans into the sea.

Little Relaxation Lately.

"If you can't hold your troops back, I can," was the laconic message Funston sent back.

Because of the amount of work which has fallen to him, General Funston's only reaction or relaxation for nearly a year had been an occasional dinner party with a few friends.

Only recently General Funston returned from an inspection trip which took his as far as Nogales, Ariz. That, with the trip to Brownsville, Tex., and a brief visit to Austin, Tex., last year, was the only occasion when he has been absent from his desk since the border trouble developed.

Two weeks ago General Funston suffered an attack of indigestion. To use his own expression, "I fought it out alone." Later he placed himself under the care of Lieut. Col. M. W. Ireland, of the medical corps, southern department, and regained normal health and spirits.

The body was taken to a local undertaking establishment.

Lieut. Col. M. W. Ireland, medical corps, United States army, who has been General Funston's physician for some time, said:

"General Funston's death was caused by angina sclerosis of the arteries of the heart. Death was almost immediate and without pain."

Youngest Major General.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 20.—Major General Funston's sudden death came as a great shock to high officials of the army and to President Wilson. He was one of the distinguished commanders of the service, and one of whom greater things were expected in the future. The youngest major general of the line, vigorous and apparently healthy, he had been counted on by his superiors for many more years of active service.

The news reached the war department in a brief dispatch from the headquarters of the southern department. It was telephoned to Secretary Baker's home, where a dinner was being given to the president, with most of the ranking army officers in Washington among the guests.

Mrs. Funston Prostrated.

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 20.—Mrs. Frederick Funston, who is living here with her three children at the Presidio, was informed by Maj. Gen. J. Franklin Bell, commanding the western division, of the death of General Funston. She is prostrated with grief.

Mrs. Funston was entertaining her sister, Mrs. William O. Cullen, of this city, at the Presidio residence when the news of the general's death was brought to her.

The children are Frederick, jr., 13; Barbara, 8, and Elizabeth, 3 years old.

Mrs. Funston, who was Miss Eda Blankhart before her marriage, has two sisters here, Mrs. William C. Cullen and Mrs. Frank Howlett. Mrs. Funston came here a month ago from Fort Sam Houston with her children to avoid the approaching hot weather there.

His Picturesque Career.

General Funston was born in Carlisle, Ohio, in 1865, and was reared on a Kansas farm He had a remarkable career before he became a soldier. Few people knew that his first work was as a scientist with a bent toward botany. As an agent of the department of agriculture in 1891 he took part in the Death valley expendition, then he explored Alaska and the British northwest and crossed Alaska to the Arctic ocean and traveled from McKenzie river to the Bering sea, a journey of about 3,500 miles. He camped in the Klondike during the winter of 1893 and then alone floated down the Yukon in a canoe, a journey of hundreds of miles through a wilderness, without seeing another living soul. Soon after that he resigned from the department of agriculture and traveled in Mexico

When the last Cuban insurrection broke out Funston applied to the revolutionary junta in New York for service with the rebel army, but the Cubans suspected him of being a spy or an agent of the United States running down violators of neutrality laws. Finally he convinced them of his intentions and for many weeks in rooms on an out of the way street in the lower east side of New York Funston instructed recruits in the handling of machine guns, of which the Cubans were ignorant. Soon afterward he was taken into the Cuban army with a commission.

He Never Knew Fear.

As a student at the University of Kansas, when he weighed less than 100 pounds, he conquered a 200-pound "bad man" who threatened him with a razor. To add to the giant's humiliation, Funston marched him through the streets at the point of a revolver, to a police station

A few years later, while city editor of a paper in Fort Smith, Ark., young Funston stirred up intense feeling by attacking editorially the publication's own political party leaders during the absence of his editor in chief Many threats are said to have been made against Funston and the newspaper property, but he remained on guard until his superior returned and then turned over the plant unharmed. Incidentally, Funston also resigned

Along the Santa Fe railroad they still recall how Funston, as a passenger train conductor, threw a drunken cowboy off a train and later, when he hurled a rock through a coach window, pursued him several miles on foot while the train waited.

Escapes Death as Spy.

Funston's first experience on the firing line came in Cuba, where he commanded General Gomez's artillery with remarkable results. After engaging in 22 battles and being wounded three times he resigned his command because 50 guerrillas who had aided the Spaniards were executed against his wishes. Captured by Spaniards on his way to Havana, he escaped death by swallowing a letter to the president of Cuba which would have proved his identity.

While a colonel of the famous Twentieth Kansas volunteer infantry in the Philippine war, Funston performed feats of bravery that brought him the title of brigadier general His capture of Aguinaldo and his fording of the Rio Grande rives at Columpit under fire featured his work

Funston has been described by his superiors as absolutely fearless. Ever ready to plunge into danger, he cared little whether his force equalled that of his opponent. One day, the story goes, when it appeared certain the Filipinos would destroy three companies under Funston's command, Gen. Harrison Gray Otis inquired of the colonel how long he could hold his position.

Barred from West Point.

"Until I am mustered out'" Funston replied, and he made good by repulsing the Filipinos.

When the volunteers were discharged Funston retained his rank as a member of the regular army As a regular he made a mark by maintaining order in San Francisco during the disaster of 1906. Temporarily in charge of the troops at the Presidio, when the disturbance came he quickly declared martial law and set about obtaining accommodations for the homeless, keeping down the cost of food and arresting trouble makers.

The ambition of Funston's youth was to go to West Point, but he failed in an entrance examination. In later years he repeatedly outranked West Pointers who were in school when he failed of admission.

Physically, Funston was one of the smallest men in the United States army. He was barely 5 feet and 5 inches tall, and usually weighed less than 120 pounds. In civil life he was modest and retiring.

Burial at Presidio.

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 20.—Definite arrangements for the burial in the national cemetery here at the Presidio of Maj. Gen. Frederick Funston, who died suddenly last night at San Antonio, Tex., had not been completed here early today. Maj. Gen. J. Franklin Bell, commanding the western division, telegraphed last night at Mrs. Funston's request, it was understood, to have the body forwarded here. It was expected to arrive Friday and a full military funeral will be accorded the late general. The funeral will be held Saturday or Sunday.

Baker to Be Represented.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 20.—President Wilson and other high officials as well as army officers generally expressed deep regret today over the sudden death of Maj. Gen. Frederick Funston at San Antonio last night. Many of them sent messages of condolence to Mrs. Funston, now visiting in San Francisco.

War department officials and army officers stood ready today to assist in bestowing the highest military honors at the burial. It is believed that Secretary of War Baker may send a personal representative to attend the funeral.

Toronto—The consular service of the United States was condemned by Poultney Bigelow, American author, in an address here today before the Canadian club. He also ridiculed the American government's neutrality

Mr Bigelow declared the American consular service comprised "broken down, wheezy political buzzers, wornout lawyers and dentists, broken brokers, men who could not earn a living in any honest or respectable business."

"These are the men I find I have to go to as representing the majesty of my nation and I have to sew my pockets up before I enter their offices. Then I have to go to the British consulate to get what I want."

Too Sick To Work

Many Women in this Condition Regain Health by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Convincing Proof of This Fact.

Ridgway, Penn. — "I suffered from female trouble with backache and pain in my side for over seven months so I could not do any of my work. I was treated by three different doctors and was getting discouraged when my sister-in-law told me how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had helped her. I decided to try it, and it restored my health, so I now do all of my housework which is not light as I have a little boy three years old." —Mrs. O. M. Rhines, Ridgway, Penn.

Mrs. Lindsey Now Keeps House For Seven.

Tennille, Ga.—"I want to tell you how much I have been benefited by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. About eight years ago I got in such a low state of health I was unable to keep house for three in the family. I had dull, tired, dizzy feelings, cold feet and hands nearly all the time and could scarcely sleep at all. The doctor said I had a severe case of ulceration and without an operation I would always be an invalid, but I told him I wanted to wait awhile. Our druggist advised my husband to get Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has entirely cured me. Now I keep house for seven and work in the garden some, too. I am so thankful I got this medicine. I feel as though it saved my life and have recommended it to others and they have been benefited" —Mrs. W. E. Lindsey, R. R. 3, Tennille, Ga.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Mistaken Zeal.

An old Australian farmer visited his daughter, who had antimacassars on the backs of her chairs. As he was sitting by the window, he spied the minister coming to visit "Jean," as she was called. As she went to answer the door, her father, not being accustomed to such finery, snatched all the antimacassars off the chairs and threw them under the table

"Aye, Jean, lass, glad I was to get yer washing oot o' the way afore the minister came in," said the old man when the minister had gone.

What Is Uric Acid?

Everyone has uric acid in the system, but naturally in small quantities. Excessive amount is caused by eating too much meat and foods that ferment in stomach. The kidneys, being the filters of the blood, are supposed to separate and throw the poisons out of the system. Weak, tired and overworked kidneys fail to do this, hence the uric acid accumulates and the urate salts are carried by the blood to the solid tissue structure, causing backache, lumbago, rheumatism, dropsy, drowsiness, and tired feeling.

To overcome the trouble is only a matter of toning up the kidneys, and this is best done by a treatment with Anuric, three times a day. Anuric is a recent discovery of Dr. Pierce of Buffalo, N. Y., and can be obtained at any drug store.

Experience taught Doctor Pierce that Anuric is a more powerful agent than lithia in dissolving uric acid, and it is then carried out of the system.

THE ONWARD MARCH of Bronchitis, and deep seated Coughs is arrested by Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

In those scrofulous conditions of the blood which invite Consumption; in severe, lingering Coughs, and Weak Lungs, which threaten you with this fatal disease, and when other help has failed—this medicine is a proved remedy.

As a blood-cleanser, strength-restorer, and tonic it is sure to benefit. In all lingering Bronchial and Throat affections, and in every disease that can be reached through the blood, it never fails to benefit or cure. In tablet or liquid form.

The machinery of the body needs to be well oiled, kept in good condition just as the automobile, steam engine or bicycle. Why should the human neglect his own machinery more than that of his horse or his engine? Yet most people do neglect themselves. Clean the system at least once a week with Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

May Church Dead

Miss May Church who has been gradually failing in health for some time past, died at her home here on Tuesday morning about 9:30. Miss Church's illness had prepared all her friends for the inevitable end, but none the less her death brings a distinct shock of sorrow and grief to well nigh all of Belmond's people Miss Church was one of the finest and most estimable characters that are given to this world to know and her sterling worth, her lovable disposition her unusual talents and her attractive personality had endeared her to everyone with whom she came in contact. The loss in her death is community wide, and she will be thus mourned, but to her father and mother whose only child she was, the loss is irreparable, and to them will the sympathy of all be extended.—Belmond Herald Press

Something Dead

The swedish jitney driver drew up beside the road, jumped out and with wrench in hand crawled under the auto. Taking advantage of the stop, the only passenger proceeded to eat a lunch consisting mostly of limburger cheese. Suddenly the driver emerged from beneath the machine and with bulging eyes and with his hand on his nose stood staring at the auto. "What's the matter?" asked the passenger innocently, between mouthfuls of cheese. "Ay don't know" said the driver, "but ay tank the engine ban' dead."

Burned With Hot Water

J. W. Berggren was quite severly burned Saturday morning when he fell from a stool while attempting to pour a kettle of boiling hot water into the coffee urn which he uses back of the lunch counter. His face and arms were both quite badly burned but did not cause him as much pain as he imagined that it would. Outside of having his face completely bandaged for a couple of days and letting his whiskers grow he has not been caused a great deal of inconvience. While it was a peculiar accident it could have proven very serious and he is thankful it turned out so luckily.

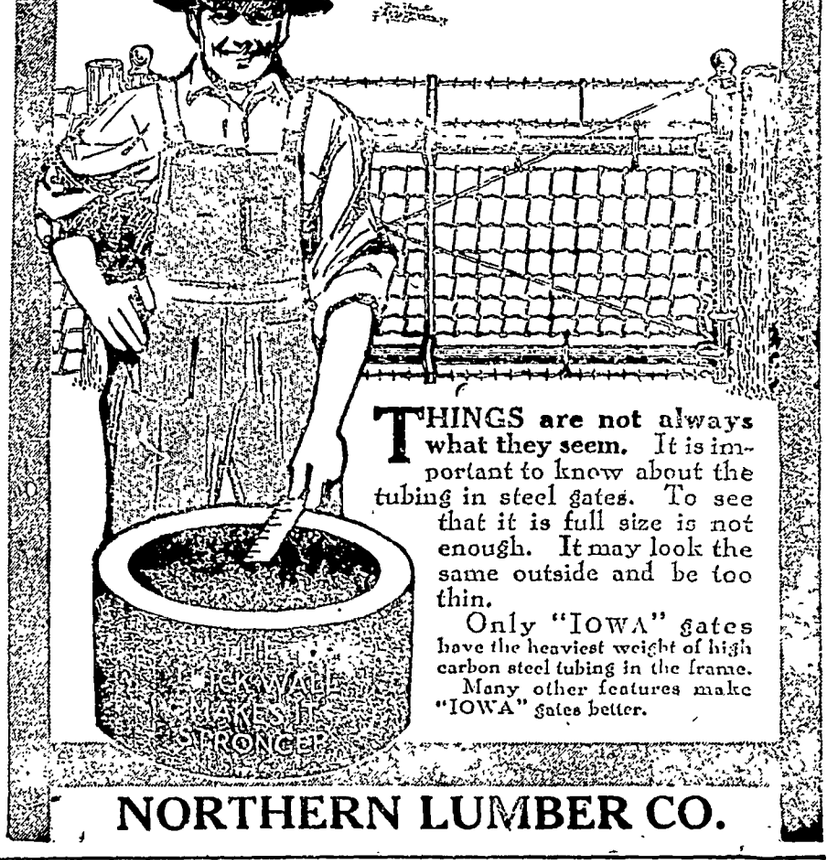
THE GAUGE OF AN HONEST GATE



THINGS are not always what they seem. It is important to know about the tubing in steel gates. To see that it is full size is not enough. It may look the same outside and be too thin.

Only "IOWA" gates have the heaviest weight of high carbon steel tubing in the frame. Many other features make "IOWA" gates better.

KLEMME, IOWA

A ship without a rudder is helpless, and so is an automobile without a steering wheel. That seems to be the thought behind a new invention designed to prevent the stealing of automobiles left at the curb. The new wheel is easily attachable and detachable, so that the owner can take it with him when he leaves his car. The wheel differs from the conventional construction in that it has a hub in which is a slot which fits over a similar sized block rigidly secured to the upper end of the steering post. The hub may be locked on the block in two different ways according to whether the locking bar is integral with the wheel or with the block. In the first method a small bar is pivoted over a small pin at the opposite side. In the second method a small bar is pivoted to the block at the center. As the bar is revolved about its pivot notches provided at the ends of the bar on opposite sides fit over pins on the hub. To prevent a thief from fitting a wheel of his own of the same type, the hub is provided with a socket into which a pin in the block fits.

Drought and the ravages of locusts, says Commercial Agent Frank H. von Motz, Buenos Aires, have so reduced pasturage and the available supplies of fodder in Argentina that the attention of planters and stock raisers has been focused on the feeding stuff question and the advantages of silos discussed with vigor. "I am told that many silos of reinforced concrete are being erected by local contractors. The machinery for preparing ensilage and for filling the silos will have to be imported and several American factories already have made arrangements for the sale of this class of machinery."

The girls of Rumanian country districts take great pride in a clear, healthy complexion, and just as the girls in our own rural districts a generation ago would get up before breakfast and steal down unobserved on the first day of May to wash their freckles away in the dew of the morning, so the girls of Rumania take red and white threads, twist them into cords, from which they suspend coins around their necks. These talismans they wear from the dead of winter until they see the first blossom of spring feeling sure that thereby they will guarantee themselves a milk-white complexion, rosy cheeks and ruby lips.

The beaded cane has gone out of fashion principally for the reason that such a thing is a source of danger living around loose ammonia is apt to do, but a whistle one has been invented by which help may be summoned by one who is attacked and for any reason unable to make an outcry. The apparatus is entirely hidden in the handle of the cane, but yet expected to be quickly reached by the hand of the person carrying it. Only two or three hard compressions will cause a whistling noise which will attract persons to the attention of anyone within a distance of several hundred yards.

Leather for shoe uppers for fancy purposes comes under two broad classes, those upper leather and sole leather, these so in their names simply being used respectively for the sole and for the other portions of the shoe. The upper leathers most commonly used are calfskin, coltskin or horsehide and Dull Calfskin comes in various finishes, patent wax, bright, dull, bordeaux and velvet. Coltskin and horsehide are used principally as the bases for patent leather but they are also employed in dull finish for men's high grade shoes. Kid may be glazed, patent, pebbled or morocco, according to the tanning process.

There was more fog during 1916 than in any previous year, according to figures compiled at the various signal stations for the United States bureau of lighthouses. The figures represent the total hours of fog or thick weather. The greatest fog was at the San Francisco Light Vessel, where there was a murk for 2,221 hours during the year, more than one-quarter of the time. The highest record on the Atlantic coast was at East Rock, Me., where 2,043 hours of fog were recorded, equivalent to about 23 per cent of the year.

The beings that can leap the greatest distance in proportion with their sizes are insects—the flea and grasshopper. The former can hop over an obstacle 600 times its height, which is the same as if a man could hop over a mountain 3,000 feet high. A grasshopper can jump 200 times its length. How tall are you? Four feet? Well, if you were a grasshopper you could leap 800 feet.

A new varnish which, when applied to metal, giving it a crystalized effect, is now on the market, and is known as crystallizing lacquer. It is as yet to be had only in black and in a transparent varnish that gives the effect of frosted glass except that the design is not so regular. Hat ornaments, belt buckles, buttons and all sort of articles may be coated with it with excellent results.

A bridge projected between San Francisco and Oakland will be the largest of its kind in the world. It will cost more than $2,000,000, and will carry three roadways and four railroad tracks. The supports will consist of 16 spans, two of which will be large enough to allow the passage beneath them of any ship entering San Francisco harbor.

The flying lemur lives in the Indian archipelago. It is from 2 to 3 feet in length and is furnished with a sort of membrane on each side of its body connecting its limbs with each other. This is extended and acts as a parachute while it takes its leaps, from a higher to a lower place. Sometimes it will soar from a distance of 300 feet, or about the length of a city block.

At Ellerslie, where William Wallace was born, there is an oak which is 21 feet in circumference. One summer, when the tree was in full leaf, Wallace and 300 of his soldiers are said to have hidden away in its upper branches, so escaping capture by the English.

URGE APPOINTMENT OF JUDGE CLARKE

Friends of Former Governor Will Urge His Appointment to Succeed Deemer.

Des Moines, Ia., March 3.—Friends of former Gov. George W. Clarke will urge his appointment as member of the Iowa supreme court to succeed the late H. E. Deemer, it became known yesterday.

Governor Harding returned to Des Moines today. In his absence from the city, applications for the position made vacant on the supreme court have been pouring into his office at the capitol. The list of candidates, or those who are being urged by county bar associations, includes most of the 59 district judges of Iowa, and many prominent lawyers who are not on the district bench.

Withrow Wants Place.

W. S. Withrow of Mount Pleasant, former member of the supreme court, has become a candidate for appointment on the court. He now is a member of the state board of parole, but it is known that he is not keen on remaining in that position. His appointment was confirmed a few weeks ago by the senate. When the Thirty-first general assembly provided for an additional judge of the high court, Withrow was appointed by Governor Clarke to the position. He remained two years and retired from the court when defeated for election by Judge Salinger.

Judge C. W. Mullan of Waterloo, former attorney general of Iowa, is being urged for the court appointment by attorneys of Black Hawk county and prominent men of the Third district.

Judge H. K. Evans, of Corydon, and Judge C. W. Vermillion, of Centerville, are being given support for appointment.

Officials are predicting that the appointee will be from the southern or eastern part of the state as most of the supreme judges now are from northern Iowa.

Other possible candidates are Judge Mulvay of Alida, Judge A. P. Barker of Clinton, Judge W. G. Sears, of Sioux City, Judge A. N. Hobson, of West Union and former Senator Saunders, of Council Bluffs.

BELIEVE KINSMAN MURDERED STORY CITY LAUNDRYMAN

Story City, Ia., March 3.—Circumstances leading to the belief the death of Spiro Lee, laundryman of Story City, found dead in bed in his establishment several days ago, are multiplied with the sudden appearance of Quam See, who claimed to be a cousin of the dead man. The proprietor was believed to be wealthy. It is believed his savings during the 20 years of residence in Story City and before the death of Lee, the aged Chinaman supposedly departed for Chicago leaving an address that would reach him in case his kinsman should become ill or should need help. The Chicago letters were not filed and an attempt made to locate the relative. Quam See appeared in Story City Saturday morning, declaring to officials that he had come in response to the telegram sent him concerning the death of Lee. When it developed that the telegram was not delivered to See and Chicago police were unable to locate the address, a warrant was issued for the arrest of See.

DIPLOMA OF IOWA GRADUATE IS RESTORED TO HIS FAMILY

Ames, Ia., March 3.—When the late R. S. Jordan of Boone, Ia., graduated from Iowa State college 40 years ago, he was unable to scrape up a fee of $5, which was required for the diploma and as a result the document was placed in the college vaults and was never brought out until a few days ago, when it was secured by George I. Miller of Los Angeles, Cal., a classmate of Mr. Jordan. At his death a few years ago Mr. Jordan left an estate valued at nearly $500,000. At the time of graduation Mr. Jordan with Mr. Miller and three other classmates from the class of 77 students were unable to pay their diploma fees. While visiting on the campus recently Mr. Miller remembered the incident and secured the diploma and presented it to Mr. Jordan's family.

SIOUX CITY COED IS VOTED UNIQUE HONOR

Ames, Ia., March 3.—Miss Matilda Johnson of Sioux City, a freshman in Iowa State college, has been listed as one of the 11 most beautiful girls attending school here. Seven of the number are to be selected by popular vote for the "Vanity Fair" section of this year's Bomb, the official college year book, which will appear in the spring. The group of girls selected by an impartial board is made up entirely of Iowa products and typify the beauty of the Hawkeye state.

NEW CADET RULING.

Ames, Ia., March 2.—Cadets at Iowa State college in the future are to be required to wear an insignia on their uniforms to prevent any confusion from distinguishing the cadet uniform with regular army uniforms. The order applies to other colleges where cadet corps are maintained it is declared.

COUNCIL BLUFFS—Two men claimed by postoffice inspectors to be leaders in the Angus gang of yeggs and postoffice robbers which has been responsible for a number of postoffice robberies in various parts of the state, were sentenced by Judge Wade. James O'Day and Thomas McGuire pleading guilt, to separate crimes were sentenced respectively to eight and nine years in the federal penitentiary. O'Day was implicated in the robbery of the postoffice at Woodward, Dallas county last September, and McGuire pleaded guilty to robbery of the postoffice at Extra, in Audubon county.

AMES—Iowa, the greatest of the live stock states, is becoming the model of the stockmen of the western hemisphere. Argentina has visited Iowa to copy after her live stock, and now Canada is doing it. J. D. McGregor, of Brandon, Man., Can., a capitalist, breeder and owner of large Canadian lands, as one of the representatives of a Canadian governmental commission appointed to inspect, investigate and report on methods of beef and pork production as found in the corn belt states, visited Ames this week.

COUNCIL BLUFFS—Clifford B. Fletcher, a telegrapher who stole a blank pass at Creston and by deception secured the agent's signature to it and was arrested in Colorado, was fined $100 and costs in federal court here by Judge M. J. Wade. The fine was paid by Fletcher's father from Wisconsin.

SIGNS TWO BILLS.

Washington, D. C., March 2.—President Wilson today signed the Indian appropriation bill and the Porto Rico bill giving residents of the island citizenship and changing the form of government.

THOUSANDS FEATHERED GAME WINTER'S TOLL

Severe Winter Responsible for Scarcity, Plymouth County Pioneers Say.

LeMars, Ia., March 3.—The severe weather of the present winter has exacted unexampled toll of winged game in Plymouth and adjacent counties, according to reports brought here by state officers and farmers. From nearly every quarter of this section have come reports of finding thousands of dead prairie chickens and quail, which had either frozen or starved.

Farmers, among them men who have been here since pioneer days, declare that they never before saw feathered game so scarce as it now is. By some, the theory is advanced that numberless prairie chickens which escaped freezing and starvation, left this section in search of more favorable conditions.

It is told that the birds' natural shelters were insufficient protection against the extreme cold of January and the forepart of February. Continued heavy snows kept their food buried.

Reports of prairie chicken and quail, emboldened by hunger, feeding with barnyard fowls, were common a few weeks ago. Farmers who now discuss the subject declare it has been a considerable time since they have seen either a prairie chicken or quail.

Robert Curran, of this city, deputy state game and fish warden, said he had learned that numbers of game birds, including pheasants on the state preserve east of Sioux Center, had frozen or starved to death.

FUNERAL OF JUDGE DEEMER WAS HELD YESTERDAY

Red Oak, Ia., March 3.—The funeral of the late Justice Horace E. Deemer was held here yesterday. Burial was made in Evergreen cemetery.

The funeral, which was held at the home at 2:30 o'clock, with Rev. Royal J. Montgomery, pastor of the Congregational church, in charge, was largely attended.

Rev. Mr. Montgomery was assisted in the services by Judges Scott M. Ladd and J. B. Weaver, of Des Moines, who delivered short funeral addresses, speaking of their associations with Judge Deemer in the legal profession, while the pastor spoke of his home life and his work in his home town and community which he loved so well. Hundreds of friends viewed the remains of the judge as the body lay in state at the home.

Governor Harding and large delegations of officials and attorneys from Des Moines, Council Bluffs and other Iowa cities were here to attend the funeral.

A memorial service was held by the bar association at the Montgomery county court house this afternoon, beginning immediately after the close of the funeral services.

MARSHALLTOWN—The Western Grocer company, which has branch houses in this city, Mason City, Dubuque, Cedar Rapids, Clinton, Oskaloosa and other points, has announced that it has taken out insurance policies ranging from $50 to $1,000, based on length of service, for all of its employes, in every branch of its business—from president down to office boys. The only requirement is that an employe has been in the company's service one year. The insurance also covers total disability, and the face of the policy is payable in the event that the employe becomes totally disabled.

AMES—To represent Iowa State college in the triangular debate between Michigan university, Purdue university and Iowa State college April 20, six men have been chosen in the final tryouts. They are: Affirmative, F. F. Wilcox, Marshalltown, Howard Peterson, Sheldahl, and H. S. Irwin, Ireton. Negative, E. F. Olsen, Rock Rapids; C. H. Ringgenberg, Ames, and W. H. Stacy, Osage. The affirmative team will debate Iowa State college at Ames, and the negative team, Purdue, at Lafayette, Ind.

CEDAR RAPIDS—The 22d annual convention of the Central Iowa Retail Lumbermens association ended yesterday with the election of the following officers: President, Joe Cowan, Cedar Falls; vice president, Louis Moore, Waterloo; secretary and treasurer, O. T. Barry, Cedar Rapids. Directors, G. D. Rose, Dubuque; C. Kinney, Grundy Center; W. R. Schoffield, Eldora; W. H. Vosberg, Gilman. The place of next meeting was left with the directors.

ROCK RAPIDS — The Ames short course, being held here, is well attended by the farmers from all parts of the county, and great interest is shown in the demonstrations. The boys from the farms are manifesting great interest in the stock judging and seed corn selections. The college sent two carloads of stock and equipment here.

PELLA—The Central college auditorium here burned. The total loss is $30,000, partly covered by insurance. Plans to rebuild at once have been made.

BIG BUSINESS AT CANAL.

Panama (by mail)—Traffic statistics for the Panama canal show that the number of ocean-going ships which made the transit through the canal in the calendar year 1916 was 1,253. Their aggregate net tonnage was 3,933,869 tons and they carried a total of 4,931,911 tons of cargo.

The number of ships was 7 per cent greater than in 1915, but in net tonnage, tolls, and cargo, the record for 1916 was a little less than 1 per cent less than 1915. The two years had about the same bulk of traffic, and both saw the canal closed for a period of three and a half months.

The tolls collected in 1916 were $3,677,695.60, which was not equal to the expenses. The ships in the United States coastwise trade were slightly over 3 per cent of the aggregate tonnage in 1916. In 1915 they were one-fourth of all the traffic, and in 1914 they were two-fifths. Most of the former coastwise ships have been diverted to the more profitable foreign trade.

SUFFRAGE IN INDIANA.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 1.—Gov. James Goodrich signed the woman's partial suffrage bill this morning. The law gives the women of Indiana the right to vote for presidential electors, delegates to the constitutional convention to be held next year, for practically all state officers except governor, lieutenant governor, secretary, treasurer and auditor of state, and for all county, city and township officers.

NORTH DAKOTANS BEAT INSURANCE COMBINE

Bismarck, N. D., March 1.—The North Dakota senate late yesterday definitely killed a bill that sought to foist on this state an anti-discriminatory insurance law similar to the measure on Iowa statute books. Senators here have been watching the fight brought on by the Lytle repeal act now pending before the state legislature at Des Moines.

IOWA NOW RANKING AS IRON PRODUCER

Plant Opened at Waukon Has a Capacity of 450 Tons a Day.

Iowa City, Ia., March 2.—Iowa must now be ranked among the iron producing states of the country, according to Dr. George F. Kay, head of the department of geology in the state university and geologist for the state of Iowa. For many years deposits of iron near Waukon in Allamakee county have been of scientific interest only, but recently a company demonstrated that the ores are of value commercially.

A plant has now been thoroughly equipped for mining and concentrating the ores at a cost which the company states will permit a good profit. The capacity of the plant is 450 tons a day. Jesse V. Howel, an assistant in geology in the university, in a report published by the Iowa geological survey, estimates that the total tonnage of the field is probably 10,000,000 tons.

The ore is chiefly a coarsely cellular, hydrated oxide of iron named limonite and occurs in rocks of Ordovician age. Associated with the limonite are masses of clay and large numbers of chert nodules. The deposit as a whole has a bowldery character, and the ore breaks up into large or small masses of very irregular form.

In certain parts of the deposit there are well rounded quartz pebbles, cemented by limonite. The iron content of the ores varies considerably, some of the ores having an iron content of more than 50 per cent.

In 1907 the deposits became the property of a company at St. Louis. This company carried forward extensive exploratory and experimental work until a satisfactory method of treatment was devised which ended in the construction of the plant that is now turning out iron in large quantities.

NEW IOWA POSTMASTERS.

Washington, D. C., March 2.—The president today nominated the following Iowa postmasters: Charles Wescott, Lake Mills; H. M. Deck, Leon, and W. L. Hoggatt, Salem.

Nebraska—Anders P. Thomsen, Dannebrog; Gertrude Shepherdson Horner, W. N. Hunter, Syracuse.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The treasury department has selected the property at First and Walnut streets on the river front capitol extension territory for a site for the new $250,000 federal building at Des Moines. Treasury officials favored the location at Fourth and Chestnut streets, but responded to an appeal of the civic organization, who recommended the river front site in furtherance of the city beautiful plans.

COUNCIL BLUFFS—A special train was run from Council Bluffs to Red Oak today for the accommodation of persons attending the funeral of Justice Deemer. The United States court is in session here with Judge Martin J. Wade presiding and he announced that court would recess for the funeral. All branches of the district court also was at the Court offices were closed.

LEMARS—Irving H. Schulte, treasurer of Plymouth county, was married at St. John's Evangelical church parsonage to Miss Grace Merriman, of Sioux City, Rev. M. J. Dammann officiating. He and his bride left on a trip to Omaha, Neb., and other points southwest. He formerly lived at Remsen and last fall was elected treasurer by a big majority.

IOWA CITY—A manual of the procedure and practice of the Iowa house, compiled here under the direction of Dr. Benjamin F. Shambaugh, head of the department of political science, appears to be the first publication of its kind issued by any state since Jefferson's manual, which is still in use in congress and in most of the state legislatures, appeared in 1797.

ROCK RAPIDS—Lyon county's old court house was sold at auction to C. W. Bradley for $1,000, and will be moved away and converted into a dwelling house. The original cost of the building was $10,000. It was erected in 1876. All the lumber and brick were hauled from Sibley that being the nearest railroad.

DES MOINES—C. W. Thompson, 66, of Pueblo, Colo., a victim of aphasia, was taken in charge by the local police at the union station here. Papers in his pocket established his identity. Thompson, who was a Knight Templar, was turned over to the local Masons.

IOWA CITY—Thirteen men and 15 women from the University of Iowa attended the Iowa state missionary conference at Coe college, Cedar Rapids. Ray Wycoff, sophomore in the college of medicine, is president of the association.

LEMARS—Mrs. Margaret Sebels, wife of John Sebels, died at her home, 10 miles west of town, aged 50 years, from an internal malady. She was a native of Germany. She leaves a husband, two sons and a daughter.

DUBUQUE—P. J. Quigley, publisher of the Dubuque Telegraph-Herald, is critically ill at Mercy hospital and it is feared he will not live. He has been ill for three months. He is in his 80th year.

SHELDON—Farmers near Archer, by a vote of 36 to 9, voted to form a consolidated district of 16 sections. The district will probably be enlarged, as much interest has been shown.

IOWA CITY—The University of Iowa is preparing to welcome the dentists of the state at the 12th college of dentistry clinic here, March 7 and 8.

'NOTHER VILLA STORY.

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 28.—Francisco Villa is ill in a little mountain cabin near San Andres, Chihuahua, and unable to direct the campaign which he had planned against Chihuahua City and Juarez, according to Americans who arrived here from Madera and Pearson, Chihuahua. They say Villa's old wound, which was received at Guerrero, Chihuahua, during his pursuit by General Pershing, had reopened and was causing him intense suffering.

CONFESSES 1915 MURDER.

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 28.—W. C. Bradley, who is being held by the police on a charge of vagrancy, confessed that he and another man killed two women with an iron bar in Savannah, Ga., more than a year ago while attempting to rob a house, according to the police officers, who claim to have a confession from Bradley.

More than 15,000 feet of motion picture films, showing surgical operations, have been prepared by a Baltimore medical college for use in teaching surgery.

Two members of New York's "vice squad" have been arrested on the charge of criminally assaulting a girl 14 years old.

Twenty-five great nations are experimenting with laws to avert or adjust railway strikes. The United States alone is without an efficient system of strike prevention.

IOWAN TO LEAD IN FIGHT TO RULE HOUSE

Republicans With 215 Members to Present Solid Front in Next House.

Washington, March 1.—The republican committee of 27, which is making arrangements for the organization fight in the next house, has laid plans for presenting a solid battle front at the opening day of the next session of congress, whether it is an extra or regular session.

Requests are to be sent to all of the 215 republican representatives to be prepared to start for Washington immediately upon telegraphic summons. A committee composed of Representatives Moores, of Indiana, Anderson of Minnesota, and Woods of Iowa, was named to investigate contests for seats.

SIOUX CITY SENATOR HAS A DIVORCE BILL

Lytle's Measure Is Most Stringent Ever Introduced in Iowa Legislature.

Des Moines, Ia., Feb. 28.—A bill introduced in the Iowa senate which has created much interest in a measure by Sen. C. J. Lytle of Sioux City, which would provide a heavy penalty for desertion and non-support of wives and destitute parents.

The bill which is claimed to be the most stringent and sweeping of its kind ever offered in any state would make desertion and nonsupport a felony punishable by a fine of $1,000, or one year at hard work in the penitentiary, or both. At the present time nonsupport, in Iowa is not a crime.

Any man who lives with a woman outside the bonds of wedlock is liable if he willfully neglects or refuses to provide for her support or maintenance, the bill sets forth. The heavy penalty also applies to children who do not support parents destitute or dependent upon them, as well as to men who neglect or desert their wives and dependent children.

The bill specifies that the court can pay the whole or any part of the fine collected to the plaintiff or the court can place the defendant on probation under bond if the defendant violates his probation or parole or fails to provide for the support of his family or other dependents he shall be confined to the penitentiary for one year or to the county jail for six months, and the proceeds of this work while in confinement shall be used to the dependents.

LYON COUNTY FARMERS ARE BEING EDUCATED

Rock Rapids, Ia., March 1.—The Iowa State agricultural lecture corps is holding an institute here this week. The attendance from Lyon county is large. W. D. Carpenter, secretary of the Rock Rapids Commercial club, is in charge. The speakers during the week are: J. W. Jarnagin, editor of the Iowa Farmer; W. J. Kennedy, professor of animal husbandry at Ames college; J. M. Wheeldale, manager of county farm work at Ames, and others familiar with dairy, grain and poultry topics.

The carloads of stock from Ames is for educational purposes. The beef herd of Shorthorns, Angus and Hereford.

The meeting is being held in the opera house and court house and the new auditorium.

STORM WRECKS CHURCH. What might have been a disastrous storm struck Inwood, Lyon county, Iowa, during the morning service Sunday morning. Rev. J. E. Mitchell had just started his sermon when a noise was seen coming from the front of the pulpit. The ceiling of the church was ordered cleared, but before all were able to leave the noise was so dense that the last ones had to feel their way along toward the door. The cause of the fire is thought to have been an overheated furnace. The fire was extinguished before much damage was done.

DENISON—All school houses in this county will be supplied this spring with an American flag. Flag poles will be placed on each school house, or in the yard. Provision is made for replacing flags as they become worn. This will be done through a plan made by the organization of the Iowa patriotic fund, whose chairman is W. K. Herrick, of Cherokee. A fund of $100,000 has been created, the interest from which will be used to place flags and maintain them. Teachers are to be asked to see that the flag is raised each school day when the weather will permit.

GRAETTINGER—A new creamery company has been organized here at a meeting held at the Hawkeye theater. The capital stock of the new company will be $50,000, divided into 100 shares of $50 each. Articles of incorporation will be filed with the secretary of state at once. The board of directors are Jorgen Anderson, Oscar Craven, I. F. Noble, John Bondlins and F. L. Lambe. As soon as weather will permit work will start on the new creamery building.

DENISON—John T. Carey will become postmaster of Denison on March 1. He succeeds Alfred Wright, who has been in office for four years. Wright was nominated by President Taft in September, before going out of office, and had for a time the distinction of being the only republican postmaster in Iowa in office during Wilson's administration.

ESTHERVILLE—With the issue just published the Opera House Reporter, a magazine published in the interest of the stage, will close its publication in Estherville. L. C. Zellano, publisher, is to move the plant to Des Moines.

DES MOINES—Attorney General Havner, who was to have started the Villisca murder investigation has postponed the inquiry until next week because of the death of Justice Deemer.

WASHINGTON ENGAGEMENT.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 27.—The engagement of Dr. George Pouliff, first secretary of the Bulgarian legation here, to Miss Elizabeth Samael, of Philadelphia, was announced today at the legation. The wedding will take place the latter part of April.

LEAK PROBE COST $50,000.

Washington, Feb. 27.—Sherman L. Whipple of Boston will receive $15,000 for the work of himself and assistants as counsel to the house rules committee in the peace note leak inquiry. The fee was unanimously approved by the committee. The total cost of the inquiry, Chairman Henry said today, would not exceed $50,000.

PENSION MRS. FUNSTON.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 27.—A bill granting a pension of $100 a month to the widow of the late Maj. Gen. Frederick Funston has passed the Senate.

BEATEN, USE SUBS TO SAVE FULL DEFEAT

Germans Can't Win War With U-Boats, Simonds Says, But Hope to Avoid Crushing Victory by Allies.

BRITISH APPRECIATE CRISIS

Leaders Declare Menace Greatest Since Trafalgar, If Not Spanish Armada—Land Laws Upset.

BY FRANK H. SIMONDS

(Copyright 1917, N. Y. Tribune Association.)

New York, March 3.—Two days before I left London I was told by one of the best informed of Englishmen, who has the confidence of the prime minister, that the British fleet had on that day disposed of five German submarines. Of the five, two, to use Lord Northcliffe's picturesque phrase, were "big uns," that is, belonging to the new type. Of the five, also, at least two had surrendered, and there was rumor, hardly credible, that they had come into Falmouth after the crews had killed their officers and raised the white flag.

Greatest Crisis Since Trafalgar.

In the first 15 days of the new German submarine campaign, the toll taken by the British fleet was 25; this figure, like that of five for a day, is, I feel satisfied, correct. But following its invariable course, the British navy declines to supply any official information as to its methods or its progress in dealing with submarines.

Having set forth these statistics, which indicate that not a little is being accomplished in dealing with the latest outbreak of deep sea, terrible it remains to state that the new submarine campaign in everywhere recognized in Great Britain as the most serious challenge the empire has known since Trafalgar, if not since the days of the Spanish Armada itself.

It would be a mistake, for the friends of the allies in America to underrate the meaning of this German submarine campaign and its possibilities. I should be making a mistake that is not made in Britain. There it is fully understood that Germany is playing her last card, that she is making her final bid for victory, and it is significant of the new grasp on realities that exists in Britain that the danger and the power of this final bid is not the least underestimated.

Ready to Be Hungry.

Today all England is prepared for not starvation—but something approaching it. All over the land men and women are, in advance of mandatory legislation, limiting food consumption, reducing the use of meat of sugar, all the things that are supplied by seaborn freights. It is not too much to say that Britain is getting ready to stand siege, that millions of British subjects recognize that to the cost of victory in the great struggle must be scarcity at home such as has not been known in modern times in England.

Today in the restaurants and hotels, only two courses are served for the luncheon and three for dinner. And nothing is more impressive than the fashion in which people are submitting to that sort of regulation which has an essentially Teutonic character, to be sure, but with readiness, with complete willingness. It is a detail, a minor but still a real detail in winning the war, hence it must be faced.

The time has not come when the evils of actual and visible shortage of foodstuffs in England. There is no starvation and there is no evidence of that very general underfeeding, which all witnesses agree, is so unmistakable in Germany. Britain is not yet hungry, but Britons are taking every step to avoid possible famine hereafter by making meager now.

No Sub Remedy Found.

Yet, and I return to this fact because it has a patent meaning for America, it is recognized everywhere in Great Britain that the Germans in their present submarine campaign have opened a new chapter on the war. British confidence in the ultimate ability of their fleet to deal with the submarine pest is unshaken, but it is not less clear that the British perceive that unless a method is found to dispose of the submarine, and it has not yet been discovered, the empire—the British isles—are at the very least in for the most difficult hours in their history.

More than this, looking into the future, thoughtful men perceive that the submarine, even if it be insufficient to save Germany now, even if preventive methods or allied success on land insure German defeat before British starvation is even a question has opened a new horizon and may have a future of not an immediate challenge to British supremacy on the high seas and to British safety behind her ramparts of water. For, unless the answer to the submarine be found, there is a frank realization that the blockade of Britain in the future and by submarines of still greater power will be a consequence of subsequent war.

And the result is that a seafaring nation, feeling its very existence challenged, is making answer. It is making answer in its preparations not for another campaign, not for another year of war, but for all those years of war that are necessary to win the struggle. It is the submarine threat which has brought Britain into the war as a year ago, it seemed as if Britain could not be brought in.

TO PROMOTE FISHING.

Mexico City, (by mail.)—The department of fomento has decided to establish an agency in Lower California to take charge of the fisheries industry on the west coast of Lower California and until this has been established the Mexican consul at San Diego, Cal., has been commissioned to issue fishing permits and collect accruing duties.

CAR CONGESTION RELIEVED.

Washington, D. C., March 2.—Conditions in the congested railroad yards of the middle west were said today to be rapidly approaching normal.

Reports from Cleveland, Detroit, Pittsburgh and other interior points contained the information that the recent warm weather had enabled the roads to clear away much of the accumulation of cars and that progress still continued.

At Atlantic and gulf ports continued diminution in accumulations were reported.

MADE $5,000 OUT OF HOGS

His Western Canadian Farm.

It is getting to be a long drawn out story, the way that Western Canadian farmers have made money. Many of them a few years ago, came to the country with little more than their few household effects, probably a team of horses and a cow or two, and sufficient money to do them for a few months, until they got a start. Hundreds of such can be pointed out, who today have splendid homes, well equipped farms; the latest machinery and an automobile. Here is the case of A. E. Merriam, formerly of Devil's Lake, N. D. He didn't leave there because the land was poor, or farming not a success, for all who know that country are aware that it is an excellent country. He wanted to expand, to take advantage of the cheap land that Western Canada offers. And that same story has appealed to hundreds of others who have had like success with Mr. Merriam. But his story, and he signs it, too, is:

"I came to Alberta in the Spring of 1909 from Devil's Lake, North Dakota, locating on my farm near Dalroy.

"I arrived with six head of horses and two head of cattle and about $1,500. Since then, I have increased my live stock to seven head of horses, four head of cattle, and about one hundred head of hogs, a four-roomed house, good barn with all modern improvements, a feed grinder, elevator, chopper, fanning mill, etc. I have increased my original capital at least four times more since coming here.

"From the feeding of hogs during the last year, I had a gross return of $5,000.

"I first started grain farming, but during the past four years I have made hogs my specialty, and you may see by the foregoing statement for 1916 that I have not done so badly.

"Land has increased at least twenty per cent in value during the past few years, now selling for from $25 to $35 per acre, with nominal taxes of about $27 a quarter section yearly.

"The climate here is better than Dakota in that we do not have so much dry wind; the winters are similar to Dakota.

"As for farming in general, the growing and feeding of live stock is more sure than the grain farming, if continued year after year, and if every farmer follows this he will be ahead of the grain growers in the long run. Taking everything into consideration, I feel satisfied with my success in Alberta."

(Sgd.) A. E. MERRIAM.

Dalroy, Alberta, Jan. 12th, 1917.

There will be the greatest demand for farm labor in Western Canada during the early spring, and, in fact, all season until November, and the highest wages will be paid. There is an absolute guarantee by the Canadian Government that those who go to Canada for this purpose need have no fear of conscription.—Advertisement.

A Mother's Burden

A mother who suffers kidney trouble, finds it hard to keep up her daily work. Lameness, backache, sharp pains when stooping and "blue", nervous or dizzy spells, make home life dreary. Active kidneys bring back vigor, health and a pleasure in family duties. If the kidneys are weak try a box of Doan's Kidney Pills.

AMERICANS TELL OF HUNGER, COLD IN GERMAN CAMP

Denied Communication, Officers Spend 18 Hours in Berlin Yards as U. S. Seeks Them.

MEN BAREFOOT IN SNOW

Shoes Are Provided Them After Three Months—Expected Release Until After Capture of Yarrowdale.

Washington, March 3—Germany in a note delivered to the state department today by Dr Paul Ritter, Swiss minister, promises the release of the Yarrowdals prisoners on March 7, saying quarantine regulations will have been complied with by that date

The arrival of the four American doctors at Copenhagen was reported to the department today by American minister Egan

It is assumed that the question of the status of the American is established to the satisfaction of the British consul who is now sheltering them full provision for their return to this country, with the other prisoners will be made by the state department

Copenhagen March — Four Americans from the steamer Yarrowdale who have been prisoners in Germany for three months, arrived here today They are Dr John Davis Columbus Miss Orville McKim, Watertown N Y Dr R D Snyder, Norfolk Va and Richard Zabriskie Englewood N J The four men were practically destitute

The men reached here with only the clothes they stood in and will under the custom of the sea be supported by the British consul until it is possible to send them home They owe their release before the remainder of the 32 Americans who were on the Yarrowdale to the fact that as physicians or veterinarians they ranked as officers and were confined in the officers camp at Karlsruhe The hot e tenders and sailors who composed the bulk of the American crew are still held in "quarantine" at the prison camp for enlisted men at Daiken

The four men left the camp at Karlsruhe on February 27 and traveled direct to Warnemunde under escort where after being subjected to the usual frontier search they were put aboard a Danish ferry and left to shift for themselves The Danish police took charge of them and upon their arrival in Denmark provided them with quarters for the night in a hotel at Gedser and gave them the first hearty meal they had enjoyed since Sunday in Germany in December The next morning the Danish authorities provided railroad transportation to Copenhagen

Ancient sea practice makes seamen stranded in a foreign port the guests of the consul of the power under whose flag the lost ship sailed United States Consul General Anderson was compelled therefore to refer the passless paperless and penniless wanderers to his Danish colleague The Danish consul provided hotel accommodations pending an investigation as to the men's identity He stated that as far as its investigation was carried the four men in his care must be

Bombed by Airships

Few more dramatic tales have been brought forth by the war than the story of adventures hardship and peril at sea shot and shell on land and the new danger from the sky which was related by these four American professional men to the Associated Press. Snapped up by the German raider in mid-ocean they cruised around for day with the commerce destroyer waiting gathering further prizes.

They made the voyage in the Yarrowdale to Swinemunde under such conditions that they expected the ships seams to open and the vessel to sink beneath them at any moment They lived for more than two months in prison camps in Germany on the meager prison fare without food parcels, which lighten the conditions of existence of other prisoners of war They passed through four airplane attacks on Karlsruhe during which bombs intended for the railroad station rained on all sides of their camp. To cap the climax they were ignorant until the last whether they were prisoners of war or neutrals in detention, whether the government was doing anything to obtain their release or whether the United States had not already entered the war

POSTER IS PRESERVED.

Paris, (by mail) - A glass plate has been mysteriously and artistically attached to the wall of the building of No. 1 Rue Royale, covering one of the mobilization posters of August 1, 1914 The purpose of it obviously is to preserve the poster in the position in which it was placed two and a half years ago, as a souvenir of the profoundly moving days of the outbreak of war The poster had resisted all inclemencies of the weather and is today as good as the day it was posted upon the wall The persons who took the initiative and the workmen who executed the job are still anonymous.

MUST DIM "CANDLE" OR CHANGE COLOR OF LIGHT IT SHEDS

Chicago, March 2 The question of a new set of editors for "The Candle," a student publication at Northwestern university, has been before the board of student publications at the school.

The January number, gotten out by the co-eds, featured an article on the "Liberal Art of Kissing," and carried an illustration of a girl curled up in a wine glass. The next issue was to have been labelled "Helluva-number" but it was stopped

Arthur J Kramer, editor, and Joyce Sheridan, business manager, were responsible for the tone of the magazine.

"To change the policy of the magazine would be to return it to its old strictly literary program," said Mr Kramer. "We wanted to change that—to make it a live one."

Mr Sheridan said he would rather see the publication abolished than to have it return to the old "insipid policy"

WILSON WILL USE SAME SMALL BIBLE IN INAUGURAL OATH

Washington, D. C., March 2.—When President Wilson takes the oath of office next week, he will do so on a small bible used for the same purpose when he was sworn in as governor of New Jersey and as chief executive of the nation in 1913. The president has not decided whether he will take the oaths Sunday at the White House or at the capitol. The place depends upon the status of business in congress.

SUBS GET 2 AMERICANS

Queenstown, March 3—Nothing has been heard of the missing boat from the British steamer Galgorm Castle, shelled and sunk on Tuesday by a submarine. The full names and the addresses of the two Americans who left the steamer in this boat are William Jackson, 19 years old, Beach street, New York.

David Walker, 18 years old, Spring street, Stanardsville, Va.

Washington, March 2.- Detailed reports of the sinking of the British bark Galgorm Castle, and the Donaldson line freight steamer, Tritonian, both with Americans aboard, two of whom are missing, were received by the state department today from Consul Frost, at Queenstown. The report follows

"The British bark Galgorm Castle, Queenstown from Buenos Aires, cargo maize, attacked by submarine, 4:30 p. m., February 27, 74 miles west-southwest of Bull Rock Four Americans aboard Two are missing, believed lost, William Jackson, 19, Beech street, New York and David Walker, negro, Green county Virginia, aged 30

"Americans saved, Henry Meritt, Beaver Falls, Pa, and Harry Richardson 62 Hanover street, Boston, both white All American able seamen."

The second dispatch reads:

Tells of Tritonian Sinking.

DES MOINES COUNCIL BACKS UP PRESIDENT

Des Moines, Ia March 3—The city council today unanimously passed a resolution at the request of the National Secuhity league urging all patriotic citizens of Des Moines to forward telegrams to Washington pledging support "to any immediate action in defence of rights menaced by Germany" Mayor MacVicar, who is organizing a volunteer company at the city hall, introduced the resolution

ZIMMERMAN TELLS OF GERMANY'S DECISION

Berlin, Feb 28. (by wireless to Sayville, March 2)—In his address in the reichstag here today in regard to relations between the United States and Germany (a portion of which was received by cable yesterday), Foreign Secretary Zimmermann related the circumstances of the attempt to continuing negotiations between the two countries through the Swiss legation at Washington, and said it was easy to understand that the government endeavored to avoid everything which might cause war with America.

RAIL MEN AID DEFENSE.

Washington, March 2.—Heads of the country's leading railroad systems met here with the Council of National Defense to approve plans for giving the government the full cooperation of transportation interests in the event of war. They came at the call of Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio, a member of the council's advisory committee of seven captains of industry.

BERNSTORFF PLOT DETAILED PLAN TO MAKE U. S. UNABLE TO WAGE WAR; GERMAN DENIALS EXPECTED

Washington, March 3—Count von Bernstorff, former German ambassador, was instructed from Berlin to arrange the dismantling of German warbound ships in American harbors at the same time he received the Zimmermann note for transmission to Mexico

This added thread in the mesh of German intrigue spun around this country when Germany was still protesting friendship, was allowed to become known today with the inference that full and detailed instructions were sent von Bernstorff from Berlin to make war by this country impossible Officials refused to disclose any of the other elements in the German plot, but indicated that it was general and wholesale.

The next step expected from abroad is a complete statement by Mexico of her attitude Despite the long chain of suspicious circumstances tending to connect that country with Germany's intrigues, officials expect an indignant repudiation by the Carranza government.

It is assumed also, that Japan will take advantage of the opportunity to declare her loyalty to the entente and her friendship for this country.

The text of the German instructions have been shown to the Japanese ambassador and both Ambassador Fletcher, at Mexico City, and Ambassador Guthrie, at Tokio, have been cabled information on the situation, and they are expected to discuss the matter informally with the respective foreign governments.

A new press campaign by Germany to discredit and counteract the disclosure is looked forward to.

NO WARNINGS FROM NOW ON

Berlin, (via London), March 3—The admiralty made the following announcement today:

"On March 1, expired the final period of grace alloted for sailing ships in the Atlantic. From this date no special warning will be given to any boats by submarines."

AUSTRIA TO AVOID RUPTURE WITH U. S.

Reply May Indicate Germany's Ally Will Make Some Sacrifice to Placate America.

Berne, Switzerland, Thursday, March 2, (via Paris, March 3)—The recent reports that the Austro-Hungarian government has determined to make every effort to maintain diplomatic relations with the United States is corroborated by information reaching here from Vienna. The impression prevails that Austria-Hungary will make every sacrifice regarded as reasonable to avoid a rupture even if such action apparently would mean flying in the face of Germany

TURKS FLEE ON TIGRIS

London, March 3—The Turks are continuing to retreat before the victorious British on the Tigris front. Official announcement was made here today that the retreating Turks on Tuesday evening passed through Aziziyah, 52 miles north of Kut-El-Amara. More than 7,000 prisoners have been taken since December.

Since February 23, the approximate figures on captures of men and stores are:

Prisoners, 4,300, making a total of over 7,000 since the commencement of the operations last December; guns, 28, trench mortars, 19, machine guns, 11; H. M. S. Firefly recaptured. Turkish ships 3; tugs, 2, barges, 10 and pontoons, 30.

BRAND CONDEMNS ACT IF LETTER IS AUTHENTIC

Washington, D. C., March 2.—Senator Sherman, of Illinois, read to the Senate today a telegram from the Chicago Staats Zeitung, of which Horace L. Brand is editor, expressing condemnation of the Zimmermann instructions proposing an alliance between Germany, Mexico and Japan to make war on the United States, if the note as published yesterday was "correctly copied and is authentic."

INVITES CHINA INTO WAR.

Peking, March 2.—The French minister and the Belgian charge d'affaires representing the entente allies, have invited China to enter the war, offering her remission of the Boxer indemnity and a revision of the tariff as inducements. A cabinet crisis is imminent. The vice president and the premier are urging China to join the entente.

VAST SUM FOR NAVY

Washington, D. C., March 3—The $535,000,000 naval appropriation bill was passed by the Senate today without a roll call. It now goes to conference.

KAISER HAS A CHILL; NO ALARM IS FELT

London, March 3—The German emperor is suffering from a severe chill, according to a Berlin report received by the Exchange Telegraph company by way of Amsterdam. It is stated that the emperor is compelled to remain in doors, but receives the ministers and communicates daily with headquarters. The dispatch says that the patient's condition does not cause anxiety, but that his doctors insist on great caution.

NORTHCLIFFE WOULD LIKE AID ON BURDENS

London, March 3—Lord Northcliffe, the publisher, said in an address today before the American Luncheon club, he had every assurance the British could finance the war, but that he would welcome some shifting of the enormous financial burden, and would be glad if America showed some of its historic sympathy with France by bearing some of the crushing financial strain which has been imposed on her. Lord Northcliffe also said he was certain that the allies could win the war by themselves, but for many sentimental reasons, "I would like to see America in the war side by side with us."

IRISH EMIGRATION CUT.

Dublin, Ireland—(by mail)—Irish emigration continues to show a steady decline. The official returns for 1916 just published, are the lowest on record, Only 7,302 persons emigrated as compared with 10,650 in 1915, 20,314 in 1914, and 30,967, in 1913. Only 4,207 went to the United States or 2,474 less than the previous year. Prepaid passages to the United States used to make up the bulk of the emigrations to that country. Last year they numbered only 511. The emigration from Ulster is still the highest of the four provinces and amounted to 2,733 in 1916.

TOLL OF THE PLUNGER

Washington, D. C., March 2.—Shipping destroyed since the war began, exclusive of war vessels, represents 10 per cent of the world's merchant marine as it existed on August 1, 1914, according to figures published by the Journal of Commerce today.

Construction of warships has offset most of the losses, it was stated.

The statistics record the destruction of 2,573 vessels of 4,811,100 gross tons, of which more than half was owned by Great Britain. The next heaviest sufferer has been Norway, with France third, Italy fourth, and Germany fifth. Entente losses have been about 75 per cent of the total and Teutons 20 per cent.

The figures list 202 vessels of approximately 420,640 gross tonnage as definitely reported destroyed during February or since Germany's unrestricted submarine warfare began. This compares with 164 vessels of 338,851 gross tonnage in January. Norwegian and Dutch shipping during February suffered losses heavier than any of the entente allies, except that of Great Britain, which lost more than half of the month's total. The February figures are the highest for a single mo-

WANTS NAVY FUNDS READY IMMEDIATELY

President Expected to Be Given Full Authority Late Today or Early Tomorrow.

SENATORS DELAY ACTION

LaFollette Prevents the Senate Taking Up Armed Neutrality in Place of Naval Bill.

Washington, D S, March 3—Without discussion, the Senate today approved the action of the naval committee in eliminating from the naval bill the provision reaffirming it to "be the policy of the United States to adjust and settle its international disputes through mediation or arbitration to the end that war may be honorably avoided"

It was put in the bill in the house by Minority Leader Mann

The Senate also adopted another committee amendment making all appropriations in the bill immediately available, instead of waiting until July 1. In urging senators to accept the amendment, Senator Lodge said the present situation required passage of the naval bill and also an extra session of congress.

"The country," said he, "is in a situation where it may be at war at very short notice. The navy is our first line of defense. We want all of these appropriations immediately available. To tie up the money until next July would be a great mistake. This money we need now If we do need it we shall need it very much indeed.

"I also think there ought to be an extra session of the whole congress. In the present situation the whole American government ought to be here, matters ought not to be left entirely to the minority. Congress ought to be here in this condition of public affairs. If necessary appropriations can be held up, but this naval bill ought to pass for no one can tell when we will need every dollar with the utmost quickness."

Issuance of $150,000,000 in bonds to provide the emergency fund of $115,000,000 given the president to expedite naval ship building and for additional submarines costing $35,000,000 added to the naval bill by the Senate committee was approved today by the Senate, 50 to 24.

From The Tribune Washington Bureau.

Washington, D C., March 3—Once President Wilson is given the authority he seeks from congress, he is expected to order the arming of merchant ships

It is said today officially that he is prepared to do so as soon as congress acts. The navy has taken all preliminary steps and is ready to do its part in furnishing the guns. The navy and army have completed other plans to be utilized in case of necessity. Among other things, precautions were already being taken to guard against German submarines striking American shipping along the coasts of the United States.

Washington, D. C., March 2—The next step of putting the United States in a position of armed neutrality to deal with Germany was delayed in the Senate today by objections of some members, based on the exigencies of a parliamentary situation until 4 o'clock

At that hour an effort will be made to substitute for the armed neutrality bill, which last night passed the House, the Senate bill which confers on the president the authority to use "other instrumentalities" in addition to arming merchant ships. This bill has the backing of the administration and is expected to be later accepted by the House.

Notice Causes No Change.

The official notice of the Berlin admirality that consideration for shipping ended on March 1, and that the campaign of ruthlessness now is in full swing has not changed the situation any, although its bold declaration that no special warning will be given to any boats by submarines was regarded in sharp contrast to the delayed portions of German Foreign Minister Zimmermann's speech to the reichstag, spoken before Germany's plot to ally Japan and Mexico with her in war on the United States was revealed.

Members of congress who have been hoping to force an extra session in March, acknowledged today its improbability at least until June.

Democratic leaders now do not expect any extra session at all, unless, of course, there should be extraordinary international developments.

Officials confidently looked for expressions of friendship from both Japan and Mexico today, and consequent collapse of the German intrigue.

Nevertheless, preparations were hurried along for whatever may confront the nation. The bill authorizing President Wilson to arm ships and providing a bond issue of $100,000,000 was passed by the House late last night, by a vote of 403 to 13.

The Senate in response to its formal inquiry, had President Wilson's official assurance the version of German Foreign Minister Zimmermann's note to the German minister at Mexico, proposing the plot, as revealed yesterday by the Associated Press, was authentic.

Fail Raps Republicans.

Senator Fall, republican, during the debate, bitterly upbraided the democrats for their attitude toward the resolution, declaring democratic senators, by suggesting that the letter was given out to influence public opinion, "were accusing the president of the veriest trickery and impossible practices."

A substitute for the Lodge resolution and its proposed amendments then was offered by Senator Smith, of Georgia, democrat. Prepared in collaboration with several senators it would request the president "to furnish to the Senate whatever information he has concerning the "Zimmermann note," which, in his opinion is not incompatible with the public interest. Never since the impeachment of Andrew Johnson, Senator Fall declared had he heard such "insinuations" against a president from his own party.

"You are saying to the president in this resolution," he went on, "that you want him to declare whether this note is authentic, and in your speech here you are saying you will not believe him when he says it is authentic, if it comes from a belligerent government."

THE "CITY BEAUTIFUL" CLUB

Every town, no matter how small or how large, should have a "City Beautiful" club. This is an organization that is almost indispensable if a town is to be made attractive and kept so. It makes no difference how neat and orderly the citizens may be about their premises or the merchants about their business houses, there are bound to be a thousand and one things that need the attention of a special organization created for the purpose

There never was a truer axiom coined than "What's everybody's business is nobody's business." This applies most forcibly to many things that tend largely to make or mar the looks of a town.

Now that the warm weather is coming on, the labors of the city beautifiers will be in great demand. Just now, after the ravages of the winter's storms, nature presents her most depressing aspect, and much attention will be required if she is to re-clothe the face of the earth in her original garments of beauty. Unsightly washes and gullies, filled up ditches and drains, accumulations of weeds and trash and leaves and twigs are to be removed, and nature given her fair chance to do her best.

It is in this capacity that the order loving women of the town show to advantage. Women always have a keener eye for beauty and harmony than men. They are more given to neatness and ordiliness than men. Start out a committee of energetic women to supervising the cleaning up of a town and they will find nuisances and unsightly places of which the men had never thought.

Just here we would like to offer a suggestion in connection with beautifying the town.

The problem of the vacant lot has always been the hardest one for the town beautifiers to solve. The average owner pays little attention to it, hence it invariably presents a neglected and desolate appearance Now this season is going to see a demand for every dollar s worth of food products that this country can produce, and these vacant lots should, wherever possible, be turned to account to swell the output. Any kind of growing crop—corn, potatoes, vegetables—are far preferable to a coat of weeds

When this is done, turn attention to the neglected back yards. You'll find many of them that now are refuse dumps, but that can be made places of beauty and usefulness.

Most towns are like some people. They will keep the main streets and buildings presentable, but the most obscure places and back streets and alleys are neglected and permitted to fall into decay. Taken to task in the matter, the authorities often reply that strangers and visitors never see these places, anyway, so it doesn't matter. No, but WE see them, which is worse. Strangers might see them and go away and forget them, but we must live with them, which is liable to breed neglect and disorder in ourselves. A man with a sore toe may know that it is hidden from the public, but He never forgets it is there.

Always bear this in mind: The town will be beautiful or the reverse, just in proportion as its people are lovers of beauty and order, or the reverse. A beautiful and well kept home, with a foul alley in the rear and a neglected street in front, is a standing reproach to its owner. He should have sufficient pride to see that his sorroundings harmonize with his possessions.

It's time to get busy in this town.

FOOD PRICES OF 1917

If we could forecast the future even for the space of one year ahead we of this country would no doubt make some amazing discoveries.

One piece of information, however, is being forced upon our attention without our being gifted without any extraordinary foresight. It is that during at least the next twelve months there will be no material reduction in the cost of living.

Already we are experiencing war prices for food stuffs without being at war. What the situation will be before another crop is harvested is a matter to be pondered with misgivings

Should this country become entangled in the war which at this writing seems almost inevitable, the situation will not be improved. But even with prices as they are now many grave questions are confronting us. Take, for instance, that of seed for planting. With potatoes wholesaling at from $2.50 to $3 per bushel, can the potato raisers (or will they) afford the enormous outlay necessary to plant an acreage sufficient to surpass the crop of 1916, or even to equal it? If the crop is not increased we can hardly look for a reduction in price—unless the government jails the unscrupulous food speculators.

Will the usual acreage of spring wheat and oats be sown with these grains at their present almost prohibitive prices Or will the farmer figure that he can clean up enough profit on a smaller crop?

Even the good housewife's onion patch is in danger of shrinkage, owing to the enormous rise in the price of this dorous vegetable.

To make the situation more serious still the indications are that southern farmers are preparing for a record crop of cotton. The agricultural papers and those connected with the agricultural departments have been insistent in their advice to farmers to reduce rather than increase the cotton acreage. But 18 and 20 cent cotton is intoxicating, and it is doubtful if the southern farmers can be prevented from letting go everything else in order to make a killing on cotton. Such a course would have the effect of reducing the south's production of foodstuffs even below normal; thus further complicating the food situation.

It could be remedied, however, if our people would get one idea firmly fixed in their minds, that our lands must be made to produce more, and more, AND MORE.

It is the age-old law of supply and demand which, barring the activities of the price boosters, always works to maintain an equitable balance. That the scarcity of an article enhances its value, is a law as immutable as those governing the seasons.

It should be the first and greatest duty of every citizen of this country during the coming year to see that every available foot of land under his control be made to produce some crop. Food crops are preferable, but SOME crop should be raised. Mother earth is calling to her children to come and partake of her bounties, and we will have only ourselves to hold responsible if we refuse.

Conservation and increase of food crops is the only thing that can relieve the situation—except to jail the speculators.

To Repair Rubber.

As soon as a rubber article breaks, many people feel that it must be discarded at once. This is not always necessary. Many times a firm patch may be cemented over the break, making the article as good as new. There are those who do this business regularly. Some economists find it expedient to have their rubbers repaired when they first begin to wear, declaring that they can double the length of life of an ordinary pair by such attention.

Surely a Thick Fog.

Some ancient mariners were sitting in a seaport tavern relating their experiences of fogs. "Ah!" said one old salt, "I've seen some pretty thick fogs in my time. Why, off the coast of Newfoundland the fog was sometimes so thick that we used to sit on the deck-rail and lean against it! We were sitting one night as usual, with our backs to the fog, when suddenly it lifted, and we all went flop into the sea. A bit thick, wasn't it?"

Castor Oil on Eyelashes.

Every motor car rider has experienced the discomfort of dust in the eyes, and also from the effects of cold winds. A suggestion has been made that these discomforts may be greatly alleviated by applying castor oil along the eyelashes. This, it is claimed, will catch most of the dust before it can enter the eye, and also it protects the eyes from the chilling effects of the wind.—Scientific American.

Rule for Sincerity.

The best way to be sincere is never to think anything about it. Be yourself, and let the rest take care of itself. No one ever yet heard of an insincere tree or mountain or sunset. Perhaps one reason is that they never analyze themselves or stop to consider what sort of impression they are making.

"Efficiency."

Willis—"Did the efficiency expert that you had at your office accomplish anything?" Gillis—"Well, he made some good discoveries, but spoiled them by his recommendations. For instance, he found out that the office boy was wasting considerable time and recommended that we engage an assistant to roll his cigarettes."—Puck.

Artful Dodgers.

The New York milkman who says that "many fine, fashionable people" move without paying their bills is telling nothing new. If they paid as they went some of them couldn't afford either to move or be fashionable.—Galveston News.

Melting Carbon.

Prof. Otto Lummer of Breslau succeeded in melting carbon by inclosing a large arc light, formed of two carbon rods, in a heavy glass container and exhausting the air. By using a powerful electric current he produced such a heat that drops formed at the tips of the carbons.

Don't Try to Shift Blame.

Don't overeat for years until your system is full of poisons, and then when you become bedfast wonder why your heavenly Father has thus afflicted you. You brought it all on yourself, so put the blame where it rightfully belongs.—Exchange.

Where to Keep Sugar.

To keep powdered sugar from hardening get only 25 cents' worth at a time, put in a paraffin-lined oatmeal carton, put two thicknesses of paraffin paper on the top, press the lid down firmly.

Usual Formula.

Wife (whispering to her husband in church)—"Wake up!" Husband—"It's only the cat trying to get in, Jane! There's nobody in the house but us."—Judge.

Daily Thought.

It were good for man to have some anchorage deeper than the quicksands of this world; for those drift to and fro so as to baffle all conjecture.—Carlyle.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Mrs. Quinn's Experience Ought to Help You Over the Critical Period.

Lowell, Mass.—"For the last three years I have been troubled with the Change of Life and the bad feelings common at that time. I was in a very nervous condition, with headaches and pain a good deal of the time so I was unfit to do my work. A friend asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which I did, and it has helped me in every way. I am not nearly so nervous, no headache or pain. I must say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the best remedy any sick woman can take." —Mrs. MARGARET QUINN, Rear 259 Worthen St., Lowell, Mass.

Other warning symptoms are a sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness, inquietude, and dizziness

If you need special advice, write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass.

He is a man of strong will power who never talks about the weather

Coated tongue, vertigo and constipation are relieved by Garfield Tea —Adv.

If every man could have his own way how quickly all others would get out of it

Pimples boils, carbuncles, dry up and disappear with Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. In tablets or liquid —Adv.

Satisfied.

"Not as much more than I'm willing to pay for the privilege of not being bothered by him."

PAIN? NOT A BIT!

LIFT YOUR CORNS OR CALLUSES OFF

No humbug! Apply few drops then just lift them away with fingers.

This new drug is another compound discovered by a Cincinnati chemist It is called freezone and can now be obtained in tiny bottles as here shown at very little cost from any drug store Just ask for freezone Apply a drop or two directly upon a tender corn or callus and instantly the soreness disappears Shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you can lift it off root and all, with the fingers

Not a twinge of pain soreness or irritation not even the slightest smarting either when applying freezone or afterwards

This drug doesn't eat up the corn or callus but shrivels them so they loosen and come right out It is no humbug! It works like a charm For a few cents you can get rid of every hard corn, soft corn or corn between the toes, as well as painful callouses on bottom of your feet It never disappoints and never burns blisters or inflames. If your druggist hasn't any freezone yet, tell him to get a little bottle for you from his wholesale house —adv

The Man Who Forgot

A NOVEL

By JAMES HAY, JR.

GARDEN CITY NEW YORK
1915

CHAPTER NINE (Continued)

"But don't let me keep you from your work," he apologized. "I am now about to wrap my legs around the greased cable of profound thought and sink into an abyss of reflection"

And he did, until Smith came in.

Waller watched him while he went to Miss Downey and asked her to take his card in to Mr. Mannersley. More than ever before, he seemed surcharged with vitality, tremendous strength. Chollie-wollie, lounging in his chair, thought he looked like a man in some way supernaturally alive, tensed, as if expectancy had turned him to the limit of human efficiency It was as if a gorgeousness of virility was within him.

"What it all about?" inquired the newspaper man, after Miss Downey had gone into Mannersley's office.

"The line of duty." Smith wheeled toward him, swiftly brushing his hand across his hair. "I've come to make a last appeal to Mannersley. He and his committee are holding up this amendment I've come to ask him for the action the people of the country want"

Waller sank deeper into his chair and became the picture of discouragement.

"It's bewildering — benumbing," he said drearily. "Why don't you try to jump over the Washington monument—or make government clerks work—or train a dozen oysters on the half shell to sing a Greek chorus?"

"I'm doing only the fair thing," Smith replied, unaffected by the other's tone "If the chairman of this committee is accessible to the lobbyists of the other side why shouldn't he be told what we have to say?"

"You overrate lobbyists," Waller replied calmly

"How so?"

"It's a mistake that nearly everybody unfamiliar with Washington makes The thing's a joke People talk of lobbyists as if they had some uncanny power, like Aladdin's wonderful lamp, with which they influenced statesmen's minds and caused the current of legislation to change its course And, of all the so-called lobbyists, this whisky crowd is the worst. Why, they know nothing at all."

"You go too far in your assumption that they don't count," Smith argued.

"Not a bit of it. Just take a look at them—imposing looking overcoats, heavy walking sticks, and wise looks! They haunt the hotel lobbies and slouch through the corridors up here at the capitol. That goes for all of them, the whisky crowd and all the rest. I've heard a lot about lobbying and what it does. But in the 10 years I've been in Washington I don't believe a lobbyist has ever changed a vote."

"That's a sweeping statement."

"But not too sweeping. I tell you, this crowd you have to contend with can't affect a vote—not a single vote! They're paid gossipers, salaried scandal mongers—and that lets them out. They can't make members listen to them. If they could, they wouldn't know what to say. If lobbying ever was worth anything in this town, it's been a lost art ever since I've been here."

Miss Downey came in and went back to her seat.

"Mr. Mannersley will see you in a few minutes," she informed Smith.

"Why not now?" asked Waller, with his first sign of impatience. "What's he doing?"

Miss Downey rebuked him with tip tilted nose as she replied:

"He's in conference with Mr. Mitchell."

"Albert Mitchell—the whisky man!"

"Yes, Mr. Waller."

"Ah," smiled Smith, "I thought they couldn't make members listen to the n!"

"This is different," contended Waller. "The whisky people elected Mannersly. They got him in his home district. That's the only way the crooks can affect legislation nowadays, by hopping out and paying a man's campaign expenses. Outside of that, the only voice that sounds out imperiously in Washington nowadays is the people's voice really."

"That," commented Smith "brings me to my story of what I accomplished while I was in New York I want to tell you ——"

He paused, checked by the entrance of a man through the door that led into the meeting room of the committee. The newcomer hesitating in the doorway, looked casually at Waller, and, from that, stared at Smith. The men's eyes met and held for a long moment The stranger wore a flashy blue suit that had in it a broad, lateral stripe of white. Above a vividly flowered vest he had spread a curious cravat of brilliant red. His derby was slanted to one side. He looked like a low type of professional gambler. There was about him nothing striking except his vulgarity, but something in his stare built the encounter into a real scene. The hint of fear that had been in his eyes turned to effrontery. Standing there, perfectly still, his dissipated face a confession of sin, his clothing an outrage against good taste, his whole bearing an advertisement of weakness, he finally lowered his gaze from Smith's and laughed.

The insolence of it was so pronounced, so direct, that Smith looked questioningly to Waller.

The stranger, a smile of impudence still upon his lips, turned to Miss Downey.

"Where's Mr. Mitchell?" he asked

Miss Downey evidently had seen him before.

"He's still with Mr. Mannersley," she replied coolly. She even forgot to end the sentence on a high key.

"Don't guess I'll wait any longer, then," he announced, going toward the door leading into the corridor.

As he went out he turned his head so that he might see Smith once more. He laughed again, this time as if he felt some odd sort of embarrassment. He did not close the door after him, and Miss Downey rose quickly, as if by instinct, to shut it and keep out some unpleasant thing.

"Who on earth was that?" Smith asked, turning to Waller.

Chollewollie showed real excitement.

"I'll bet $1,000,000," he said in a low tone, "that that fellow knows something about you knew you years ago!"

Smith did not reply. He had turned to meet Mannersley, who, followed by Albert Mitchell the lobbyist, was entering the room.

CHAPTER TEN.

Manersley's bearing had in it nothing of cordiality. Halting after a step into the room, he looked at the agitator coldly, without either welcome or inquiry.

"Good morning," Smith greeted him.

"Well," he said, "what is it?"

Waller, still lounging in his chair and watching the scene intently, saw that the insult in the congressman's voice stung Smith a little too much. He was afraid the agitator would lose control of the situation. He went to he relief.

"By the way, Mr. Mitchell," he drawled, as if trying to grasp a hazy recollection, "where was it you tended bar?"

Mitchell, burly, red faced, each of his fat features a distinct definition of what whisky may do for a man when absorbed daily in regular potations, scowled. Miss Downey, by a heroic effort, saved herself from a snicker. Even Smith smiled before he replied to Mannersley's question:

"I have come to make a last appeal to you for action by this committee on the prohibition amendment."

Mitchell, maintaining his attitude back of the congressman, devoted his attention to Smith. Waller's smile had not been affected by the scowl.

"You know my position on that," Mannersley answered curtly. "And you know the position of a majority of the committee. It's useless to discuss it."

"But is it?"

"Quite."

Mannersley turned on his heel There came into Smith's voice enough of command to prolong the interview.

"At least," he said sharply, "you will permit me to give you my reasons for making this final appeal to you—particularly because there is connected with it a warning."

Mannersley, facing him again, appeared affronted

"A warning?"

"Say, rather," amended Smith, "a statement of what we intend to do"

The congressman knew enough of what Smith had done already If there was something more coming, it would do no harm for him to know it

"Go ahead" He assumed indifference.

Waller, describing the thing afterward, said

When Smith began to talk, he became immediately clothed in the purple of sincerity There was upon him the regality of earnestness He was imperious an uncrowned king

The agitator's figure seemed all of a sudden more erect The feeling back of his words chiselled his features to a finer pattern

"Then, Mr Mannersley he said, "I ask you and your committee to report favorably the resolution authorizing this amendment to the constitution I ask it of you, first, for financial reasons money"

He waved his hands widely His smile was persuasive

"That appeals to everybody money I ask you to do your share in putting liquor out of the way because the cost to the public of caring for the crime, the pauperism, and the insanity caused by alcohol is more than $2,000,000,000 every year. Two billions every year for housing and feeding and clothing the world of wreckage that is the work of rum- $2,000,000,000 every 12 months' And the total liquor bill of this country the mere purchase price of the alcohol that is bought by the drink and in bottles and barrels is $2,000,000,000 a year Two billions every 12 months for the stuff that is drunk' There alone you have $4,000,000,000 Ah don't smile you old rapt' Those are figures that even the whisky people never have been able to disprove or combat They are of official and medical record Nothing can go behind them Add to that the reduced efficiency the unrest, the crime, the corruption caused and cut short the life of employment and you have a grand, common total of $6,000,000,000 a year as the tribute this country pays to alcohol'

Mitchell shifting from one foot to the other, shrugged his big shoulders and laughed

Smith, extending his right hand with lightning like rapidity accused him

"You cannot deny it' It has never been denied successfully That is what you and the men like you take away from the American people every year 6,000,000,000 of dollars, six times more than is used to pay all the expenses of running this government for a year."

He turned to Mannersley, his head thrown slightly back his chest expanded, his tense right arm compelling attention.

"That's the money argument Secondly, I present this thing to you from its moral aspects. Ninety-five per cent of all the cases of lawlessness and crime that crowd our court dockets today were caused by men being put back to lower levels of mentality and emotionalism by the use of whisky Ponder that in your spare moments' Out of the whisky bottles has come 95 per cent of our national disgrace!"

Mannersley stirred uneasily, like a soldier who realizes for the first time that bullets are falling too close about him.

"Oh," he said impatiently, "I don't believe all this stuff."

"Then Smith challenged him, his voice sharp and quick, 'you don't believe facts facts and figures that have been published time and time again, and never controverted."

He advanced a step nearer to the congressman.

"Finally," he took up the story he had come to tell, "I speak in the name of charity—the women and the children." His smile was at the same time an appeal and a denunciation. "Mr. Mannersley, every evil thing that has been wiped out of existence has gone to destruction before the awful strength of woman's tears Have not enough women wept enough? Every lovely thing that has come into the world has been builded out of the fabric of women's dreams. Are not the dreams of the women to be realized? In this evil thing, as in all the others, the prayers of the kneeling women will avail. Their tears cannot be denied. Their dreams must be fulfilled."

Mannersley started to interrupt but Smith, his voice bell like, his attitude heroic, swept on, refusing to be quieted. Two members of the House and several employes in the building, attracted by the sound of the discussion, had opened the corridor door and were standing, silent, caught up by the imperious scene. Neither Mannersley nor Smith knew that they were there. Waller wrote about it afterward for his paper.

"Think of it, Mr. Mannersley! his words rang out. You stand there, a whisky agent at your back, and utilize your official position to uphold the thing that starves children and impoverishes men—the thing that some day may break the hearts of your own daughters. It is useless to deny it. It is folly to call it by any other name The statistics of investigators and the voice of your own conscience must be in accord. There is no escape from it! It is written on the face of this country that whisky, the thing you defend, is our national disgrace, our foe, and our degradation. I have given you my arguments—the money, the sin, the misery. I ask you: what is your answer?"

He fell back a step, waiting. Miss Downey, surrendering to the spell of what he had said, placed her arms on the desk and, lowering her face into them, sobbed. The sob was almost a groan. The group in the corridor doorway was motionless, like figures on a piece of tapestry.

"And the right of personal liberty," Mannersley answered him, his voice cold and cynical, his manner reluctant, as if he argued unwillingly with the man confronting him, "the right of personal liberty, which is the keystone in the arch of our government, our democracy? What of that?"

Indignation took hold of John Smith indignation and scorn.

Personal liberty!" he made the phrase a scourge. "An argument for murder and a motto for anarchists' The cry of the coward—the refuge of the rascal! Mr. Mannersley, when will you realize that there is no such thing as personal liberty? When will you, and those like you, understand that nowhere under the stars of heaven can there be such a thing as personal liberty in the sense in which you have just profaned it? None of us can do as he pleases. Each of us is bound to many others by the golden chains of duty, the beautiful bonds of sympathy Separate us and we are grains of sand, blown hither and thither by the winds of wildness, mere shadows that pass and leave behind nothing that is good, nothing that is strong You are your brother's keeper Deny that, and you deny all decency, all government, all civilization You are your brother's keeper You are!"

He paused, his right hand dropping to his side.

"So that's what you had to say?" Mannersley attempted to disregard him

Smith smiled a little wearily.

"Surely," he said, "it is enough?"

"Quite," the congressman replied dryly "And, of course, it doesn't change the situation. We shall not report the resolution. You know that."

"You won't?"

There was in Smith's tone the promise of menace.

Mannersley, checking the move he had made to turn away, laughed at him:

"Certainly not!"

"Then—one moment, Mr. Mannersley' We'll put this resolution through the House, through congress, in spite of you! Do not delude yourself with the idea that eight or 10 men can stand in the way of the wishes of the nation. Your committee will hold its first meeting in the first week of December, the beginning of the next session of congress. And we will make you report that resolution—compel you! You will report it because, on the day of your meeting, there will be on the outside of the capitol thousands, tens upon tens of thousands, of men and women demanding that you do this thing."

He turned, with one of his flashlike movements, toward Waller.

"That's your story for tomorrow, Waller," he declared, exultation in his manner. "In a little more than a month from today the multitude, the troopers of temperance, from every state in the union, will thunder at the doors of the capitol, will drive this committee to do the will of the public."

Where It Couldn't Be Seen

It was a hot hummer day with that peculiar kind of heat common to the Atlantic slope. Five big stout gentlemen were going to the top of a New York building. The sweat was pouring from their foreheads and their handkerchiefs looked like Coney Island bathing-suits hung out to dry "I wish there was a beer saloon in this elevator," remarked one fat gentleman. "Yes, boy, you ought to have a keg of beer aboard this elevator," chimed in another. The boy looked at the five fat men and then remarked solemnly, "Oh, I guess there's over a keg of beer in this elevator now."

His Epitaph.

A recent automobile accident in an upstate county resulted in the death of the driver and the injury of the passengers.

The coroner summoned several witnesses, among them a farmer living near the scene of the accident There was voluminous testimony regarding the high speed at which the car traveled. Witnesses said, too, that the road was in bad repair. The coroner finally reached the farmer who lived near the scene.

"What would you say about this accident, Mr. Swiggett?" the coroner asked.

"Well, if I was writin' that young man's epitaph," the witness drawled, "I'd say he died trying to git 60 miles out of a 10-mile road."—Indianapolis News.

Diet, Exercise or Death!

An eminent medical authority writes that most of our city folks die of a thickening of the arteries or of kidney disease. The kidneys become clogged and do not filter the poisons from the blood, and one trouble follows another, high blood pressure damages the heart, arteries and kidneys. Usually its danger signals are backache, pain here or there, swollen feet or ankles, rheumatic twinges or spots appearing before the eyes.

"The very best remedy is this: Eat meat but once a day, or not at all. Plenty of outdoor exercise, and drink pure water frequently. Before meals take a little Anuric, the great uric acid neutralizer that is easily obtained at the drug store. When you have dizziness, chills or sweating, worry, or dragging pains in back, try this wonderful enemy to uric acid, which Dr. Pierce of Buffalo, N. Y., discovered and named Anuric. Anuric, more potent than lithia, dissolves uric acid as hot water does sugar."

HEALTHY CHILDREN come from healthy mothers. And mothers will certainly be healthy if they'll take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Nothing can equal it in building up a woman's strength, in regulating and assisting all her natural functions, and in putting in perfect order every part of the female system. It lessens the pains and burdens, supports and strengthens weak, nursing mothers.

It's an invigorating, restorative tonic, a soothing and bracing nervine.

Castor oil is good for children or adults, and especially good for aged people. A pleasant form of a vegetable laxative that is to be had at any drug store, was invented by Dr. Pierce, who put together May-apple (podophyllin), aloes, jalap. Ask at any drug store for "Pleasant Pellets," and they can be had for little money. They contain no calomel and are of vegetable constituents, therefore harmless.

MEDICINE FAKES.

The woman who buys medicine with which to produce an abortion is throwing away her money. Any number of experiments and clinical tests show that no sort of teas, or other medicines are capable of producing abortion when given in any dose that is anywhere near safe for the woman. The abortionists use such teas and pills as "come-ons."

If the suppression is due to mental agitation nature cures, the tea gets the reputation and the prescriber gets the money. If the pills fail then consent to an operation is easier had.

The number of remedies used to procure abortion is studied the whole group. He finds that beer used to ease cramps. The cramp easers are about as faky as the abortion producers. They are a lot of "yarbs" with old woman's reputations founded on the alcohol mixed with them rather than on the virtues of the "yarb" itself.

Within the last year Dr. Pilcher of Omaha carefully and scientifically has studied the whole group. He finds that practically every one is useless and entirely without effect on the organs they are supposed to benefit. They taste like medicine, but that is their only resemblance to it.

Squaw vine (Mitchella repens) was without any effect.

Passion flower (Passibora incarnata) was inactive.

Chestnut (Castanea dentata) was useless and ineffective.

Motherwort (Leonurus cardiaca) has no effect.

False unicorn (Chamaelirium luteum) was practically without effect.

Blackhaw (Viburnum prunifolium) was as useless and ineffective when used on the human subject as when used on the lower animals.

Cramp bark (Viburnum opulus) probably is without action on the excised uterus of the guinea pig.

Maple bark (Acer spicatum) probably is quite void of activity.

Blessed thistle (Cnicus benedictus) has practically no action on the excised uterus.

If a prescription is given for any of these to be used to east monthly cramps it might as well be emptied in the sewer. The same can be said of patent medicines, the beneficial effects of which are supposed to be due to these "yarbs."

A few drugs used for cramps were found to have some effect when properly used. One of these was the old standby valerian. The preparations of valerian which were found to have some effect were the fluid extract and the oil. Valerian teas were inactive.

Other drugs which were found to have some sedative effect were unicorn root (Aletris farinosa), pulsatila, Jamaica dogwood (Icthymothia piscupula), and figwort (Scrophularia nodosa). Perhaps blue cohosh, skullcap, life root, wild yam, and lady's slipper had some effect, though not great or constant.

Freight Relief.

From the Milwaukee Journal.

Other things have been more exciting but for the past few months perhaps nothing has been more serious than the condition of freight service in the United States. When the war in Europe began every cable told how military necessity blocked all traffic not needed for the prosecution of war. When we stop to think how almost blocked has been our transportation of commodities necessary to daily life, how there are coal famines and actual suffering, it is not reassuring to ask ourselves what the situation would have been had military necessity been added.

At last there is to be decisive action to relieve the congestion by abating the car shortage, which has been the most considerable factor. Shipments for export are no longer to be hauled to the seaboard and left standing in cars until vessel room is obtained. They are to wait until there is a real prospect of unloading them when they reach the Atlantic ports.

Even more important is the decision to send trains of empty freight cars west on fast schedules. Trainloads of empty freight cars ought to mean notable improvement in freight conditions in this part of the country. The east has been discovering that it needs its market basket.

American railroad men pride themselves on being the most efficient and enterprising in the world. They have a long record of achievement to justify their pride. Yet for months there has been almost a paralysis of shipping. The arteries of trade have become more and more congested until actual closing of factories and stoppage of business stared the country in the face at the suminit of the greatest prosperity in its history. Yet it has taken months to decide on actual plans to relieve the congestion. It may be that the public has not realized the actual need of the railroads of facilities for extension. If that is true, however, it can be laid largely to the determination of railroad management to impose their wishes on the public rather than to show the public what their needs are. The present difficulties should lead to a more genuine enlightenment.

Immortal.

We often hear the critics state, in magazine or journal: "This noble book is truly great—its fame will be eternal." Just now they're boosting such a book, writ by a gifted Briton, and say we'll all have far to look, for one as ably written. "It will endure while people speak," they say, "the English lingo, it is the work the highbrows seek—a masterpiece, by jingo!" And in a year, or maybe less, the book will be forgotten. I bought and read it, I confess. I found it rather rotten. Since Stevenson was called away, beyond our jurisdiction, I doubt if any human jay has written lasting fiction. Each year we hail a masterpiece that's bound to last for ages, the sons of men will never cease to con its noble pages. Can you recall the books you read, two years ago last autumn? They were immortal tomes, you said—and then the junk man got 'em. The modern authors try to teach old lessons, stale and hoary; they roll their coatsleeves up and preach, and so forget their story. We listen to them as they spout, and yawn where we should chortle, and none, since Stevenson went out, has struck the note immortal.

One hundred and nineteen golf and country clubs in the United States and Canada have installed trapshooting equipment.

Battle Hymn of the Republic.

Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord;
He is trampling out the vintage where the grapes of wrath are stored;
He hath loosed the fateful lightning of his terrible swift sword;
His truth is marching on.

I have seen him in the watch-fires of a hundred circling camps;
They have builded him an altar in the evening dews and damps;
I can read his righteous sentence by the dim and flaring lamps,
His day is marching on.

I have read a fiery gospel writ in rows of burnished steel:
"As ye deal with my contemners, so with you my grace shall deal;"
Let the Hero, born of woman, crush the serpent with his heel,
Since God is marching on.

He has sounded forth the trumpet that shall never call retreat;
He is sifting out the hearts of men before his judgment seat;
Oh, be swift, my soul, to answer Him! be jubilant, my feet!
Our God is marching on.

In the beauty of the lilies Christ was born across the sea,
With a glory in His bosom that transfigures you and me;
As He died to make men holy, let us die to make men free,
While God is marching on.

—Julia Ward Howe.

INCORRECT POSTURES.

The American Posture is endeavoring to solve some of the problems relating to posture. To settle the question of toeing in and toeing out they devised a chart on which the foot under study is plotted. A line running from the middle of the back of the heel through the exact middle of the heel is projected forward. The foot is placed on this chart and an outline of it is made. It is so placed that the middle of the heel is on this central line. The distance from this line to inside of the ball and also that to the outside of the ball is measured. If the distance to the inside of the ball is greater the foot is said to be inflared (pigeon-toed, toeing in). If the distance to the outside is greater the foot is said to be outflared (toeing out, slew footed).

In a study of over 11 feet 30 per cent were found to have straight feet, 1 per cent inflared feet, and 56 per cent outflared.

The inefficiency, discomfort, and foot ills due to toeing out is well known.

A study of 170 people in China and India many of whom had never worn shoes, showed that only 25 per cent were outflared (toed out).

The committee found that the shoes on the market were not constructed with proper regard to the shape of the foot. Shoes designed by the Posture league soon will be on the market.

A committee of the league has studied with X-rays the position of the internal organs. It was found that when a person stood in a slouching position or when he stood so that his abdomen sagged the position of the abdominal organs was lowered in some instances several inches. On the other hand, in the erect posture the organs were raised from 1 to 3 inches.

Holding the chest up and breathing with the abdominal muscles raised the organs from 1 to 6 inches. This is different from ordinary deep breathing, which is generally done in something of a slouch position. That kind of breathing did not change the position of the organs.

In the recumbent posture the organs were raised from 1 to 4 inches.

The league is preparing specifications for furniture and also for ready made clothing. Ordinary ready made clothing hangs too much weight on the points of the shoulders and the hips. They found some ready made clothing so constructed that it tended strongly to pull the shoulders together and produce slouching.

Dr. Mosher attributed some consumption to bad posture, especially the "sidewise slouch." In this position one foot is turned outward and the leg is held lax. The hip on that side drags down, which throws the other hip up. This throws the body out of plumb and produces a long side to side curve of the spine.

This binds the ribs on one side and prevents that lung from expanding as fully as it should, especially at the upper part, where consumption generally starts. It is standing in this position habitually which causes a disposition toward consumption.

Protection to Merchant Shipping.

Considerable misapprehension exists among business men engaged in international commerce as to the subject of convoy, the arming of merchant vessels, and the use of other measures to overcome submarine operations.

It is not correct, as generally supposed, that it would be an act of war on the part of this country to use its war vessels for the convoy of merchant ships through the so-called "barred area." The caution displayed by this country and other neutrals in adopting that effective measure of safeguarding shipping is based principally on the fact that in the absence of convoy, neutral merchant vessels might be attacked and even sunk under certain conditions which would prevent such action from violating the principles laid down by this country, whereas if the vessels are convoyed, the convoy constitutes an American guaranty against molestation under any conditions whatsoever, and the exercise by the Germans of even the conceded right of attack would be tantamount to an attack upon the warships constituting the convoy, and thus constitute a provoked act of war.

Logically, therefore, while the convoy is not in itself an act of war, its necessary operation will amount to that unless Germany is to immediately agree to refrain from all submarine activity where merchant vessels are under convoy.

As to the arming of merchant vessels for their own protection it is probable that this can only be done under authority of specific congressional legislation. There is no such legislation on our books at this time, and in the absence of proper governmental authority a merchant vessel which is armed for the purpose of attacking submarines or interfering with submarine operations would be treated by the Germans as engaged in piracy. This would render all on board liable to be shot as pirates.

Of course, similar principles prevent private vessels from acting as submarine chasers or in any other warlike capacity, in the absence of action by the government making the vessels arms of the American navy.

Where the Offense Lies.

From the Milwaukee Journal.

"You have shipped your goods to the allies because they had command of the seas," said Ambassador von Bernstorff as he sailed back to Germany. "If the conditions had been reversed and the German navy, instead of the British had that command, you would have shipped your goods to us."

Exactly. And if Germany had been in our place, she would be selling to both sides if both sides could buy, or to one side if only one side could buy, just as she has done in similar circumstances many times in recent wars. Moreover, her course, as in former wars, would be fully in accord with world law and the general practices of nations.

America's offense, in the eyes of the German partisans here, lies in the fact that she has been selling munitions to the enemies of Germany. Had conditions—the control of the sea—permitted America to sell to Germany, she would have done so, as Count von Bernstorff himself admits. And in this country, at least on the pro-German side, talk about the inhumanity of this traffic would not have risen even to a whisper.

These same German partisans are attacking President Wilson for sending Count von Bernstorff home. The former ambassador, however, publicly declared that the president could not have done anything else.

The Human Butterscotch.

From the Youngstown Telegram.

Feeling that an alcohol rub would make him feel better, a south side man snooped about the cupboard until he came across a bottle which seemed to contain the liquor for which he was looking.

Reassuring himself with a sniff at the contents, the man went up to the family bathroom, bathed himself thoroughly with the liquor, and went to sleep.

That night he dreamed he was a big all day sucker, and that he was being displayed in the window of a candy store.

He finally awakened to find himself wrapped up in a sheet feeling like a fresh butterscotch.

"What in the world is the matter?" his wife inquired.

"I believe I am all stuck up," was the reply.

"What in the world have you been doing?"

"Rubbing myself all over with alcohol."

"Where did you get the alcohol?"

"In a bottle on the first shelf of the cupboard."

The wife laughed hysterically.

"No wonder you are stuck up," she said, "that bottle had alcohol in it all right, but it was made into a syrup with rock candy to be used as cough medicine."

DOCTOR'S ORDERS.

"Six months ago you told me you couldn't sleep at night for worrying about the money you owed me."

"So I did," answered the impecunious debtor.

"But you still owe me, and you are not a nervous wreck."

"True. You see, when I realized that it was impossible to pay you, I went to see a doctor about my insomnia. He advised me to quit worrying, and if there is anything I pride myself on it's following the doctor's orders implicitly."

Too Good to Be True.

"This candidate impresses me by his sincerity."

"You mean because he weeps for the wrongs of the common people?"

"Yes."

"And says he's not ambitious, but merely wants to serve the public, coveting neither fame, nor power nor riches?"

"Exactly."

"You are entitled to your own opinion, of course, but these are the very reasons that make me doubt his sincerity."

TAIL OF A DOG.

"Aw, say! We can't tie no can to dat bobtail dorg!"

"Naw-w! Dat dorg's tail puts me in mind of one of dem serial stories. Dey ain't no end to it!"

The Missing Word.

"A word to the wise is sufficient,"
Is a proverb that's often heard,
But we need some wise guy to tell us
Just which is the proper word.

Easily Convinced.

"I presume a successful automobile salesman has to be a glib talker?"

"Oh, yes. And it also helps him in his business if he has the pulchritude of a moving picture actor."

"How is that?"

"When a car is being demonstrated to a woman, if the chap who drives it is handsome she sure feels the engine is all right."

Exceptional Character.

"Abou ben Adhem, who loved his fellow man, had nothing on Dubwaite."

"How is that?"

"I have actually seen Dubwaite display a friendly interest in a pair of plumbers who were mending a pipe at his house, although he knew he would have to pay five times what the job was worth."

Forced Economy.

"Just got a telegram from my broker."

"What did he say?"

"'Wire a thousand at once.'"

"And you complied?"

"No. I answered that I couldn't even afford to wire a thousand words."

LOGIC.

"Earlie, why don't you comb your hair?"

"'Cause I ain't got a comb."

"Well, why don't you tell your mamma to buy you one?"

"'Cause then I'd have to comb my hair."

Playing the Game.

She said she loved a man of deeds,
Then let her lover skate
And took a mollycoddle's name—
Whose deeds were for real estate.

Matters to Keep Dark.

"Henry, what is meant by mending political fences?" asked Mrs. Twobble.

"That means a variety of activities," replied Mr. Twobble, "but seldom anything a candidate desires to have published in the newspapers."

Expert Mechanician.

"Think your wife will learn to run this automobile?"

"Certainly. Didn't she learn to run a coffee percolator?"

Plantain a Tropic Food Staple.

The plantain, a large, course banana, suitable for cooking, is a food staple of the tropics. The people of the United States thus far have not been educated to its use.

New Idle Hour Opening

The opening of the new Idle Hour Theatre, Friday evening by a full house and the play, "The Taming of Lulu" proved to be a very meritous performance and pleased the large number present. Hoffman's orchestra also added spice to the occasion. Those who had never had occasion to see the inside of the house were indeed agreeably surprised in finding such a nice cozy little house and the management received many compliments for their progressive spirit in providing such a good place for the theater going public of Klemme. The "movies" which were put on for the first time Saturday evening, were put on free and attracted two packed houses. They have started a new serial, entitled, "Liberty" and according to those who seen the opening installment it promises to be a good one Until warmer weather but two moving picture shows will be put on each week, Thursday and Saturday evenings, and later three nights per week. Manager Parsons also informs us that he has several good road shows booked which will be announced later.

Miss Church

(An Appreciation by W. C. Ramsay)

It is written, "By their works shall ye know them." The truth of this proverb has had no better exemplification in this community than in the life which closed Tuesday morning of last week. In the passing of such an one it seems fitting that a word of appreciation should be written, not so much as an encomium upon the deceased for none is needed, but because of the lesson such a life teaches to we who are left to mourn. Miss Church resided here for the greater part of her life and she was a decided force in the welfare of the community and an important factor in religious, social and civic circles. Her life was broadened by much travel, she having visited many parts of this country as well as Europe, but in all her travels, she was ever content to return home—here where she had so many warm personal friends and to her parents, whose only solace she was. Of acknowledged ability, her sterling worth, her lovely disposition, her unusual talents and her attractive personality had endeared her to everyone with whom she came in contact and has left a visible impression for good upon this community. In all her relations of life she was courteous, considerate, candid, genial, gentle, charitable, just, and withal, sensitively honorable. She was courageous yet modest; sympathetic yet unobtrusive; plain spoken yet never offensive. She cared more for character than for reputation, and for substance rather than semblance

She avoided notoriety and spurned all display and ostentation. She despised conception, shunned all sham, and scorned ever scandal. She achieved success for she had the respect of intelligent men and women and the love of little children. She filled her niche and accomplished her task and has left the world better than she found it. She never lacked appreciation of earth's beauty or failed to express it. She looked for the best in others and gave the best she had; such a life was an inspiration and its memory is a benediction. No resident of Belmond has been held in higher esteem or has enjoyed the respect and confidence of friends and neighbors to a greater degree than she. Strongly intrenched in the affections of the people among whom she lived and moved without reproach all her life, she needs no granite shaft or statue of bronze to perpetuate her memory, for to live in the hearts she has left behind is not to die. We rejoice that she has lived and that we had the privilege of personally knowing her, and are ever grateful that we came within the radius of the influence of her acquaintance. We now keenly feel her loss and deeply mourn her demise. Though gone hence, the fine influence of her noble life still remains, and the sweet fragrance of her kind acts and the good deeds shall ever waft on down the labyrinths of time.—Belmond Herald-Press.

Missionary Coming

Rev. J. P. Pointer a returned missionary from Portugese East Africa will give an illustrated lecture on Africa and its people, and their needs Sunday evening at the German M. E. church at 7:30 o'clock. No Admission charged. Everybody welcome.

Seventy-One Enter Spelling Contest

The spelling contest held here Wednesday evening brought out a packed house and the large number present were surely well repaid for their attendance. This is the third annual spelling contest to be held here and brought out one of the largest classes, seventy-one in number, that has ever been held in the county and the spellers were just as good as the class was large. After a large number of the spellers had went through the entire list of one thousand words furnished by the county superintendent it was necessary to take up a new list of words and the following were returned winners: 1st, Earl Josten; 2nd, Gertrude Wilkins; 3rd, Bennie Swalve; 4th, Bertha Miller; 5th, Ira Wilkins; 6th, Myrtle Bell; 7th, Joseph Simper.

On account of County Supt. Baggs not being able to be present Prof. Neese took charge of the contest until he was tired out, when he turned them over to Rev. Meyer. All of the spellers done exceptionally good even if they did not win prizes and have reason to be proud of their record.

Score $109 on Sows Bred to Big Pathfinder

Miner Bros of Ventura, Iowa, held their initial Duroc sow sale, February 28th, and it terminated most successfully. Big Pathfinder, of course, was the drawing card. Twenty-six sows bred to him averaged $109, and the average on the entire lot, forty-one head, was $93.50. The boys were especially well pleased with the outcome. They regard the owning of a first-class herd boar to be the prime factor to success. They expect to be back again another year with an offering still better than this one. And from the class of sows they have added to their herd, and by the use of Big Pathfinder, it would indeed be surprising if they weren't.—Wallaces' Farmer.

Garner Booster Club Meets

The March meeting of the Garner Booster Club was held in the Congregational church Wednesday evening. On account of the stormy weather a smaller number than usual were present but it was a good meeting and the ladies served a splendid supper which all enjoyed very much. Mr. Shortess of the Ames Extention department was the principal speaker of the evening and besides talking about the Philippines where he spent thirteen years and explaining all about the Short Courses and their operation he gave some valuable suggestions on how to better a community and make it a center round which all the events revolve. During his talk he announced that a telegram had just been received from Ames stating that they had decided to put on a Short Course at Garner next year. This was good news not only to the committee who had charge of the arrangements but to the entire Booster Club as well and a list was immediately circulated to get two hundred farmers and merchants to pledge their support and cooperation to the Short Course the coming winter and many names were secured right there.—Signal.

Falls Heir to Huge Sum

Charles S. Terwilliger just received notice from New York state that he had been remembered in the will of his father's brother who died there the latter part of last year. The surviving widow has a life interest in the estate which amounts to over two hundred thousand dollars. $20,000 is given to the public library, $3000 to one of the churches there and two thousand to another. Mr. Terwilliger is one of eight relatives who received $3000 apiece and there are six grand nephews and nieces who are to receive $1000 apiece and the remainder is to be divided pro rata among these fourteen relatives at the time of the death of the widow. This will mean about $15,000 for Mr. Terwilliger's share and is quite a sum in this part of the country and we congratulate him on his good fortune.—Signal.

THINGS are not always what they seem. It is important to know about the tubing in steel gates. To see that it is full size is not enough. It may look the same outside and be too thin.

Only "IOWA" gates have the heaviest weight of high carbon steel tubing in the frame. Many other features make "IOWA" gates better.

THE KLEMME TIMES

M. M. MAGNER, Publisher.

KLEMME, IOWA

Americans find it more difficult than the English to understand what Dickens means when he says in "David Copperfield". "Women went clicking along the pavement in pattens." Pattens were an abbreviated form of stilts. The word is also used by builders as the name of the base of a column or pillar, and so, architecturally, the patten is the support used by a woman to keep her out of the water and mud. From this architectural use has come the secondary application of the word, meaning an arrangement attached to the shoe, so that the walker is raised three or four inches above the solid earth. If the mud and water did not exceed that depth, the shoes were thus kept fairly dry. It appears that pattens were not worn solely by the rich, but were luxuries indulged in by the very poor. In speaking of a persons who was not especially speedy, Ben Jonson uses the comparison, "You make no more haste now than a beggar upon pattens." In the ballad of "Farmer's Old Wife" occurs this startling expression "She up with her pattens, and beat out their brains."

Another of London's less desirable landmarks, I noticed from a bus top the other day, has just disappeared in the last of the Great Smith street "common" lodging houses, which has been pulled down to make way for a block of offices It stood on the southern end of the site of the "Long Ditch," which marked the western boundry of the isle of Thorney and the "sanctuary" rights of the Abbey of Westminster The street from its earliest days had been the refuge of men broken in health, morals and fortune, and its character only began to change with the erection of the Church house and the demolitions that this entailed Gradually the lodging houses have been wiped out, expensive blocks of flats taking their place One curious result has been a great increase in the foot traffic, which has necessitated the placing of a refuge at its junction with Victoria street opposite the Westminster Palace hotel—or must I say the National Liberal club?

All Guatemala celebrates the feast of Minerva, the most elaborate observance in its calendar The revival of this feast, educational and patriotic in its motives is the idea of the present president, Senor don Estrada Cabrera. Like its Roman precursor, it marks the close of the school year and prizes are awarded for excellence in scholarship. One of the prizes - $ 00 in gold and a trip to the United States—was given by an American company for the best essay written in English Ceremonies intended to inculcate love of country and devotion to duty form part of the celebration There is also an exhibition of the products of the republic held in connection with the annual event. Of the exhibits this year coffee sugar and sugar cane deserve special mention. American made plows and disk plows especially adapted to sugar cane cultivation were on display

Great flights of locusts (grasshoppers) occur in Syria Arabia and other countries of the orient Locusts were used by the Israelites for food (Leviticus xi, 21 22) and later in Palestine There are different ways of preparing them for food Sometimes they are ground and pounded, mixed with flour and water and made into cakes Sometimes they are salted and so eaten, sometimes smoked, boiled or roasted stewed or fried in butter The assertion that the locusts that formed part of the food of John the Baptist were not the insects of that name but the sweet pods of the locust tree is erroneous The monks of Palestine call these pods 'St. John's bread'

The Southern Pacific railroad provides transportation for the families of some of its construction gangs who are compelled to move as the work progresses The families include a number of children who do not remain in one place long enough to attend school In order that they may receive an education the company has turned a box car into a school room, equipped with desks blackboards and other essentials. A teacher is provided and a regular school program is in progress, even when the children are traveling at a good speed The pupils are of several nationalities, but are being turned into true Americans under the American flag which floats over the school car

A railroad in the southern part of the United States, in order to make it plain to its patrons why suburban trains are not stopped whether there are passengers or not, has carefully computed the cost of stopping a train The calculation was made that it costs about 60 cents to stop a freight train of 2,000 tons and then to speed it up again to its normal rate of 25 miles an hour This calculation was, of course, based upon the price of coal One-half of this expense represented the amount of coal burned, then there was the time wasted by the men, this being valued at 10 cents. The wear and tear on the brakes and the starting mechanism was estimated at 20 cents.

Rhodesia's output of gold for August of this year amounted to 80,909 ounces valued at $1,644,881. According to Consul John P Bray, Johannesburg, this almost equals the record month of April, 1916, when the value of the production reached $1 651,621 The yield for the first eight months of this year totaled $12,771,292, an increase of $519,499 over the corresponding period in 1915

New factories, homes, and the openings of the subway, between the Grand Central terminal and the bridge plaza are held as the means for adding 1 500,000 more passengers to trolley lines in New York city. They carried 54,000,000 during 1916.

HOT FIGHT IS OVER ROAD BILL

Pro-Highway Men Admit Losing Ground—Harding Swings Votes for Johnston-Pitt Measure.

Des Moines Ia March 10—The pro-highway commission forces after the first hour of debate on the road bill, which was a special order for business this morning admitted for the first time that they had lost ground in their fight.

Governor Harding, Lee W. Elwood, of Howard author of the Elwood-Mackie bill said had succeeded in swinging over two votes during the morning hours, thus giving the Pitt-Johnston-Harding bill two votes more than the opposing measure.

The debate was opened first on the Elwood-Mackie bill for the reason that it was introduced as an amendment to the administration bill The Elwood-Mackie bill is directly opposed to the administration measure in that it would retain the commission and permit the issuance of bond Elwood opened the debate on his bill speaking for nearly two hours He explained his measure and compared it with the administration bill attempting to show where his bill was the better

But little attention was shown Elwood by the opposition forces who declared that they could and would not change their opinions When the house convened the administration road men let loose a tide of petitions in favor of the Pitt-Johnston bill for three quarters of an hour The clerks were kept busy reading the petitions which had been saved for the occasion

Want Highway Commissioner.

The fight took a sudden turn just before the noon adjournment when Representative Douglas Rogers of Carroll, a democrat introduced an amendment to the Elwood-Mackie bill, striking out all clauses pertaining to the highway commission and substituting a highway commissioner as planned in the Pitt-Johnston bill

During the noon hour the leaders in the administration camp although certain of victory of their bill if voted upon virtually decided to back the Rogers amendment in favor of their bill With the Rogers amendment the Elwood-Mackie bill would be quite acceptable to the administration leaders, even though it permits the issuance of bonds for certain work It was believed that more support could be gained in both the house and senate by accepting the Rogers amendments

Should the amendment be accepted it will not be a sign that the administration road men are losing ground because the main issue at stake was that of the highway commission

Harding's Influence Felt.

Elwood Mackie men admitted shortly after the session opened this morning that they were none too strong They lost several votes through Governor Harding's influence The executive called several of the doubtful men to his office for conferences, with apparently good results

The lineup when the house convened at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon was 53 in favor of the Elwood Mackie bill and 55 for the Pitt Johnston measure Representative Miles who had been claimed by the Elwood Mackie faction, deserted their ranks at the last moment, due to the governor's influence

Representative Dean, who also had been depended upon to support the pro-highway commission bill, was wavering during the day He declared, however, that he would vote for the Elwood Mackie bill if his vote was needed

Against Federal Aid.

The Rogers amendment, besides abolishing the highway commission, would strike out the section relative to the acceptance of federal aid This probably will meet with strong opposition

The house was crowded with visitors all day The galleries were filled to capacity and all available room on the floor was occupied by persons from all parts of the state interested in the outcome of the roads legislation. All members of the house, except one, were present. Upon motion, a call was issued in the morning for all representatives not present at roll call. The same procedure was followed when the house convened for the afternoon session

If the road fight is not ended this afternoon a session probably will be held tonight owing to the fact that tomorrow is the last day for introduction of bills and many of the representatives have more bills to offer

TURN DOWN REQUEST FOR $90,000 BARN AT STATE FAIR

Des Moines Ia March 10—Request for $90 000 for a cattle barn at the state fair grounds in a bill by Senator Coburn was turned down by the senate committee on appropriations The committee voted to recommend the bill for passage with the amendment that the amount for the new barn be cut to $20 000.

The bill carries also an appropriation of $12 500 for the purchase of additional land for the fair grounds. This feature was not changed in the report.

The Gilbert bill to appropriate $65,000 for a new building at the Iowa Soldiers home at Marshalltown will be reported for passage today. It has already passed the house.

The entire appropriation for the state board of railroad commissioners, amounting to $113,900 for the biennial, was acted upon favorably and will be reported for passage. The opinion of the committee was that the askings of the commission were very reasonable. The total for the biennium is an increase of about $18,000 over the previous appropriation.

MARSHALLTOWN—Although no organized boycott on potatoes has been declared here, housewives are making an effort not to use potatoes because they are high. Retail dealers and jobbers all report few sales for potatoes. At a prominent social gathering of a large neighborhood club, held the other night, the menu for diner was conspicuous for its absence of potatoes in any form. Rice croquettes were served instead.

LEMARS—Health officers here are coping with an epidemic of scarlet fever The first case of the malady to develop here recently was diagnosed about two weeks ago. Several houses, including one of the two LeMars hospitals and a boarding house, are today bearing scarlet fever placards. Doctors said that so far no malignant cases of scarlet fever had come to light.

DES MOINES—Peter W Goebel, president of the American Bankers' association and of the Commercial National bank, of Kansas City, here condemned the action of Senators Cummins and Kenyon in the recent Senate filibuster in these words "It was not right. They should have supported the president."

[illegible]ORNEY GENERAL CONDUCTS AX PROBE

Havner, Red Oak, Declines Aid of Detective Wilkerson—Faville, Storm Lake, Assists.

Red Oak, Ia., March 10—The grand jury here yesterday began again an investigation of the eight ax murders at the Moore home in Villisca, Ia., in 1912. Attorney General H. M Havner arrived from Des Moines to conduct the investigation.

J N Wilkerson, a Kansas City detective, who was defendant in a $60,000 libel suit brought by former State Senator F F Jones, who alleged Wilkerson circulated rumors connecting him with the murders, offered his services to the attorney general Mr Havner declined Wilkerson's assistance 'except as a witness before the grand jury"

The attorney general will be aided by Special Prosecutor Faville, of Storm Lake.

Edward Mitchell an attorney from Council Bluffs, who defended Wilkerson successfully in his libel suit, was here in conference with witnesses who will be examined by the grand jury.

Six members of the Moore family and [illegible] in 1912 at the Moore home. Former Senator Jones who was a business rival of Joseph Moore one of the victims, said he would 'never be satisfied until the murderer was found and his (Jones') name cleared of all suspicion."

Following the libel suit brought by Jones mass meetings of citizens were held at which sufficient funds were pledged to bear the expense of a complete further investigation

LITTLE INTEREST IS SHOWN IN LEMARS G. O. P. PRIMARY

LeMars Ia March 10—Interest in the pending municipal election March 26, is at such low ebb that neither candidates nor electors in respectable number can be gotten out In their party primary the republican party polled the following votes George McLain, the only candidate for mayor, whose name was printed on the ballots, received 115 votes and led the ticket. He will probably oppose Mayor Frank Smith, who was renominated at the democratic primary

E. E. Eastman alderman at large and republican candidate for reelection received 84 votes and J F Beattie veteran alderman from the Second ward, received 46 votes, leading their opponents by safe margins. The vote for three other aldermen city treasurer and city assessor was so slight that favorites for those offices probably will not be known until after the republican city convention is held tomorrow night

FOUR LIVES ARE LOST IN BOONE POOR FARM FIRE

Boone Ia March 10 Four people are missing and probably were burned to death in a fire which occurred at the Boone county poor farm and which completely destroyed the institution including the insane department

The missing are

FINA OBERG Pilot Mound Ia

JOHN ALLEN, Angus Ia

PETER PETERSON, Marcy township, Boone, Ia

A MR. BECKER Ogden Ia

The fire originated from a defective flue The farm is located six miles north of Boone and no aid could be secured The officers of the institution had to give their attention to saving the 57 inmates and could not fight the fire.

The survivors were brought to Boone and are being cared for at the city jail hospital, county jail and private homes

The loss is $60,000 insurance $15 000.

HARD COAL FAMINE IS REPORTED AT LEMARS.

LeMars, Ia, March 10—LeMars fuel dealers are entirely out of hard coal and all have declared that it will probably be a number of days before they receive a shipment of anthracite Scarcity of available motive power rather than a car shortage, is blamed by the merchants for the hard coal famine Some dealers explained that being unable to get prompt delivery from the Duluth and Superior coal docks, they had sent to Milwaukee for fuel They told that wholesalers in the latter city had written that the railway companies are finding it impossible to move loaded cars even from the loading docks into the general railway yards. Although the dearth of hard coal in the city has caused considerable hardships, it has occasioned no actual suffering, there being a fairly good supply of soft coal on the market

VETERANS OPPOSE MOVING OLD SOLDIERS' MONUMENT

Des Moines, Ia., March 10—Attorney General Havner has given the G A R. an opinion that there is nothing in the capitol extension act giving the state executive council power to move the soldiers' monument.

It is the opinion of the department of justice that the monument must remain where it is, south of the state house, unless the legislature specifically authorizes the removal.

R. L. Chase is acting for the civil war veterans in the monument controversy. The old soldiers are determined not to permit the monument to be removed to the corner of Thirteenth street and Capitol avenue as provided in the capitol extension plan, Chase says.

Following up the opinion of the attorney general, a bill has been introduced in the general assembly providing that the monument remain where it is. This measure is desired by the old soldiers to make doubly certain the big shaft shall not be moved to Thirteenth street and Capitol avenue. The measure was introduced by Senator Ball and Representative Crozier.

IOWA CITY—Women of Iowa City have been aroused to take action against the alleged inactivities of the city authorities on the nonenforcement of the city traffic and speed laws and they are keeping the telephones busy calling up their women friends and neighbors and urging them to attend a mass meeting at the commercial club rooms to be held tonight. The meeting will be in the form of a protest against the way in which automobilists are allowed to speed their cars through the city. Enforcement of the ordinances regulating traffic and reckless driving will be urged.

VILLISCA—Two men who attempted to enter the Jones store, where the office of Senator F. F Jones is located, about 4 o'clock in the morning, gave up their effort because, it is believed, they discovered there were watchmen in the building Senator Jones received an anonymous tip that someone was going to try to get some papers in his office safe, and he has since had four men on guard there at night.

LEMARS—A traveling salesman named Burkhardt, while in the Union restaurant, it is said, offended Mrs. Ira Suddath, the wife of the proprietor. She slashed him over the head with a knife. He was arrested.

HAVNER RESENTS LEAGUE'S CHARGES

No Politics in Handling of Liquor Cases in Iowa, Attorney General Asserts.

Des Moines, Ia., March 10—Attorney General Havner emphatically denies the charge made by W C Barber, of the Anti-Saloon league that he is playing politics in handling the state prohibition situation

Havner declares that the test case involving the right of railroads to ship liquor into Iowa, to be delivered to persons for personal use, is being pushed as fast as a case can be handled, and that it will be before the supreme court at the earliest possible date He declares that Barber cannot get a hearing on the cases he started before the September term of the district court and that he cannot catch up with the case already under way by the department of justice

"There is nothing to be gained by the actions Barber has started," said the attorney general

"This department has already secured three district court decisions upholding the contention that liquor cannot be shipped into Iowa for personal use or for sale The case is now being appealed to the supreme court for final action If the supreme court affirms the lower court the decision will be finally binding on the entire state

We already have injunctions against the Adams Express company, the M & St L. and the Rock Island To start more cases would only serve to fill the district court with additional cases pending the ruling of the supreme court

"This multiplicity of cases is needless. The point cannot be finally settled until the supreme court makes a decision one way or the other

"There is a difference of opinion between the railroad attorneys and the department as to the meaning of the law, and and this must be cleared up

"We are doing all in our power and doing everything that the laws of Iowa permit, to stop the liquor traffic into this state There is no politics involved We have made such progress that the liquor men are recognizing that their business in this state must stop All of the brewing companies have waived their rights under the federal court injunction compelling the Rock Island railroad to accept liquor shipments into this state"

FOSTER ROAD BILL IS PASSED BY THE SENATE

Des Moines Ia Mar [illegible] The most important piece of road legislation to live through the committees of either side of the legislature and to pass either house was adopted by the senate yesterday when Senator Foster's bill for the establishment of the patrol system of road maintenance was adopted with one dissenting vote

"I regard this bill as the most constructive piece of legislation that has been passed by the senate this year," said Lieutenant Governor Moore "It will do much toward improving the highways of the state

In the progress of the debate preceding the passage of the bill several champions of the measure declared it the most important road bill not excepting any of the bills now before the house which will be considered in the legislature this year

An amendment which received serious consideration on the floor of the senate was voted down for the safety of the bill on its journey through the house highways committee and the house itself This amendment by Senator Whitmore, provided that the number of patrolmen and their wages should be fixed by the county boards of supervisors, subject to the review of the state highway commission Introduction of the highway commission was feared by the author and friends of the bill and was eliminated

Assurances from the leaders of the Johnston-Pitt road faction in the house have been received that the bill is not objectionable to them and that it will almost certainly pass the house

It provides for road patrolmen to give their entire time to the work on the roads, which includes all such work as shall be best for maintenance of the highways and shall be preventive as well as corrective

HOUSE KILLS BILL TO REPEAL TIPPING LAW.

Des Moines, Ia., March 10 - The house of the Iowa legislature today killed the Caswell bill which would have repealed the antitipping law The law will remain in force and if Attorney General Havener insists on enforcing all the statutes on the books, restaurant and hotel men must post conspicuous signs prohibiting tipping and make their employes stop receiving them.

MISSOURI VALLEY—As Special Agent Wyant, of the Northwestern railroad, was looking over a freight train that had just arrived from Sioux City two men who got off the train caught sight of Wyant and held him up Wyant's gun was taken from him Later when Wyant returned with a new gun the two men had disappeared

MOVILLE Miss Tillie Bush, daughter of Mr and Mrs Chris Bush, of Moville, and Edward Meach, also of Moville, were married here Tuesday at the home of the bride's parents. It was announced that on the same day and the same hour 34 years before the bride's parents were married

CALLS STONE TRAITOR FOR REVEALING PLANS

Newspaper Cites Constitution and Reviews Speech Against Armed Neutrality.

Washington, D. C., March 10—The Washington Times yesterday ran a halftone of Senator Stone in the body of an editorial headed, "An Editorial That Needs No Reading." Just above Stone's picture was the following:

"Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them or in adhering to their enemies or in giving them aid and comfort.—Article 3, section 3, Constitution of the United States."

"Expert officials of the navy department have devised a scheme or program for placing on board merchant ships when they go out from our ports, and as part of their equipment, two or more small boats, submarine chasers, having unusual speed capacity. The plan is to have these boats, which shall be power boats, lowered to the surface on reaching a zone of danger. They are then to hover about the merchant ships, scout for hostile craft and attack when seen.—Senator Stone in his speech in the Senate on Saturday."

Senator Stone, in explaining later his reason for betraying a navy secret confided to him said that "Germany would find it out sooner or later."

GERMANS BUILD MEXICO WIRELESS

Washington Sees New Menace in Southern Radio Plant That Communicates With Berlin.

Washington, D. C, March 10—Information has reached the government from a semi-official source that through the perfection of a powerful wireless telegraph plant in Mexico City, direct communication between the Mexican capital and Germany has been established

No Check on Berlin.

Officials realize that if confirmed, this news is of great importance and an investigation has been ordered. Through connection by Mexico City with the land telegraphs leading into the United States Germany would be able to secure complete exemption from censorship now imposed by the American government at the wireless stations at Sayville and Tuckerton and by the British and French governments in their control of the Atlantic cables.

Far reaching possibilities thus would be opened for the violation of American neutrality or even the menacing of the national safety in the critical situation existing Sea raiders and submarines might be directed and full information concerning the departure of ships from American ports furnished. German agents in this country might keep in close touch with Berlin and in case of war even more serious results might follow

From other semi-official sources information has reached Washington that secret meetings are being held by Germans in Vera Cruz and in Monterey

ALL INDUSTRY IN BELGIUM STOPS

New German Rule Prohibits New Factories and Operation of Those Employing More Than 12 Men.

Amsterdam March 10—The German authorities, according to the Telegraaf, have virtually stopped all industry in Belgium

The prohibition includes all of the factories employing more than 12 workmen or using engines of more than five horse power or consuming more than five tons of coal or other fuel monthly

Belgians are also forbidden to build and finish factories after March 1, without permission, the newspaper states

Pope Stops Deportations.

Rome (via Paris), March 10—The Corriere d'Italia's Zurich correspondent says he learns from Berlin that the German government has suspended the deportation of Belgians, as a result of intervention by the holy see. Of 60,000 persons deported, says the correspondent 13,000 are reported as already having been sent back to their homes

OLDEST MISSIONARY DIES.

Osaka, Japan, (by mail).—Miss A. M. Colby, one of the oldest and best known American missionaries in Japan, is dead here after a service extending through 38 years. For many years she was the principal of the Baika Girls' school of Osaka, which she herself founded. Miss Colby represented the American board of commissioners for foreign missions and came to Japan in 1879. She was born in New England 71 years ago, and was the oldest missionary worker in Osaka. Several hundred Japanese women in this and other cities have been graduated from her school. Miss Colby was an excellent musician. She carried on musical studies at Boston, Germany and Belgium, before coming out to Japan as a church worker.

RAIDER SEEN AGAIN.

New York, March 9.—The presence of a vessel suspected as a German raider in the sea lane traveled by ships running between New York and Mediterranean ports was reported by Capt. D. M. Nicoll, of the American steamship Suruga, which arrived here today from Havre and the Azores.

Another American vessel, besides the Suruga, passed safely through the German submarine zone and arrived here today—the Virginian, which left Marseilles on February 21. Both ships sailed in ballast

Sick headache, biliousness, dizziness, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath—always trace them to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months. Adv.

LABOR LEADERS PLAN DEFENSE CONFERENCE

Representatives of 3,000,000 Workers to Hear Preparedness Plan of Gompers.

Washington, D. C., March 10—The executive council of the American Federation of Labor at a special meeting today discussed in a preliminary way plans to be considered here next Monday at a general labor conference to determine what part its 3,000 000 members should take in national preparedness. Several hundred representatives of all unions affiliated with the federation and the four railroad brotherhoods, who have an unofficial working agreement with the federation, are expected to be present next Monday

Nothing has been made public as to what plans would be proposed, but it was thought Samuel Gompers president of the federation would have one to suggest. His membership on the advisory committee of the council of national defense has brought him in close touch with the preparedness needs of the country

YARROWDALE MEN FREED

Berne, Switzerland, March 10—There are 59 of the men from the Yarrowdale in the party which has left Berlin for Switzerland.

London, March 10—A dispatch from Berlin says that the Americans and other neutrals who were on board the captured British steamer Yarrowdale left Germany Wednesday

The Spanish, American and Brazilian Yarrowdale prisoners were sent from the prisoner's camp at Brandenburg to Switzerland by way of Linden on Wednesday afternoon, according to a Berlin dispatch to Reuter's by way of Amsterdam Members of other neutral crews were sent home through various frontier towns. The dispatch says that the prisoners were released on the expiration of the quarantine imposed by the discovery of a case of spotted fever

Washington, D C, March 9 — The following telegram was received at the state department today from Ambassador Willard, at Madrid, under date of March 7

"According to a report received from the Spanish ambassador at Berlin, the steamer Yarrowdale, prisoners at Brandenburg was visited by the Spanish ambassy doctor on March 1, who found that the conditions were as the German authorities had reported He gave his approval of the quarantine

"The typhus case appeared on the 20th of February and unless new cases of the disease appear the quarantine will be ended March 7 The doctor stated that the men complained of the diet and were pleased to learn that they were soon to be released They said they had no other complaint Only five of the 57 Americans were in the hospital with slight colds and five men of other nationalities are under observation by doctors"

BOY WHO AVENGED HIS FATHER RELEASED

Joe Vinardi, 11, Cleared When He Used Shotgun on His Sister's Suitor.

Croweburg, Kan March 9—Eleven-year-old Joe Vinardi went back to school here today freed by law for having avenged in blood the killing of his father. A coroner's jury late yesterday returned a verdict that freed him from all blame in connection with the death here last Monday night of Mike Gilio, suitor for the hand of his sister and enemy of Giancento Vinard, the boy's father

A feud sprang up between the two men, because of Gilio's attentions to Vinardi's daughter They met Monday night, one with a shot gun and the other with a revolver and both next day were found dead It was believed at first they had killed each other

But the inquest revealed that another had stepped into the tragedy It was the 11-year-old boy

When Vinardi, the elder, lay mortally wounded, according to the story told yesterday, he instructed the boy to obtain vengeance

The boy took his father's shotgun in hand, and found Gilio Gilio had a shotgun also. He pointed it at the boy and laughed Joe Vinardi shot

"Self defense," the coroner's jury ruled for the boy Today he trudged back to school.

PRESIDENT WORRIED BY STRIKE THREATS

If Special Session Is Called, Railroad Legislation Will Be Sought by Wilson.

Washington, D C, March 10—With cloture adopted by the Senate, opinion is divided whether President Wilson will call an early extra session or will go ahead and order arming of ships.

Renewed threats of a railroad strike if the supreme court of the United States knocks out the eight hour law, are viewed with apprehension at the White House. The president wants railroad strike legislation and if he calls an extra session this will be the potent reason.

The de facto Mexican government proposes to sell to Dallas dealers 120,000,000 pounds of junk scrap iron and steel from railways, mills factories, etc

Washington, D. C., March 9.—President Wilson today ordered that a policy of armed neutrality be put into effect immediately by the arming of American merchant vessels, and called an extra session of congress to meet Monday, April 16, in order to have its support and counsel "in all matters collateral to the defense of our merchant marine."

On the mature advice of the government's highest legal authorities, the president decided that failure of his armed neutrality bill at the last session of congress left him with sufficient authority under existing statute to issue naval guns to merchantmen. He is expected, however, to ask that all doubt on the point be removed by passage of a specific authorization as soon as congress meets.

The president decided to arm ships after getting formal opinions from Attorney General Gregory and Secretary Lansing that he had such authority in spite of old statutes which some believed forbade it.

Mr Wilson has the backing of the entire cabinet in taking the step Guns for arming merchantmen have been assembled at navy yards along the Atlantic coast and everything is ready to carry out the policy announced by the president.

The following statement was issued:

"Secretary Tumulty stated in connection with the president's call for an extra session of congress that the president is convinced that he has the power to arm American merchant ships and is free to exercise it at once But so much necessary legislation is pressing for consideration that he is convinced that it is for the best interests of the country to have an early session of the Sixty-fifth congress, whose support he will also need in all matters collateral to the defense of our merchant marine."

Germans Rush to Mexico.

Chicago, March 9.—An unprecedented number of passports to Mexico have been issued recently by the Mexican consul here, it was learned at the consulate today. In the last seven days, 110 passports were issued and of these it was said half were to Germans.

Move Against Turks.

Petrograd (via London), March 9.—Russian activities in Turkish Armenia, northwest of Erzingan, are reported in today's war office statement, recounting a successful reconnoitering operation. A Russian advance is also in progress toward the Mesopotamian border from Sakkiz (in Persia, about 150 miles northwest of Hamadan and about 25 miles from the Mesopotamian frontier).

Norfolk, Va., March 9.—When United States Marshal Saunders took possession of the liner Appam after the break with Germany he found installed there a secret wireless apparatus by which all wireless messages sent in this section of the country were read.

A fine wire was found strung beneath the pipe leading to the whistle on the smokestack of the Appam and extending above it as do the regular antenna of wireless plants. The wire led to the interior of the vessel where dynamos were kept running to make the current for lighting the ship.

Investigation, it is said, led to the discovery that the wire finally ran to the room occupied by Lieut. Hans Berg, where the messages were recorded by flashes from an electric light bulb.

Later investigation indicated that the dynamo in the boiler room had been used to take the place of that in the wireless room, which was put out of commission, when the United States court took charge. Messages could be sent and also received.

Washington, D. C., March 9.—The navy department will issue an appeal to the American newspapers to refrain from publishing any information whatever of the nature of armament of ships, and already has appealed to the cable companies to suppress all information of ships crossing the Atlantic in either direction.

The names of the ships which will be armed will not be made public by the government, and are not expected to be published in the newspapers.

Washington, D. C., March 9.—The president signed the proclamation for the extra session while lying in bed with a cold. He also dictated the statement given out at the White House. Orders for carrying out the president's decision to arm ships were immediately sent to the navy department.

London, March 9.—On being asked by a representative of the Budapest newspapers whether war between the United States and Germany was expected the German foreign secretary, Dr. Alfred Zimmermann, as quoted in an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Copenhagen, replied:

"I do not know. It depends on President Wilson. Since the severence of diplomatic relations we have been without official information from America, but I can say this, 'We will prosecute the submarine war with all means at our disposal.'"

Dr. Zimmermann said he believed there would be no change in Germany's relations with the neutral nations of Europe during the war.

CHARGING OUTRAGES, RUSS PLAN REPRISALS

Poisoning Wells, Killing Wounded, and Sinking Hospital Ships Among Illegal Acts Charged.

Petrograd, (via London), March 10—The Russian foreign office has transmitted to Germany, Austria, Bulgaria and Turkey a lengthy protest against alleged violations of usages of warfare, attaching citations of numerous specified instances and asserting the right to retaliate in kind. The violations enumerated were compiled by a special committee. Each citation, it is stated, was amply verified.

The abuses charged include the use of explosive bullets, gas, burning liquor and poisoned missiles, the poisoning of wells, misuse of parliamentary, (flag of truce and Red Cross flags,) killing of the wounded, throwing of bombs upon sanitary trains and the sinking of the hospital ship Portugal.

FREIGHT HANDLERS STRIKE.

New York, March 9.—Five hundred New York Central railroad freight handlers went on strike here and 800 more declared their intention of joining the walkout unless a wage increase of 3 cents an hour is granted immediately.

Officials of the New York Central admitted that a strike of 1,200 to 1,300 men would precipitate a serious freight congestion in this city.

A department of the New Jersey agricultural experiment station has recently succeeded in producing purple carnations.

PACIFIST POSTCARD BARRED FROM MAILS

Name of American University Bulletin Used in Effort to Send Out Improper Literature.

Washington, March 10—A pacifist post card headed "American University Bulletin," mailed in large numbers in New York, has been barred from the mails by the postoffice department under the sections of the criminal code prohibiting anything tending to incite arson, murder, anarchy or assassination and anything bearing an inscription detrimental to the character of any one. American University officials here explained the card was not issued by the university and they had no knowledge of it.

IDAHO LEGISLATURE TAKES A SWAT AT IOWA SENATORS.

Boise City, Id., March 9.—A protest against the part taken in the filibuster in the Senate against the armed neutrality bill by United States Senators Kenyon and Cummins, of Iowa, was printed today in the Journal of the Idaho legislature, having been introduced last night, under suspension of the rules, when presented by 10 legislators, formerly residents of Iowa.

GERMAN SPY BACK FROM CUBA CAUGHT

Charged With Part in Plot to Blow Up Welland Canal, Details Are Kept Secret.

TAKES JOB AS FARM HAND

Later Taken Into Home of Rich Rancher as Guest, Fritzen Was Aided by German Consul.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 10—Capt. Alfred Fritzen, said to be a German naval officer, was arrested at Hartwood, near here, last night by E. M. Blanford, special agent of the department of justice, and held in the city jail on suspicion of felony. The authorities say he is wanted in connection with the alleged plot to destroy the Welland canal

The arrest was made upon orders from Washington. Federal authorities here say they had no knowledge of other possible activities of Fritzen. His only statement was

"What I know I cannot tell."

Federal agents here have been on the watch for him for six months, they said. They learned that he returned to California three days ago, arriving at San Diego and coming here yesterday.

Several months ago he was here, it was alleged, under the name of "Piper." He worked for a time as a farm hand, although his dress and his bearing were somewhat distinguished.

Taken Into Their Home.

Fritzen said he had been in the United States three years. Recently he said he had been touring Cuba. No papers of incriminating nature was found on Fritzen or in his room Further search is being made to locate his baggage and to establish his connection with other persons here and to learn if he had communicated with those previously named in the east in connection with the alleged Welland canal plot.

Emil Roedel formerly German consular agent here federal authorities said, had aided Fritzen, but whether simply because of is nationality or for other reasons was not stated.

Captain Fritzen talked more freely after a few hours in jail, the place which caused him to express disgust.

"It is absurd, he said, referring to the charge against him. He said he was in New York city at the time of the alleged attempt to execute the Welland canal plot. Although he worked on Mr. Hart's ranch several months, Captain Fritzen said he had plenty of money, "and I can get more at any time. I am not supplied, however, by the German government. My people in Germany are wealthy. As to bail, I can furnish $10,000 or $20,000 or any sum within reason. I have powerful friends.

"I will not fight extradition. I have no fear of trial. I am willing to return to New York. It cannot be worse than the city jail."

Knew He Was Shadowed.

Captain Fritzen said he was an officer in the German navy for 20 years. He was on shore duty for five years before the beginning of the war and was in New York city on a leave of absence when the war was declared. At that time he held the rank of captain on the active list, he said.

"I tried to get back to Germany to fight for the fatherland," he added, "but I could not do it."

He went to Havana a few weeks later, he said, "because the feeling even at that time in New York was strong against Germany. I learned that government officers had been trailing me."

He Worked on Ranch.

He said he returned to the United States, went to New Orleans, then came to Los Angeles, worked for Mr. Hart, then went back east and to Cuba, from there to Vera Cruz in an attempt to reach Mexico City, but, failing, returned here January 17. Later he went to San Diego and to Tia Juana, Lower California, in another attempt to get to Mexico City. Failing to find means of transportation, he returned here. He denied acquaintance with other Germans implicated in the Welland plot, or with German officials, except consuls to whom he reported on his travels.

INDICTED IN NEW YORK.

New York March 10—Alfred Fritzen, arrested at Hartwood, Cal., last night, was indicted by a federal grand jury in this city on April 17, 1916, in an alleged conspiracy hatched in the United States to blow up the Welland canal.

Indictments were returned at the same time against Capt. Franz von Papen, former military attache of the German embassy; Wolf von Igel, his secretary; Capt. Hans Tauchsher, agent in America of the Krupps; Captain Boy-Ed, former German naval attache; Franz Hintelen, a German agent, and Constantine Covani, alias Giovanni Gonzales.

At that time he was employeed by Frank S. Hart, a wealthy music dealer, on one of his ranches and so impressed the family that when he returned yesterday he was taken into the Hart home as guest.

CLASS BARS SENATOR CLAPP.

Tamaqua, Pa., March 9.—An invitation to former United States Senator M. H. Clapp, of Minnesota, to address the men's bible class at Lansford next Sunday was withdrawn today "because of his participation in the Senate filibuster against the armed neutrality bill."

U. S. SHORT OF EGGS.

Washington, D. C., March 9.—Storage holdings of eggs in the United States, March 1 showed a decrease of 57.2 per cent, compared with February 1 holdings. The department of agriculture's monthly report today shows 192,716 dozen in storage. Compared with a year ago holdings show a decrease of about 86.3 per cent.

American cheese in cold storage March 1 was 12,089,756 pounds, a decrease of 35.3 per cent during February and about 29.3 per cent less than a year ago.

NATIONAL BISCUIT HEAD DIES.

New York, March 9.—Adolphus Williamson Greene, president of the National Biscuit company since 1905, died here last night after a long illness. He was 74 years old.

That Knife-Like Pain

Have you a lame back, aching day and night? Do you feel sharp pains after stooping? Are the kidneys sore? Is their action irregular? Do you have headaches, backaches, rheumatic pains,—feel tired, nervous, all worn-out? Use Doan's Kidney Pills—the medicine recommended by so many people in this locality. Read the experience that follows:

An Iowa Case

See If Your Diamond Is Genuine.

Here is a test that can be made when a diamond is quite clean and dry If the diamond is genuine, experts say, place on the surface of a diamond a tiny drop of water. Now take a needle or pin and try to move the drop about. the drop can be rolled intact. On the other hand when the gem is an imitation the water spreads directly it is touched with the needle point.

With the Fingers! Says Corns Lift Out Without Any Pain

Sore corns, hard corns, soft corns or any kind of a corn can shortly be lifted right out with the fingers if you will apply on the corn a few drops of freezone, says a Cincinnati authority.

At little cost one can get a small bottle of freezone at any drug store, which will positively rid one's feet of every corn or callus without pain or soreness or the danger of infection.

This new drug is an ether compound, and dries the moment it is applied and does not inflame or even irritate the surrounding skin. Just think! You can lift off your corns and calluses now without a bit of pain or soreness. If your druggist hasn't freezone he can easily get a small bottle for you from his wholesale drug house.—adv.

Save Your Night Thoughts.

A memorandum book or tablet, which is at hand during the day for the reception of the ideas of literary people and other brilliant folk, is not generally available at the bedside, and many good thoughts are lost by the failure of the author to get out and make a note of it. An electrically-lighted memorandum pad is for this man. One end is supplied with a hood, under which is a tiny electric lamp and the battery to supply the current. Contact is made by pressing a slide at the end of the cylinder, and the hood shields the eyes from the light and throws the rays down upon the paper sheet.

Optical Illusion.

A freshman in a New York university who was asked to write a theme on his first impressions of the city began with this: "The most amazing sight I ever saw was the skyscrapers of New York crossing the Hudson river on a ferryboat." Such optical illusions of relative motion are not uncommon.—E. E. Slosson, in New York Independent.

Consolation.

Little Joe's mother was the proud possessor of a new automobile, which she was learning to run with some difficulty. Watching her efforts to back the car out of the garage one day, Joe consolingly said, "Anyway, mother, you know how to work the self-starter fine, don't you?"

EDUCATE MORE FARMERS

It is coming to be recognized as a most obvious fact that if we as a people are to again put our country on an equitable living basis we must educate more farmers. Not educate more farmer boys for professions, but educate more BOYS for FARMERS.

From the incipiency of the public school up to within the last decade the entire trend of education has been away from the farm and toward the professions. Even the manual training schools have tended to swell the ranks of the mechanical trades at the expense of the farms.

No nation can achieve permanent prosperity without a great and prosperous farming class. When the farm decays the nation deteriorates. Our farms are the very life and heart of our country.

Some, though, may ask how we are to educate more farmers.

Very simple. Make every free school in the land primarily an agricultural school, and a literary school as a secondary matter. Belles letters is not the crowning necessity of existence. Bread and meat are. Educate the youth of the land first toward that which is most vitally necessary to our national life, and when this is accomplished, if there be leisure and means for adding the frills, let them be added.

Nine out of ten high school pupils on emerging from that school enter the ranks of the toilers, in some department or other. If in their education the farm has not only been made attractive to them, but they have been given a thorough and practical knowledge of its workings, then a large per cent of them will as a matter of course choose that as their occupation in life.

When war broke out between the allies and the central powers the world stood amazed at the wonderful perfection of the German military machine. But the cause behind it was as simple as A, B, C. Every German youth had been educated and trained as a soldier FIRST OF ALL——after that for a vocation.

But in time war will cease. The arts of peace will again demand the attention and energies of the world, and among them there is none to compare with the great art of coaxing from Mother Earth her golden harvests.

But, you may ask, if all of the boys are educated to a farmer's life, what of the professions?

There will always be some who, by natural fitness, will gravitate to the professions, enough to keep their ranks recruited. As a matter of fact, these same professions could spare half their present members and not suffer in the least.

Educate farmers! The farms are suffering for them, and the professions and trades are overburdened with them.

One thing we have noted with a degree of pride in our own country. Big business has come right to the front in the crisis. Heads of great manufacturing concerns, railroad corporations, engineering firms, all assured the government that their corporations and their individual services are at the disposal of the government if war comes. There is little noise or loud talk, but everywhere a calm and inflexible purpose is evident. And this spirit is not confined to Big Business alone. Little Business marches right up at the front, labor leaders are pledging the loyalty and assistance of their organizations, farmers are offering both men and foodstuffs, and women are banding together by the hundreds of thousands in the common cause. Political considerations are kicked aside, religious zeal even urges the people on to a greater ferver and patriotism. American people are being solidified as they have never been before since the days of Washington. And they are ready to meet whatever is before them.

Again we want to remind our farmer friends of the imperative necessity for cultivating every available foot of ground this season. One of the first resources to be husbanded in time of war is food for the army and for the civilian population. Without it any nation will be brought to its knees, and that is a condition which is unthinkable for the American people. And not only should the farmers produce to the utmost, every [illegible] in every town should yield their quota for the common good. Every citizen should consider it his duty to do his share, and he should do it. When this spirit animates a nation of a hundred million people it will require something more than words and plots to conquer it.

There is one suggestion we want to make, in a spirit of fairness and justice. We have among us many excellent citizens of foreign birth. We have seen no evidences of disloyalty to our country among them, and we believe them sincere in their purpose to defend the country of their adoption. They are Americans now, and should be treated as such. We should exhibit no enmity toward them because of their foreign blood, for their very presence here indicates that they prefer this country to the one they left.

THE [illegible]

By LOUISE OLIVER

Kathleen had never been able to conquer her fear of the head surgeon.

But in the two years she had known Doctor Breen he had never spoken to her unkindly. Even when occasion might have warranted, for there were occasions, and mistakes due to her fluttering heart and confused brain, he had been patience itself, a fact so noticeable that the rest of the training school first wondered, then commented, and finally gossiped.

One day the head surgeon met her in the hall.

Doctor Breen regarded her a moment in silence, the way her color was coming and going, the way her fingers opened and closed.

"Why are your afraid of me, Miss Starling?" he asked finally. "I'm not such a bear, am I?"

"N—no!" stammered Kathleen, turning away her eyes.

"And I'm not very old. How old do you think I am?"

"I—don't—know."

"Only thirty. That's not old enough to develop any full-sized grouch, now is it?"

"No."

She was uneasy and wanted to get away. The head nurse was likely to discover that she was talking to one of the doctors in the hall and she would be reprimanded.

Doctor Breen understood. "Never mind about Miss Lownes, I'll fix this up with her. I want to ask you something more. If ever I'm sick or hurt, will you nurse me?"

"Yes, Doctor Breen." Kathleen's gray eyes were losing some of their fear.

Then things began to happen very fast. The ambulance bell sounded in the courtyard below and the nurses and orderlies seemed to be everywhere at once.

Doctor Breen had hurried away and Kathleen went back to her patients in K ward wondering what it was all about.

"What is it?" she asked an interne as the elevator passed her floor slowly with a new burden of men on stretchers.

"Explosion in the Blue Diamond mills," came the answer.

In an hour Miss Lownes came. "You are to go to room twenty-five on the men's floor," she said curtly. "One of the doctors went to the scene of the accident and a wall fell. Doctor Breen was hurt."

Doctor Breen hurt! Kathleen groped her way blindly to the stairs. She had promised, and she would go.

He was unconscious and did not know her, however. Kathleen helped with bandages and splints, the doctors and two nurses working silently and quickly. But there was other work to do—terrible work; and they were needed elsewhere. So Kathleen was left alone with her patient for a while.

He slept all the first day. The night brought a fever and the next day delirium. He began to talk.

"Pretty! Just the prettiest thing you ever saw, but she scares like a little gray mouse. She's sweet—sweet!" he went on. "Gray eyes, long lashes and skin like a—like a tearose." He was quiet for a while; then suddenly, "Kathleen, little Kathleen, don't be afraid. I'm only thirty!"

The little nurse started and flamed red. Could he be talking about her? He was getting very restless and excited. "I want her. Get me Kathleen. Kathleen!" he called.

Finally she said quietly, laying a cool hand on his, "Here's Kathleen beside you."

"Kiss me, dear. Kiss me, Kathleen." He caught her two hands and pulled her down. After all, it was only to humor a sick man, and she was too tired to care much what happened. So her lips touched his cheek lightly.

"Miss Starling!"

It was Miss Lownes' voice. Kathleen looked up quickly but fearlessly. There was another woman with the head nurse, a richly dressed woman of middle age, whose resemblance to the man on the bed identified her as his mother.

"Kathleen," called the sick man, "is little to say. You are dismissed. That's all, I believe."

And then something in the manner the means of [illegible] broke loose.

"You are condemning the innocent," Miss Lownes said. "I don't [illegible] are taking advantage of a sick man's whim to get me out of the way because you've never liked me. [illegible] fore I go—" the little head with its crown of chestnut hair went up very high and the gray eyes flashed, "I want to tell you something—Miss Starling and my mother will be [illegible] ton. Neither of them [illegible] ling ever did anything dishonorable. My grandfather [illegible] ton, who built this hospital and endowed it. I wonder what you've done. And my father, Dr. Anson Starling, is the best known American surgeon in the French army now, probably."

Miss Lownes was aghast. Mrs. Breen too astonished to speak. Then a voice spoke quietly from the bed. "I've heard everything, and I don't only divine what's wrong, but I want mother to know that Kathleen is going to marry me. Aren't you, Kathleen?"

"Yes," answered the little nurse, turning toward him happily. There was no fear now. "I'll do anything if you only get well."

Cats Destroy Birds.

Cats occasionally catch a mouse, but not often. They prefer birds. The obnoxious sparrows are too alert for them, and so their accustomed feathered prey is song birds and other species valuable to man because they are insect destroyers. Fledgling young of such birds, in the nest, are destroyed in immense numbers by cats. Painstaking study of the subject has convinced me that the average cat captures at least 50 birds per annum.—Exchange.

San Luis Rey.

San Luis Rey is one of the old ruined missions of southern California—one of the few traces left in the land by that kindly, brave old civilization that flourished there in the days when the middle West was given over to the buffalo and the Indian. The old church still stands, but the placita and the arcades, the attendant village and the tributary fields have vanished with the old life and the old builders before the steady march of the years.

Not an Occasion for Praise.

In doing what we ought we deserve no praise, because it is our duty.—St. Augustine.

Green Shade for the Eyes.

When the eyes are weak a green shade prevents the glare from striking in Clerical workers, as a rule use this protection both for shielding the eyes and keeping the muscles of the face in a relaxed condition. The same precaution should be taken by needlewomen.

Good Description.

Grandmother was teaching Dorothy to read the alphabet. She got along fine until coming to the letter "Y" she said: "Grandma, what's the one that looks like a little man holding his arms up?"

Willie Hadn't Benefited Yet.

Mrs. Blank—"I suppose, Willie, you are glad that spanking has gone out of fashion." Willie—"Huh! It always takes my folks a couple of years to catch up with the styles."—Boston Transcript.

Talent of Success.

The talent of success is nothing more than doing what you can do well; and doing well whatever you do; without a thought of fame.—Longfellow.

The Word Metis.

The word metis, means mixed. It is from the French metis, a derivative of the Latin miscere, to mix. The term was first used in this country by the early French-speaking population of the northwest to designate persons of [illegible] Indian blood. Among the Spanish-speaking population of the Southwest the word mestizo, of the same derivation is used, but it applies more especially to those of half white and half Indian blood.

America's First Musical Composer.

America's first musical composer of [illegible] was William Billings, who was born in Boston. In his youth he was a tanner but love for music led him to become a teacher of singing and a composer of psalm tunes, which eventually found their way into every church choir of New England and became great favorites with the people.

Nature Fake.

The heat of pulpit oratory is often responsible for lapses into unconscious humor. There is a story of the minister who solemnly assured his congregation that "Many pesons have one eye on heaven while with the other they are listening to the gossip of earth."

Humility.

Mental education has for its first and last step humility. But the humility will not be founded on comparison of ourselves with the imperfect standards around us, but on the increase of that internal knowledge which alone can make us aware of our internal wants.—Faraday.

Chrysanthemum in England.

A few people in England were familiar with the chrysanthemum as long ago as 1764, for it was in that year that a certain Philip Miller received one of these plants from Nimpu and proceeded to cultivate it at the botanical gardens at Chelsea, London.

Inside Information.

The Pastor—"So God has sent you two more little brothers, Polly?" Polly (brightly)—"Yes, and he knows where the money's coming from. I heard daddy say so."

The Reason.

A rich rascal writes: "I have five brothers and only four of them say unkind things about me. I never have lent any money to the fifth."—Claude Callan in the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

More Understandable.

Some wise gent has arisen to inform the less erudite that scriptural references to bottles don't really mean bottles, whereby the implication of a "skin full" takes on a clearer significance.—Washington Post.

Sandy's Gentle Hint.

The Passenger—"I wonder you don't use a brush for wetting your labels, Sandy." The Porter—"Weel, the company disna' allow us brushes, ye see, so we just have tae use our tongues. The only trouble is keeping them wet."

The Man Who Forgot

CHAPTER TEN —(Continued)

Mannersley, without making any sort of a reply, turned away and went back into his office with Mitchell. Before the door closed, the congressman's voice was heard

"Crazy talk! He hasn't the money to —"

Smith turned again to Waller. He was uplifted still by the regality of earnestness.

"Money!" he triumphed They have used that against us always But they're through with that - through! I'm not afraid of their money Money I've got money myself now oceans of it Their pestilence can no longer thrive on our poverty I John Smith - have the money to beat them!"

He paused, conscious for the first time that the group in the doorway still hung on his words

CHAPTER ELEVEN

Waller and Smith were walking across the great plaza to the east of the capitol on their way from the House office building toward the agitator's office On their right, as they walked they could see the gold dome of the library of congress topping the russet trees, and on their left stood the portico and steps where the presidents, newly elected and surrounded by the pomp and military display of their country take the oath of their high office Automobiles and pedestrians broke the monotony of the vast expanse of asphalt and occasionally a member whom Smith and Waller knew spoke to them in passing

Smith walked with his strong swinging stride as if the exultation he had felt in Mannersley's offices were still upon him

"You're immense Waller remarked finally What you handed Mannersley in particular and the whisky crowd in general was about the class stuff coming out I ever heard

"It was only the truth Smith said smiling You merely had failed to realize how powerful is the truth about whisky

Waller's impatience and curiosity got the better of him in spite of his apparent languid indifference Back of his drawl was a very lively interest

"About all this money he said Can you tell me about that?"

"Oh" Smith exclaimed apology in his voice Of course I can! I'm very proud of that Not all of it can be published but I want you to know about it

"Where did you get it?"

"You know the people who fight whisky hardest are those who themselves or through their families, have been touched most nearly by its tragedy Tragedies are great or small Sorrow is a relative thing. But, of all the tragedies of all the sorrows the greatest I have ever seen is that of a big, strong man who sees his only son ruined before his eyes, and he unable to help That's the trouble about the man who drinks To him it is nothing He endures the physical suffering, and, under the false ideas the alcohol gives him, he schools himself to a perfect indifference toward criticism. But those who love him, ah, Waller, there is the sublimation of grief The ones who love him--wife, father, mother, sister they are the victims of mortification, vain regret, overwhelming grief. They see the sneers and the pity of the neighbors, realize the ruin that is being done And the men of power who see their sons going down stream, striking the rocks, being battered, their strength knocked out of them, their mentality destroyed- they are the ones who hate and curse whisky. You know that, don't you?"

"Certainly," the newspaper man agreed. He was thinking of things he had seen in the police courts, stories he had heard in houses of death and in the divorce courts.

"I found two such fathers in New York--great men, powers in the world. You know, Waller, you may talk about ambition and success and achievement, but, when all's said and done, when a man looks for happiness, he's got to find it within the four walls of his own home. If he doesn't, he finds it nowhere Those two fathers, robbed of their happiness, despoiled of their sons, have given me the money to finance this march to Washington, this colossal demonstration that must make congress do the right thing."

"How much have they given you?"

"One - million dollars. One million! Think of that" His eyes took on a new splendor

Waller stopped dead still, his eyes bulging

"A million dollars!" he echoed The thing's impossible!"

"I tell you the money's in the bank, $500,000 from each of them — $500,000 for each one's vengeance against the thing that has made all their millions ashes in their mouths. It is not so incredible after all."

Then explain to me what your plan is."

He did it in a few words The railroad presidents were willing to cooperate with him

The railroads," he said, in passing, "don't like drunkenness any more than I do. Drunken men have killed more people and caused more wrecks than all the rotten bridges, defective signals, and mistaken train orders in the world. You know, more than 40 big railroad companies in this country today have it as a rule that whenever an employe is seen taking a drink he is at once discharged Efficiency doesn't come out of the bottle."

The railway expert had made the calculations For a few thousand dollars over $1,000,000 he could bring to Washington a crowd of 37,500 men and women, each state having its delegation and representation. That was what he would do, securing the cooperation of all the prohibition organizations to get the delegations together, to distribute the tickets, and to make the scheme work smoothly

We pay for the transportation of 37,000 he concluded, waving both his arms as he always did when excited, and the power of the cause, the fever of excitement, the righteousness of the thing, will bring as many more They will come from everywhere, from Maine to the Pacific coast, from Chicago to New Orleans. The whole nation will knock on the capitol's doors. The thing, I tell you, is irresistible"

"What day will this be?"

"Thursday the 10th of December"

"Why that day?"

"That will be the regular meeting day of the committee on amendments to the constitution

"What part of all this can I publish?"

"All of it, except the story about the donors of the money. Just say that the $1,000,000 has been given by men interested in the movement. They made that condition"

Waller thought a moment. They had crossed the plaza and were turning down the street to the north of the capitol grounds on the way to Smith's office.

"It's unprecedented, the biggest thing of its kind in history," the newspaper man's sense of the dramatic gave the verdict. "Why, it will be better than an inauguration crowd. The effect of it will be beyond description.

"It will win the fight," Smith said, his confidence unqualified.

He was not dismayed by the immense amount of detail work that it necessitated. Keeping his eyes always on the final result, the intermediate stages did not worry him in the least. He had solved the problem. That was enough.

At the entrance to his office building he paused, waiting for Waller to speak.

"I'll tell you something," Chollewollie drawled, a little reluctant to intrude his advice. "I've a suggestion."

"Tell it to me," Smith said heartily.

"Well," he said, swinging his cane slowly before him like a pendulum to regulate the flow of his words, "if I were running this fight, I wouldn't fool with this committee any longer."

"What would you do?"

"I'd have some member, one of the men on your side, rise on the floor of the House and move to discharge the committee from further consideration of the resolution and to pass the resolution at once"

Smith reflected.

"That would do it, wouldn't it!" he said at last.

"Why, of course. The House would have to vote on that motion. Under the rules it couldn't avoid it. And it would pass the resolution. That would be your victory right there. You don't think there would be any doubt about the outcome with 50,000 or 60,000 people massed outside demanding what was to be done?

"Certainly not."

"I tell you," Waller contributed the fruits of his observation, "there's nothing like a long and well sustained howl from the populace to make your upstage, constructive statesman do what he should do."

"You're right," Smith assented I think I'll take your advice"

Again Waller hesitated before taking his leave. He was gazing out toward the great lawn in front of the Capitol, where the long shadows fell black on the grass

Now that fellow with the beady eyes, up there in the committee room, the fellow who gave you that insolent laugh - -"

Smith waved aside the suggestion he knew was coming

Do you know him?" Chollie wollie asked rather urgently.

No."

And you don't think he has anything on you anything disagreeable?"

Of course not"

"All the same, he said, shaking hands with Smith, "I'm going to look him up I want to see him again. I have an idea I'd like to interview him. I'd like to know why he's here, why he was in Mannersley's rooms, why he wanted to see Mitchell. His eyes command my attention."

Smith laughed.

"You'll be throwing away your time," he advised.

"Oh, no." Waller, now down the steps, laughed back at him "He'll be interesting Some of the most interesting characters I ever encountered were murderers."

CHAPTER TWELVE.

Smith, arriving that evening at his apartment, found awaiting him a letter from Edith Mallon.

He told her afterward

"It is the only real love letter ever written."

It was signed "Edith Mallon, and, without preface or introduction, this is what it said

Fate"

You are Fate if, fashioning in every reddened dawn the flame tipped spear of courage, you take the field.

And, single handed, stand against the enfilade of adverse circumstance

And, wearing all the armor of self faith, desert the camp of yesterday's defeats to rush the ramparts of today's success.

You rich in the lore you learned from lonely nights and hungered days, burst the bonds of sightless years, break down the barriers precedent has built, and fling into the lap of life a Discovery -and men cry Fate'

You, with bleeding fingers and aching heart and indomitable will crush from the bosom of the rock ribbed hills their stores of gold—and men say Fate'

You, pursuing through the years the fading tints of sunset, and hunting for dimmer purples in the cups of violets, hang upon the walls of art a fresh and unsuspected glory—and the cry is Fate'

You, capturing the woman who made a mock of men, take and wear her forever like a rose upon your breast and again the cry is Fate'

There is no Fate—no Atropos to cut the thread of your endeavor—no blind woman's skirts behind which the blackness of failure and defeat may hide. You are a conquerer by inheritance, put here to fight, to besiege, to thunder in the charge—not to sit in idle ease among the flowers already blooming, but to snatch from the high cliffs of impossibility blossoms closer to the gardens that the angels keep.

The thing called Fate is the soul of you—swifter than the flight of wings, stronger than the blows of accident, a radiance in a heaven star hung with promise.

If you will, you can bend the frame of Fortune and hang on the palsied limbs of Destiny a robe more gorgeous than the world has ever seen.

You are your own tomorrow.
There is no Fate.

He read it three times before he put it down and went to the window to look down on the lighted streets.

"The faith of women!" he said, in a reverent whisper; "their wonderful faith!"

CHAPTER THIRTEEN.

Near the foot of Pennsylvania avenue, a few hundred yards from the peace monument, there are small hotels where a man with no baggage and a very little money may secure lodging of a sort. In a back room on the third floor of one of these hostelries a person with beady eyes lolled in a rickety armchair, his stockinged feet resting on the table in front of him. He had unbuttoned his vividly flowered vest, which let the full expanse of his garish red cravat riot down his chest. He had removed his derby hat. His purplish face had assumed a deeper hue than usual, and, as he inhaled and blew out the smoke of a cigaret, the sound of his breath was stertorous. Occasionally a smile, expressive of animal comfort, moved the disfigured features in a peculiar way. On the whole, the person with the beady eyes was enjoying life. He felt at ease.

There had been no warning noise of any kind in the corridor outside when the door opened, disclosing the face and figure of Mr. Charles Waller, who, without ceremony entered the room. He had never appeared quite so languid, quite so slow, or quite so indifferent He seemed bored to the point of extinction. As he stood for a moment, surveying the room and its occupant, he even neglected to swing his cane. Life, it seemed, rested upon him as a burden.

He was followed by a uniformed policeman, who closed the door quietly

The man in the armchair did not speak He merely looked at the intruders There was the picture for fully three minutes- he with the beady eyes motionless and silent Waller still and interrogative and the policeman like a statue The man in the chair inhaled a puff of smoke and watched his visitors. Each waited for speech from the other There was none

Waller was the first to move He stepped forward slowly and, in a manner that had the air of extreme consideration, grasped the ankles of the beady eyed man and removed the feet from the table. The man in the chair submitted to that without sign of either pleasure or displeasure Only, he became more wary, more alert. There was no longer any stertorous sound in his breathing.

The policeman, removing his helmet and keeping it in his left hand sat down on the side of the bed Waller drawing a straight backed chair to the table, took from his pocket a pack of cards and began a game of Canfield solitaire He devoted to it all his interest The policeman, most of the time looked straight ahead of him at the blank wall opposite

The man in the armchair lit a fresh cigaret, and, as he tossed away the match, spun it from his fore finger and thumb so that it made a droning noise through the air Little beads of perspiration began to show on the upper part of his forehead near the roots of his hair Once he rubbed his stockinged feet one against the other

Waller, having "gotten out" five cards, ran the deck together and shuffled it eight times with great care Then he began all over again Neither he nor the policeman looked at the man in the chair The newspaper man's luck at Canfield was decidedly poor. His second attempt got out only four cards He shuffled the pack more slowly the next time, as if he calculated how much money he would have lost if he had been playing for real money

He was in the midst of his fifth game when the beady eyed man reached down slowly, and, pulling his shoes toward him, began to put them on When he had them on and had laced them up, he rose to his feet There were now little beads of perspiration on his nose. Nobody said anything, but the policeman went to the door in a leasurely manner locked it, and dropped the key into his pocket. When he had resumed his place on the side of the bed, the man with the red cravat sank back into the armchair and laughed awkwardly. It was the first sound that had come from anybody's mouth.

Waller, finishing that game, shuffled the cards and began dealing again. The policeman fanned himself slowly with his helmet. It was oppressive in the room. The man they were visiting began to look swiftly from one to the other Fear got hold of his features unmistakably.

When Chollewollie, still absorbed in the cards, was in the midst of his 11th game, the strain became too great.

"Say!" ventured the man in the armchair. "What do you fellows want?"

The policeman made no sign that he had heard.

Waller finished his game and began to shuffle again before he glanced casually toward the man who had spoken, with the suggestion:

"Of course you'll tell us."

"Tell you what?"

The beady eyed man took a brilliantly bordered handkerchief from his hip pocket and mopped his purplish face He did it as if he had wanted to do it for a long time.

India's Hoarded Treasure.

The "hoarded treasure" of India is estimated by the Financial Review at over £400,000,000. Most of this is believed to be hidden in comparatively small sums. It is a financial axiom in London that all the gold and silver which is sent to India annually by the British government is immediately absorbed and passes quickly out of circulation. In India, however, the existence of any really important hidden wealth is declared a myth.

Good Way to Test Diamonds.

Suspected diamonds are frequently tested by placing them between two coins and pressed hard with the fingers. It is said to be impossible to make the smallest impression on a real diamond, but in the case of a paste article, the edge may be crushed. The effect can be discerned by a critical examination with a lens.

Saves Eggs

Royal Baking Powder makes it possible to produce appetizing and wholesome cakes, muffins, cornbread, etc., with fewer eggs than are usually required.

In many recipes the number of eggs may be reduced and excellent results obtained by using an additional quantity of Royal Baking Powder, about a teaspoon, for each egg omitted. The following tested recipe is a practical illustration:

SPONGE CAKE

1 cup sugar
½ cup water
3 eggs
2 teaspoons Royal Baking Powder
1 cup flour
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup cold water
1 teaspoon flavoring

DIRECTIONS.—Boil sugar and water until syrup spins a thread and add to the stiffly beaten whites of eggs, beating until the mixture is cold. Sift together three times the flour, salt and baking powder; beat yolks of eggs until thick; add a little at a time flour mixture and egg yolks alternately to white of egg mixture, stirring after each addition. Add ½ cup cold water and flavoring. Mix lightly and bake in moderate oven one hour.

The old method called for six eggs and no baking powder

Canada Offers 160 Acres Free to Farm Hands

Bonus of Western Canada Land to Men Assisting in Maintaining Needed Grain Production

The demand for farm labor in Canada is great. As an inducement to secure the necessary help at once, Canada will give and allow the time of the farm laborer, who has filed on the land, to apply as residence duties, the same as if he actually had lived on it. Another special concession is the reduction of one year in the time to complete duties. Two years instead of three as heretofore, but only to men working on the farms for at least six months in each. This appeal for farm help is in no way connected with enlistment for military service but solely to increase agricultural output. A wonderful opportunity to secure a farm and draw good wages at the same time. Information as to low railway rates may be had on application

LONG'S ART MUSEUM WILL COST $200,000

St Louis Mo—Breckinridge Long third assistant secretary of state, expects to have completed within a few weeks a private art museum, adjoining his residence here, which bids fair to attain the distinction of being one of the costliest one-room structures in the country

Without including furnishings, tapestries and paintings, and counting only its mural decorations, the museum, which is 70 feet long, 30 feet wide and 24 feet high, is estimated to have cost $200,000.

At the entrance to the loggia is a marble fountain, which was carved by Paul Manship. North of the fountain is the entrance to the museum, the doors of which are fine specimens of Italian wood carving of the Fifteenth century The antique idea is carried out by swinging the doors on old fashioned staples instead of hinges

The master hues of the decorations are gold and scarlet, painted in mosaic like designs. Intertwining the pictures, runs a garland of fruits, and beneath them, all around the room is a frieze of Assyrian bulls. The walls are to be hung with green tapestries shot with threads of gold

The place of honor on the north wall is given to a section of the original tomb, carved in marble in the Fifteenth century by Antonio Piccolomini, duke of Amalfi. The Piccolomini tomb, until recently, was preserved in the church of St Maria del Monte at Naples, and was acquired for the Long museum at a cost of $30,000 Its chief figures are a group of angels carved in relief

Conspicuous among the furnishings are to be a great Umbrian walnut table dating from the Thirteenth century and several carpaccio throne chairs These were purchased at the sale of the furnishings of the Davanzati palace, in Florence held in New York. On the floor will be strewn historic rugs from the same collection

The museum was planned as a home for the collection of paintings owned by Mr. and Mrs. Long which include two Rembrandts a Corot and a Turner Most of these paintings at present are in the St Louis art museum but two of them "Rembrandt's Portrait of His Wife" and "The Setting Sun," considered one of the finest works of George Inness are on exhibition in Cleveland

The other paintings in the collection are "Woman and Dog" and "Fontainebleau Forest" by Diaz "The Calm" by Clays "Moonlight," by the elder Ryder "The Quiet Mourner," "On the Beach" Boomers "Olive Trees at Corfu" Sargent "The Brook" Rousseau "On the Warpath" Wimar, "In the Village, L'Hermitte, "Effet du Matin" Corot "Sheep Pen" Jacque, "Saskia as Minerva" Rembrandt "Daverney Meadows" Cazin's Country Farmer" Little Sister" Corolla "Geese" Millet "Norman Castle" Turner "Girl" Hopkinson Smith "Old Shipbuilder"

In addition Mr Long now has on exhibition at the art museum a collection of antique Chinese snuff bottles, made of jade agate ivory porcelain, gold and glass The will find a home in the permanent collection

WAR ENDS IDLENESS.

London Unemployment, which for the suffrage and the Irish question was formerly one of the most difficult problems the government had to deal with, is shown by an official chart just issued by the government board of trade to have fallen off to the vanishing point In 1909 the unemployed represented between 9 and 10 per cent of the working population In 1909 it was between 8 and 9 per cent These were the years of labor agitation which led to the law for government insurance of the unemployed Up to the time the war began, the unemployed averaged from 4 to 5 per cent of the population from 1909 to 1915.

Since the opening of the war the percentage of unemployed has run steadily down The official chart shows it was down to 2 per cent four months after the war started By June, 1915, it was down to 1 per cent and at the end of 1915 had fallen to one-half of 1 per cent. Now it has fallen almost to zero.

This is having the effect of greatly reducing the government's unemployment insurance, which was one of the main features of Lloyd-George's social and economic legislation The returns for last month show there were 2,027 claims weekly, amounting to £156, or about $1 25 for each claim

This is a reduction of 50 per cent since last year, and a much greater reduction since the war began

Flower Scented Hats.

The old idea of a flower hat is a mass of blossoms thickly scattered over the crown of a straw shape, the sort of headgear brought out between velvet and felt and real summer straws But this year's flower hat is something quite different. The foundation is more often than not satin or a fiber braid resembling both satin and straw and the brim flares sharply up from the straight, evenly set head band Upon the brim, tucked against the hair or sometimes hidden away against the crown is a single flower or a small group of posies, and these furnish the color motif But the color is not all, for the smartest flower hats are scented, too, to imitate their name flower and little sachets are tucked away inside the crown to preserve the delicate perfume.

An American.

An American is one
Who not only shouts "Old Glory!" but feels it;
Who pursues a practical, not a passive democracy;
Who not only likes to thrive with his country, but is ready to die for it;
Who would not barter its tiniest blade of grass for the wealth of a universe;
Who respects its institutions, who does not deride them;
Who has the courage of his convictions, not the acquiescence of his expediency;
Who believes in principle, not the stultification of it;
Who can be generously sympathetic without being patronizing;
Who rocks the cradle with one hand and balances his books with the other;
Who is childlike with you in success, and stanch in adversity;
Who loves one woman and honors all;
Who is mild with the simple, but a rock with the sophisticated;
Who can pat a puppy that bespattered his trousers;
Who is square with himself, and lenient toward ignorance;
Who is fair to labor, and labors fairly;
Who is humble in his achievement, and generous with his praise;
Who can be a stalwart champion as well as an innocent bystander;
Who believes in adequate preparedness, and will cheerfully dig up his share when the bills fall due.
Who observes the intent, not the letter, of the law;
Who can be gallant to a scrumwoman, and indifferent to the haughty;
Who is as fastidious about his moral shirt cuffs as his laundered linen.
Who eats his own embalmed beef, and forwards the better cuts to those who serve his country.
Who tries to be kin to every race and color and creed, because he has no wish to draw distinctions among those who will serve him in the pinch.

U. S. SHIPPING BOARD READY FOR WORK: ITS MEMBERS FACE MANY BIG PROBLEMS

Three members of U. S. shipping board. Standing: William Dent and Theo Brent, photographed in Washington. Insert, John A. Donald.

Facing the task to create a merchant marine that will make the United States independent of the world in moving its exports in international commerce and to provide a naval auxiliary that will enable the warships of the United States, in time of war, to be efficient for service near and far, the shipping board is ready to undertake the solution of one of the most important problems that confront the economic welfare of the nation.

ARGENTINE HAS SILENT PRESIDENT

Hipolito Irigoyen, the New President, Has Never Made a Speech or Given Out an Interview—Has Turned Over His Entire Salary to Charity.

From the Kansas City Star.

Argentina is ruled by the strangest politician in all the Americas. Hipolito Irigoyen the new president of the big South American republic is a man of mystery and silence His has been entirely a career of deeds, for he has never made a speech and never given out an interview.

Since he assumed the presidency last October he has sent no messages to the Argentine congress and has made no statements of policy But he has struck hard and often at corruption in the rich republic

Irigoyen did not make a single pledge during his successful campaign for the presidency He summed just one statement and that to a personal friend: "I will make an exemplary government." He went into office a profound enigma but a popular idol

Believed a Super-Statesman.

He has been a leader of the radical or liberal party for 30 years, but they have been years of unbroken silence. He has always been regarded as a reformer, but he has never avowed such a role. Some observers believe this keen eyed man with the iron gray hair and tightly closed lips is the superstatesman of South America.

When Irigoyen was inaugurated he went into office with the simplest ceremonies on record in Argentina. He wanted to ride to the capitol in a street car, but was prevailed upon by friends to take a taxicab. Outside of taking the oath of office, he spoke no word at the inauguration Nor did he do any smiling or bowing His first act upon becoming president was to turn over his salary of $40,000 a year to charity. Then he provided that the poor of Buenos Aires might be quartered in public buildings.

After that he started a slashing of the public payrolls that brought shudders to the politicians Next he began a policy of compelling the big land owners to contribute more to road building in the rural districts. It is said he will promote the breaking up of the large ranches, so that the poorer classes may become land owners and thus improve their, in many cases, wretched position.

Of Humble Birth.

Irigoyen is 55 years old and a bachelor He is of humble origin, but is said to be very wealthy owning several large estates He is a studious man and for many years held a chair in the University of Buenos Aires By many he is regarded as the foremost economist of South America.

The Argentina president serves six years, so Irigoyen has a long time in which to work out the reforms he is said to be planning. He has the firm support of the chamber of deputies, or lower house, members of which serve four years. The senate, however, is in the hands of his political foes, the conservatives, and the senators serve nine years. Not many in Argentina, however, expect the opposition of the upper house to prove of much avail against the projects of the man of silence.

Money Without Effort Is a Curse.

From Farm and Fireside.

John D. Rockefeller has written an article in which he says:

"The only thing that is of lasting benefit to a man is that which he does for himself. Money that comes to him without effort on his part is seldom a benefit, and often a curse. That is the principal objection to speculation—it is not because more lose than gain, though that is true, but it is because those who gain are likely to receive more injury from their success than they would have received from failure. And so with regard to money or other things that are given by one person to another. It is only in the exceptional case that the receiver is really benefited. But, if we can help people to help themselves, there is a permanent blessing conferred.

"Men who are studying the problem of disease tell us that it is becoming more and more evident that the forces that conquer sickness are within the body itself, and that it is only when these are reduced below the normal that disease can get a foothold. The way to ward off disease, therefore, is to tone up the body generally, and, when disease has secured a foothold, the way to combat it is to help these natural resisting agencies which are in the body. In the same way the failures that a man makes in his life are due almost always to some defect, some weakness of body, mind, character, will or temperament."

There are now in the British isles 3,218,000 women employed outside their own homes.

MRS. WILSON'S PART IN THE SECOND INAUGURATION.

Washington Letter in the Boston Transcript.

For the first time in the nation's history the wife of its chief executive will be by his side when he takes the oath of office at the impressive inaugural ceremonies of March 5. On that Monday morning Mrs. Woodrow Wilson will not only ride with the president from the White House to the capitol, but she will stand only a few feet from him when he takes the oath of office on an improvised stand that will be erected in the eastern corner of the capitol plaza. Thus Mrs. Wilson will establish an even more noteworthy precedent than did Mrs. Taft eight years ago when she caused almost endless comment by riding down Pennsylvania avenue with President Taft and by going as far as the door of the Senate chamber where the ceremonies were held. While Mrs. Taft could not go on to the floor of the Senate and stand beside her husband as he took the oath of office, Mrs. Wilson can and will be near the present president as he replies to the oath which will be administered by the chief justice of the United States.

The Business Man's Interest in the Anomalous Conditions of Modern Warfare.

Since the promulgation of the Declaration of Paris in 1856 governing some of the important landmarks of naval warfare it has been an accepted dogma of international law that a blockade, to become legally effective, must consist of an actual patrol and blockade of the ports of the country blockaded. That is to say, the Declaration of Paris abolished the so-called "paper blockade," under which it had been the practice for a country at war to declare the ports of another blockaded, without actually patrolling the coasts of the latter country.

Where the blockade is legal in form, it is an accepted proposition that no merchant vessel, neutral or otherwise, may attempt to enter the blockaded area, under penalty of confiscation or destruction. Where the blockade was a paper blockade, the penalty of confiscation was imposed wherever the vessel might be found, although it had not yet reached the area declared to be under blockade. It was to prevent this consequence of confiscation, in cases of paper blockade, that the Declaration of Paris was adopted.

From this situation it clearly results, of course, that the action of England in excluding commerce, neutral and otherwise, from German ports, no less a violation of the spirit of the Declaration of Paris than the action of Germany in similarly restricting commerce with England. Both of these restrictions upon international commerce have been given the effects of a blockade, by subjecting to confiscation or destruction vessels which seek to enter or leave the respective countries in violation of the terms of the proclamations prescribing the so-called "barred areas;" but neither of them constitutes an actual blockade of the coasts of the other belligerent within the spirit of the Declaration of Paris.

This is one of the many situations arising out of the modern scheme of warfare, which is justified by both sides as a necessary measure of self-protection, by way of offense or defense. Because of the new instruments of warfare employed, and the new conditions in the international situation, it is doubtless true that at the time of the adoption of the Declaration of Paris the situations now confronting the belligerents were not considered. Nevertheless, the technical violation of the fundamental principle of international law established by that document is violated, and will doubtless give rise to a substantial claim for damages upon the part of this country at the close of the war, both for vessels destroyed and for the resulting interference with American commerce.

Unless belligerents are to be permitted to cripple neutral commerce, the rules of naval warfare must be completely revised. American business is largely concerned in this revision, and should undoubtedly lay plans for securing a proper voice in the convention which, sooner or later must settle the questions at issue.

A Prison Candidate.

From the New York Evening Post.

Being a candidate for parliament while in prison bids fair to become a popular pastime in England. Last week Count Plunkett, father of Joseph Plunkett, one of the leaders of the Irish revolution, who was summarily executed, was elected by a vote of two to one for Roscommon, defeating the official nominee of the Irish party, who was also supported by the unionists. Count Plunkett is now an involuntary guest of the British government in a detention camp at Oxford, as a rebel, and it will be interesting to see if he will be released to take his seat. His election is a visible proof that the revolutionary spirit in Ireland is far from dissipated, and must be a severe blow to John Redmond.

Our Thriftless Nation.

Self-denial is a fundamental virtue, especially for all who have their own way to make in the world, happiness for the great majority of people depends on the wholesome restraint of desires rather than on their gratification, because, when unchecked, those desires are forever stretching out beyond present reach. It seems strange that, especially in our country, people shrink from saying "I can't afford it," when economy means safety and contentment, whereas false pride brings danger and unhappiness. Fear of being thought poor or stingy has brought misery, and often crime, into many a household. The average wages, salaries and incomes are higher in this country than in any other, yet our savings banks do not make a creditable showing. Fourteen countries greatly outrank ours in the proportion of savings accounts to population. In thrift, as indicated by the savings banks, we stand at the bottom of the list of the principal nations.—Judge Harmon in Youth's Companion.

FALLING HAIR MEANS DANDRUFF IS ACTIVE

Save Your Hair! Get a 25 Cent Bottle of Danderine Right Now—Also Stops Itching Scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its luster, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any store, and after the first application your hair will take on that life, luster and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance; an incomparable gloss and softness, but what will please you most will be after just a few weeks' use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp. How He Killed Quack Grass

Spring Plowing and Proper Cultivation Gets Rid of Rank Growth of Weed on Bowman Farm

"He'll go broke. He'll starve to death," neighbors said when, two years ago, Erick Bowman bought his 200 acre farm near Thompson, Winnebago county. That farm each year grew the choicest crop of quack grass in the vicinity. It couldn't be killed, folks said.

Bowman bought the farm. He hasn't gone broke. He hasn't starved. Last year he grew an average of 57 bu. of corn per acre on a 96 acre field, which was formerly green with quack grass Thompson's recipe for getting rid of quack grass calls for spring plowing and proper cultivation.

"The farm was overrun with quack grass when I came," he writes the agricultural extension department at Iowa State college. "But I went after it and won. First, the ground must be well drained, for quack is a wet weather crop. Start to get it when you plow. Spring plowing is best. Fall plowing allows it to start again by spring. Since quack grass roots work to the surface, I plow in the spring and turn the grass under as deep as I can so it will take longer to reach the surface. As soon as plowed, I disc twice. This packs the soil and gets the grass that is near the surface. Then I drag it for the planter and get the corn in the ground as soon as possible I never drag the field after I have planted the corn I wait until the corn is about to come thru the ground, then I cultivate, following the planter marks. This keeps the quack out of sight. Then I drag to smooth the ground About 3 days after dragging I am able to follow the corn rows. Then I start in to plow the corn and keep at it u til the rows are about shaded Since quack grass can't live without air it soon dies. You must put the ground to corn for about three years and keep after the grass each year. Some grass may come up in the hills where it is very bad, but proper cultivation year after year will finally get it."

How to Grow Onions

Crop Will Bring as High Returns as Any Other Staple Vegetable

Because the nigh price of onions will lead many home gardeners this spring to planting this vegetable, Iowa State college gives a few suggestions as to their culture that may be valuable. On the average, onions pay better returns per acre over labor and other cost of production than any staple vegetable, unless it be early tomatoes, say the college men.

Plant Southport Red Globe. If you buy seed, test it by holding in damp cloths or blotters for 48 hours. It should test 80 per cent or better. Do not use untested seed.

Use the best and cleanest ground you can get. The soil should be rich in plant food Old growers say "too much well rotted manure cannot be added." Harrow, pl nk and disc the ground. Sow about 4 to 5 lbs. of seed to the acre if they are to be thinned; if not, 3½ to 4 lbs. is good. Sow ¾ inch deep and 12 inches between rows. Plant as soon as the ground is fit. Wheel hoe as soon as you can see the row, perhaps every fourth row, to stop the fine sand from drifting with the wind and cutting the plants. Keep the wheel hoe and common hoe going all summer.

One of the surest methods for the amateur grower is to plant set (small onions). These are placed in the ground 3 to 4 inches apart and in rows 12 inches apart. At these distances it requires about 7 to 9 bu. to the acre for best results.

Timely Tips for the Week

Clean dead wood out of raspberry and blackberry patch.

A good woven wire fence may save a big loss from pigs and chickens later on.

Do not let the live stock run in the stock fields when the land is wet. Puddled soil is unproductive soil.

Increase the yield of pastures by drilling clover and grass seed very early in the spring.

Do not plow land in the spring much if any deeper than it was plowed the previous year.

The little pigs should be given exercise in the barn if weather will not permit turning outside.

Mrs. Paul Gast Dies From Injuries

Word was received here Thursday morning of the death of Mrs. Paul Gast at Garner. The family had just moved to Garner a few days previous from their farm in German township and she had been hanging some wall paper and accidentally fell Wednesday afternoon and received such serious injuries as to cause her death early Thursday morning. Both Mr. and Mrs. Gast are well known here and in this vicinity where she has lived since childhood and the large number of friends here extend the hand of sincere sympathy to the bereaved husband and family.

Another "Old Timer"

1917 is sure after a record as far as blizzards and rail road "tie ups" go at least. Not many of our residents, we do not believe can remember when we had such a severe storm so late in the season as the one which raged here all day, Friday, March 16th and extended well into Saturday, tieing up all railroad service, leaving us without a train from Thursday evening until early Sunday morning when a passenger from the north followed up the snow plow and returned from Iowa Falls, Sunday morning about 8:30. It looks now like the weather man has been converted as we have had real nice weather with a touch of spring since Sunday. Here is hoping that spring has arrived at last.

Gibbs' Sale Postponed

O. E. Gibbs had another stroke of ill luck last Friday, when he was intending to hold his sale of pure bred stock at Forest City. Friday happened to be the beginning of the two-day blizzard and as the trains were not running of course it would be impossible to draw a satisfactory crowd. Charles is used to receiving severe jolts by the weather man, however, and came up smiling, and has postponed his sale until next week, Thursday, March 29th. Local buyers should try to attend this sale and purchase some of his choice offerings. We need stock of the Sterling Stock Farm quality in this vicinity.

"Ikey" Buys Theater

S. J. Kirkwood was here Wednesday, completing arrangements for the trading of the present restaurant building for the Elite moving picture theater in Des Moines, which is situated on East Locust street a short distance from the Capital building. He will take possession soon. Sam believes that he has acquired a paying business and many Klemme friends sincerely hope that he enjoys a good patronage.

THE STARTING MONTH

March again marks the beginning of another season of farming activities.

There is every reason to hope for an exceptional growing season and bounteous crop returns for every farmer in this community

Our interest in the farmers of this community is more than a selfish interest, though our success does, to a great extent, depend upon the success of our customers who follow agriculture as a profession.

We are ever ready to assume our part in advancing the best business and financial interests of those farmers whom we appreciatively call customers.

We are here to serve YOU.

Australian wool on which has been built up much of that British colony's prosperity started more than 100 years ago. It originated with a certain Captain MacArthur a soldier in the British army. Settling in New South Wales, soon after Governor Phillip arrived there he saw the possibilities for growing fine wool, and by the luckiest accident was able, in 1796, to import five merino ewes and three rams. They were of a flock presented by the king of Spain to the Dutch at the cape and came from the famous Escurial flock. These gradually added to by MacArthur were the beginning of the vast Australian sheep industry of today. The first shipment of Australian wool was 24 pounds. In 1807, now the shipments run into hundreds of millions of pounds.

A clay tablet bearing a map of ancient Babylon which has just been discovered throws according to Dr. Stephen H. Langdon of the University of Pennsylvania museum, "a welcome light upon an obscure law in the great law code of Babylonia. In column XV lines 65 following there is a reference to the custom of blowing a horn at the village gates to notify shepherds that the grazing season was over. These rural villages appear to have been so arranged that the village buglers were able to make the shepherds and farmers hear the sound of the horn in every part of Babylonia. The tablet dates back probably to 1500 B. C.

A child wonder with unusual mental powers has been discovered in the first grade of the Findlay, Ohio, school. He is Roy Fork, age 6, son of a well driller. While bright in all school work, he is a prodigy in mathematics. He knows the calendar by heart and although asked the most severe questions with regard to days and dates never makes a mistake. If you tell him your age he can tell in a second the year you were born, and if you give him the date of your birthday and ask him what day of the week it comes on he replies at once, correctly and without fail.

In Illinois farmers found that once the corn roots were fully established in the soil their attraction for the moisture was so great that very little moisture escaped. The only cultivation they found valuable was to keep down the weeds, which used up the moisture. Three-fourths of the corn roots do not go deep, but establish themselves in the cultivated soil and the less they are disturbed at their meals the better crop results are attained.

An average of 95 tons of soil and loose rock is washed into the ocean every year from every square mile of the United States. This estimate does not include the Great Basin. The immensity of this contribution may be better comprehended when it is realized that the surface of this country covers 3,788,700 square miles.

FACTIONALISM IN HOUSE HAS ENDED

Code Revision and Sifting Committee Problems Peacefully Settled, It Is Said.

Des Moines, Ia., March 17.—In all probability factionalism in the house will not be prominent for the next two weeks of the session.

The fight on the state printer and binder is the only cloud on the horizon at present and the alignment here will not be along exactly the same lines as that on the road bills.

Governor Harding it is understood has instructed the Pitt men to drop any further attempts at steam rolling opposition and to recognize the opposition in the future.

This has already been done in the matter of code revision which gave every promise of developing into a factional fight before the governor got into the game.

The same also promises to be the case in regard to the sifting committee controversy.

The Ellwood-Weaver men had agreed to oppose any attempt to appoint a sifting committee based upon the Pitt factional lines, and upon agreements entered into during the road fight.

No Sifting Committee.

The governor has notified members of the Weaver side of the house that he does not believe an unfair sifting committee should be named, and that the house should get along without a sifting committee.

It may be purely a coincident that since then talk of a sifting committee has been dropped and none will probably be appointed. This will mean an extension of the length of the session probably until April 14 but will insure a consideration of all bills which have been introduced.

Road Scrap Transferred.

The road fight has been transferred into the senate side of the assembly. Pitt forces having failed in an attempt to push through the Johnston bill Senator Chase presented a new bill which is much in the nature of a compromise.

Feeling Out Sentiment.

This bill would probably pass the house but its fate in the senate is doubtful. It does not contemplate any reduction in the powers of the present commission and is regarded as a "feeler" of sentiment in the senate. In the meantime there will probably be no further attempt made to resuscitate the Johnston bill.

The change in tactics is believed to be due to the fact that the governor realized that he had no chance to obtain the enactment of any of his administration program unless the opposition in the house was willing to lend a hand.

House leaders of the Elwood-Weaver faction say that they expect to consider all measures on their merit and have no desire to raise any issue with the governor upon any meritorious measures he may advocate.

STRIEF IS CONFIRMED BY IOWA SENATE

Sioux City Resident Is Made Member of State Board of Control.

Des Moines, Ia., March 17.—The Iowa senate has confirmed the appointments by Governor Harding of J. H. Strief, of Sioux City, to be a member of the state board of control, succeeding W. J. Dixon, whose term expires July 1; William Sheehan of Anamosa, to be a member of the board of control, succeeding J. H. McConlogue, deceased, and George Messenger to fill the newly created office of superintendent of banking.

The confirmations were passed on in executive session, but it is known that some opposition was voiced to all three appointments. There are said to have been 13 votes cast against Messenger, four less than enough to defeat his appointment. Opposition to Sheehan and a dozen votes being cast against each. Strief was smaller, not more than half.

THE COUNTY AGENT BILL WILL BECOME A LAW.

Des Moines, Ia., March 17.—Every county in Iowa will be in a position to obtain a county agent, if the farmers want one under a bill passed by the house and which had already passed the senate.

The bill provides that the county supervisors of any county may appropriate $2,500 annually to aid farm improvement associations, organized in cooperation with the federal government and the state agricultural college.

Any farm improvement association, to be eligible to receive county aid, must have at least 200 members who are farmers or owners of farms, and who have raised at least $500 in cash.

The supervisors are not compelled to make the appropriation, however, unless they so desire, but it is believed that there will be few refusals.

Cedar Rapids, Ia., March 17.—Martin Skinner, aged 4 years, was killed, and his mother, Mrs. Martin Skinner, was seriously injured when they were struck by a street car.

THE FINLEY CROSSING BILL IS PASSED BY THE HOUSE

Des Moines, Ia., March 16.—What may prove to be one of the most important if not the most important bills passed by the Thirty-seventh general assembly was passed by the house 81 to 9, when the Finley grade crossing bill was adopted.

The bill provides that when grade crossings are ordered eliminated by county supervisors and the state railway commission, that the full cost of the work must be paid by the railway company or companies affected.

ALLEGED LOBBYIST IS PLACED IN JAIL

L. W. Stanton, of Davenport, Sent Unsigned Letters to House Members, It Is Charged.

Des Moines, Ia., March 17.—L. W. Stanton of Davenport who says he is lobbying for the Automatic Telephone corporation, was arrested by special agents in the house chamber today for violation of lobbying laws. Stanton is accused of sending unsigned letters through the mails to the members of the house opposing house file 406. The house telephones committee bill putting telephone companies under the state railroad commission and granting them practically perpetual franchises.

Provides for Heavy Penalty.

Stanton was placed in the county jail pending trial. The law, which was introduced by Klinker two years ago, provides a penalty of not to exceed $100 fine or 30 days in jail or both. It prohibits the circulation of any literature on pending legislation among members of the legislature without the signature of the writer or circulator appended thereto.

Members of the house have been receiving letters carrying unsigned attacks upon the telephone bill for several days. Many coming by special delivery. Stanton was arrested today when he brought some of his literature to the state house in person and gave it to a page to distribute.

PASS MEASURE TO HELP IOWA FARMER ASSOCIATIONS

Des Moines, Ia., March 17.—The Pitt-Johnston forces fought hard against it but the Arney bill, giving supervisors a right to set aside $3,500 annually for the aid of farmer improvement associations, passed the house today 70 to 28. It passed the senate yesterday and now goes to the governor.

NEW ROAD BILL IS INTRODUCED IN SENATE

Des Moines, March 17.—A new road bill was introduced in the senate today by Senator Chase of Hamilton. It would remove the highway commission to Des Moines. Two of the three commissioners would be the deans of the engineering departments of Ames and Iowa City. The third an engineer, would be appointed by the governor subject to approval of the senate. He would receive $4,500 annually, the other two members would serve without pay. Otherwise the present road laws with all the highway commissioners present power would stand.

The bill will be supported, it is believed by the Pitt-Johnston forces. Removal of the commission to Des Moines will be opposed by the faction that has supported the commission all the way through the session. Chase helped to draw the Pitt-Johnston bill.

CHEROKEE—Only one ticket is in the field for the municipal election that nominated at the caucuses. Senator Guy M. Gillette, who was nominated by petition for mayor, has withdrawn. The candidates are: For mayor, A. R. Molyneaux; councilmen at large, R. H. Kuhrts and E. Banister; First ward councilman, M. J. Gilleast; Second ward, T. Campbell; Third ward, J. W. Richardson; assessor, A. Lawrey, jr.; treasurer, George Logan; clerk, for his place, H. E. Bennett, L. A. Wescott and Robert Gracey.

ONAWA—The subdistrict declamatory contest will be held at Onawa Friday, with 12 schools participating. The schools in the oratorical class are: Correctionville and Onawa. In the dramatic class are: Ida Grove, LeMars, Mapleton, Danbury and Mondamin. The humorous class is made up of Sloan, Whiting, Castana, Charter Oak and Battle Creek. The winners in each class will go to the district contest at Cherokee on March 30.

CEDAR RAPIDS—One-man cars soon are to be put into operation here according to officials of the street car company, who have arranged to ship the large pay-as-you-enter type of car for use on the Trieity railway system. It is claimed the local service will be greatly benefited by the change as more cars are promised on all lines. None of the men now employed will be laid off, it is claimed.

CHEROKEE—A big demonstration is being planned as a welcome to Company M, which is expected to arrive from Fort Des Moines next week. The Commercial club and the ladies of the W. R. C. are working together and the plans include a big public demonstration, a banquet and a military ball.

CEDAR RAPIDS—The annual school election held here cost the taxpayers at the rate of 50 cents a vote for each ballot cast. Despite the fact that tax propositions amounting to over $770,000 were up for consideration only about 2,000 votes went to the polls, 600 of whom were women.

ONAWA—At the school election S. A. Howard and A. H. Hoffman were re-elected to the board.

HEAVIEST SENTENCE GIVEN FLAG SPOILERS

Pastor and Associates Who Burned Stars and Stripes Must Go to Jail.

New York, March 15.—The maximum sentence of 30 days in jail and a fine of $100 was given today to Bouck White, pastor of the Church of the Social Revolution, who was convicted of desecrating the American flag by burning it in a "melting pot" in the yard of the edifice. August S. Henkle and Edward Ames, convicted with him, were sent to jail, each for 30 days.

The jury had recommended clemency for White.

The Mennonites of western Canada being forbidden by their faith, have sent no volunteers, but are aiding the allies with money.

RECOVERS CITIZENSHIP.

Berne (via Paris), March 15.—The American minister, Pleasant A. Stovall, has received instructions from the American secretary of state to issue an emergency passport to Mrs. Marguerite Mathilde Sliddell Derlanger, daughter of John Sliddell, of civil war fame. Mrs. Derlanger left the United States in 1861 at the age of 19, and lost her citizenship through her marriage and continued absence from America, but was restored to citizenship, according to Mr. Stovall's information, by special act of congress. Mrs. Derlanger is now living at Lausanne.

MESSENGER'S NAME GOES TO SENATE?

Upper House Will Act on Governor Harding's Appointments in Secret Session.

Des Moines, Ia., March 16.—Governor Harding this afternoon sent three appointments to the Iowa senate for confirmation. While no announcement was made as to the names of the appointees and that they will be acted upon in secret session, it is understood they are George Messenger, of Linden, for superintendent of the state banking department, and former Senator Sheean, of Anamosa, former member of the state board of control, to succeed W. J. Dixon, of the state board of control.

Farm Agent Bill Passes.

The Iowa senate today passed the Arney bill authorizing the employment of county farm agent, 27 to 17. The Finley bill, fixing 48 pounds as a standard sack of flour, also passed the senate, 27 to 17.

IOWA THRESHERMEN ARE AGAINST BAD SURFACED ROADS

Des Moines, Ia., March 16.—Iowa threshermen in convention today passed resolutions against the hard surfaced highways, condemning the state highway commission and declaring for well graded, well drained and dragged dirt roads. Henry Parsons, of Rockwell City, who fathered the resolution took a crack at the commercial organizations, which he said, are trying to dictate to the farmers what kind of roads they should have.

TELEPHONE DELEGATES AT DES MOINES ARE INJURED

Des Moines, Ia., March 16.—Four visiting telephone men here at the state convention were injured today when they were lining up on bleacher seats to have their pictures taken the stand collapsed. The injured were: H. C. Larabee, Belle Plaine, foot broken; W. H. Fowler, Pella, toes smashed; A. J. Cole, Omaha, right leg and ankle injured; J. E. T. Johnson, Gowrie, back injured.

NEW IOWA POSTMASTERS.

Washington, D. C., March 16.—The president today nominated the following Iowa postmasters: William F. Bales, Colo, and Carrie A. Jones, Cantril.

MANSON—State Senator Holdoegel of the Webster-Calhoun district got a severe jolt from the United Taxpayers' League of Calhoun county this week when they handed him a set of resolutions they had unanimously adopted censuring him for his opposition to the Johnston road bill and charging him with perfect vacillation in regard to the bill at the time it was being considered.

DENISON—At the school election here Monday Albert Heisley and N. L. Hunt were reelected for terms of three and four years respectively. At the school meeting $6,000 was voted for the school house fund to pay interest on bonds and repairs. There is talk of the school district buying the normal school property for a junior college and agricultural demonstration station.

ONAWA—The West Fork river, a branch of the Little Sioux river is out of its banks about six miles northeast of Onawa and the entire country in that neighborhood is under water. The lateral ditches know nas the Hackett and Lacey ditches, have so far kept the water north of the main roads out of Onawa east but they are in a bad condition and may go out of these banks any time.

DENISON—Rev. J. C. Tourtelott, late pastor of the Presbyterian church of this city has accepted a call from a circuit of churches of the denomination with parsonage at Walker, Ia. The call opens up a field for Sunday school and evangelistic work for which Rev. Mr. Tourtelott is well qualified.

MARSHALLTOWN—Thaddeus Binford, aged 77, dean of the local bar and in continuous practice as an attorney in this city since 1861 is dead. Mr. Binford had been prominent in local business affairs for many years. He was one of the organizers of the Fidelity Savings bank.

FORT DODGE—Mayor John Ford, Councilman C. H. Smith and F. W. Collins and H. E. Busy for mayor and A. H. Northrup and W. C. Kohn for councilmen, were nominated at Monday's primaries. The general election is March 26.

MARSHALLTOWN—Miss Joy Raker, the 16-year-old high school senior who last Thursday night was struck by a street car and severely injured, died from the effect of her injuries. The body will be sent to Gilman, the former home of the girls parents for burial.

MAPLETON—Dr. C. S. Colman, John L. Hunter and Dr. H. S. Gillespie were reelected directors, and F. A. Bright reelected treasurer at yesterday's school election.

SIFTING COMMITTEE CONTROL TO MACHINE

Victory Means an "Airtight" Prohibition Law, It Is Said.

Lincoln, Neb., March 14.—The senate machine won in its fight to control the sifting committee.

Three republicans voted with 18 democrats for the slate headed by Mattes, while six democrats voted with the republicans against it. This victory of the machine means an airtight prohibition law.

The senate passed bills prohibiting barbering on Sunday and giving landlords a lean on chattels on tenants for rent.

The house insurgents won against the machine and forced practically their entire slate through for a sifting committee. It will be named during the day.

The house agriculture committee made a report today recommending legislation for state owned newspapers, packing plants, stock yards, elevators, land banks, state hail insurance company and state markets.

AWAIT TARIFF CRASH.

London, March 14.—The party leaders marshalled all their forces in the house of commons today for the discussion of protection versus free trade as brought up by the proposed India cotton goods duty. The government's resolution bringing the matter before the house was in the form of an expression of gratitude to India for its gift of £100,000,000 toward the expenses of the war, with a paragraph giving consent to the increasing by India of the import duty on cotton goods from 3½ to 7½ per cent.

HIGHWAY SQUABBLE SHIFTS TO SENATE

Solons Assert Worst of Road Fight Is Over and Say Progressive Bills Will Pass.

Des Moines, Ia., March 15.—Interest in the road legislation battle has shifted to the senate where it promises a campaign with the contestants perhaps less evenly divided but not less obstinately disagreed than those who fought to a statemate in the house last Saturday night.

The Chase-Frailey-Pitt-Johnston faction is now busily at work drafting the last forces to launch forth with a new set of equipment. The Balkema-Haskel organization is bringing up its guns for a battery at the first line trenches of the senate before charging upon those of the house. New road legislation is plentiful in the minds of both factions and several bills are now in the hands of committees to be reported soon. Others are still in process of incubation.

"We have a new program of our own and it will come out through the senate," said Senator Chase when asked what the next steps are to be. "We are not yet ready to divulge it but it will have to come out soon.

"There are entirely too many men over on this side who are heaving great sighs of relief that they have not been obliged to vote on this bill. There are, however, 15 or 16 who were elected on this one issue. They want their chance to vote on it and they are going to get it. There is much talk of a great victory for the highway commission men on the other side. I tell you it was only a "dog-fall" and there has been no decision. You can't tell a thing about it yet—who had the victory."

Pitt Holds Conference.

Speaker Pitt appeared in the senate chamber to confer with Senator Chase.

"We will be ready to begin again with our plans in the near future, probably this week," he said.

In the face of the optimistic attitude taken by the Chase-Frailey forces the leaders of the opposing faction feel that the worst is over with the battle in the house ended. Lieutenant Governor Moore concurs in their opinion of the probable course from now on.

Foster Bill Will Pass?

Senator Balkema looks for the passage of the Foster bill and a federal aid acceptance measure.

The Foster bill is now in the hands of the house highways committee and is not expected to encounter any serious obstacles in either the committee or the house, as a number of the leading Pitt-Johnston men have declared themselves for it. The Balkema federal aid bill with minor amendments has been returned from Washington with the approval of the federal officials. It was referred to a subcommittee in the senate highways committee for the first time yesterday and will probably be reported out this week.

Senate Bills Coming Out.

Senate committees with road bills before them started activities yesterday also. As a result the Fleck bill, providing the machinery for establishing road calling districts will be reported to the senate today by the senate highway committee with the recommendation that it be passed. The bill makes the establishment of districts optional with the counties. The Smith bill, authorizing the boards of township trustees to transfer money from the general township funds when the township drag fund is exhausted, will also be reported for passage.

Bond Bill Coming Up.

The one bill of significance in the road fight which now holds a place upon the senate calendar will come up as a special order of business at 10 o'clock Thursday morning. It presents the novel feature of having the support of its author, Senator Ball, and that of Senator Balkema.

Senator Ball's bill proposes to stop the practice of boards of county supervisors who now make use of an emergency provision issuing warrants to pay for road work and then issuing bonds to take up the warrants, when they want to go ahead with any progressive road work. Senator Ball would limit the amount of indebtedness which may be so incurred to the anticipation of the revenues for the current year.

Senator Balkema fell in line for the bill with an amendment which was declared acceptable to him by Senator Ball providing that this limit might be taken off by vote of the people of the county. Brief debate on the bill yesterday was interrupted to enable the members of the senate to become more familiar with the measure before it should be allowed to come to vote. It is expected to pass without great opposition.

MOORE SAYS IT IS TIME TO GET BUSY.

Des Moines, March 15.—Lieutenant Governor Moore declares that with the road bill effectively killed in the house, the general assembly should at once attack the unfinished legislation, clear off the calendar and adjourn.

He is opposed to the appointing of a sifting committee. He wants the senate and house to pass on every measure now on file.

"If the house passes the Foster road patrol bill and accepts federal aid for road building, this session will be known as progressive on the road issue," said the lieutenant governor. "We have taken no backward step. With those two measures on the statute books, we will have taken several steps ahead in my opinion."

Helmer Has New Hunch.

Senator Helmer has an entirely new suggestion with regard to code revision which may save the state $50,000.

He proposes that the legislature instruct the supreme court to assign three of the district judges now in office to revise the code—the court to reassign the district judges so that judges who have light dockets can fill the vacancies and no additional help be needed to carry on the work in the district court. The only additional expense of the revision then would be the extra stenographers and clerks the commission of three judges would need.

SCHOOL BILL LOSES.

Des Moines, Ia., March 13.—Representative Rowley's bill to put marking of teachers' examination papers and the issuance of certificates back in the hands of county superintendents instead of the state superintendent, lost today in the house, 68 to 23.

24 MEN ENTOMBED.

Canonsburg, Pa., March 13.—Twenty-four men were entombed by two explosions in the mine of the Sanderson Coal company at Hendersonville, five miles from here early today. Seven men were later taken out alive and efforts are being made to reach the others.

NEW CABINET GAINS POWER CZARINA SAFE

New Foreign Minister Asserts That Crime of Government in Disorganizing Country Brought Universal Anger.

READY NOW TO WIN WAR

Decision of Revolutionists Rid Nation of Ruler and Advisors Is Unalterable, Milukoff Declares.

Petrograd, March 15 (via London, March 17).—"The problems which are going to solve confront the re-establishment in Russia of a power capable of giving the people final victory over the enemy," said Prof. Paul Milukoff, the new foreign minister, one of the most prominent liberal leaders of Russia, in a statement today to the Associated Press.

"The great crime of the late government consisted of throwing the country into complete disorganization and subjecting it to the hardest trials. The state of affairs might even have dangerous effects on the issue of the war. The increase of popular discontent was the cause of the turn which events have taken. The danger of which people was such that the Russian revolution was almost the shortest and most bloodless revolution in history.

Gives Power for Victory.

"The late government was completely isolated, which confirms the fact that no one had confidence in it. The great events of the last few days make possible for the people to gain full confidence. These events will increase popular enthusiasm and multiply our national forces giving them at last power to win the war.

"During a few days the duma attracted to itself the attention of the whole nation and was the center of enormous moral force. To it by material force also at its disposal, knowing that the army had taken its side. Every hour brings new testimony to the continual growth of power of the forces of the new representation.

Czarina Safe in Palace.

"The new government considers indispensable that the abdication of the emperor be confirmed and the regency temporarily entrusted to Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch. Such is our decision. We consider it impossible to alter it."

According to the latest news the emperor is at Pskov (162 miles southwest of Petrograd.) Contrary to certain rumors, his majesty has not been arrested. The empress remains at Tsarskoe Selo, where she is perfectly safety.

GRAND DUKE COMMANDS.

Grand Duke Nicholas, idol of the Russian army and ranked as Russia's master strategist, looms up as the big military figure of the hour in the empire which has just witnessed a successful and almost bloodless revolution and the abdication of its emperor.

The relinquishment of the throne by Nicholas III, automatically deprived him of his rank as commander-in-chief of the Russian army. The heir to the throne is a child, and Grand Duke Michael, named as regent while a soldier of reputation, is not of commanding military experience.

Thus the nation, the Petrograd dispatches indicate, is turning to its most tried and trusted military leader.

Grand Duke Nicholas is reported to have arrived at the capital and it is probability is pointed out that he will take command of the troops.

Of the complete success of the revolutionary movement, in which the help was taken by the duma there seems no doubt. While there have been few advices received as to the attitude of the army at the front, such news as has been received indicates that the military with the exception of reactionaries among the officers, together with all the popular forces of the empire, is backing the new government.

The civil forces of the nation are now operating with the government most heartily in restoring normal conditions in the life of the empire.

The duma, which is the chief factor in shaping the course of the new regime, and the zemstvo council are reported cooperating successfully in straightening out the various tangles which have resulted from the momentuous change in the government control.

The food problem is being attacked and the people themselves seem to be exercising their own authority to suppress any element of the populace that might be inclined to indulge in excesses.

A measure of general political amnesty is reported in course of preparation by the new Russian minister of justice.

Grand Duke Nicholas is said to have indorsed this move as one necessary to save the empire and bring the war to a successful conclusion.

London, March 16.—Deputy Kerensky, the new Russian minister of justice, has decided to frame a measure of general political amnesty, according to a Petrograd Reuter's dispatch dated Thursday. The Grand Duke Nicholas, commander in the Caucasus has telegraphed President Rodzianko, of the duma that, in accord with General Alexieff, chief of staff, he had asked the emperor, in order to save Russia and bring the war to a successful end, to take the only step possible in the present fateful circumstances.

Calm has been quickly restored in Petrograd, although numerous partisans of the old regime have been firing from roofs and garrets upon the troops and inhabitants. By order of the executive committee soldiers have entered the houses where firing is taking place and removed suspected persons.

The garrison of the palace at Tsarskoe Selo has declared itself on the side of the new government and has welcomed its representatives with enthusiasm. Prince Shakovskey, minister of commerce in the late administration has been arrested by order of the executive committee.

London, March 16.—The abdication of Emperor Nicholas and the appointment of Grand Duke Michael as regent has not yet been carried into effect though it had been decided on by the executive power, Andrew Bonar Law, chancellor of the exchequer, announced today in the house of commons.

The Grand banks of Newfoundland supply more fish than any other portion of the sea.

LEADERS ASK WALKOUT BE CALLED OFF

Lane, Secretary Wilson, Willard and Gompers Will Meet Representatives of Both Sides for Conference.

CABINET MEETING CALLED

Council for Defense Joins in Discussion of How to Avoid a Nation-Wide Strike on Eve, Perhaps, of War

Washington, D. C., March 17.—It is not only the right but the duty of the president to keep the highways of commerce open. This means not simply to keep the mails open and to keep mail trains moving but to keep trains moving for the transportation of goods. I have no doubt the president has the power to take control of trains and to see to it they are operated. This was the declaration today of Senator Newlands, chairman of the Senate committee on interstate and foreign commerce.

Washington, D. C., March 17.—The council of national defense including several cabinet members at a meeting here today took up the threatened nation wide railroad strike.

The action decided upon was to have Secretaries Lane and Wilson and Daniel Willard and Samuel Gompers, members of the advisory commission of the council on national defense, confer at once with representatives of both sides. This action was expected by the president and his advisers to avert the strike.

Secretary Baker announced after the cabinet meeting that the council of national defense with the approval of President Wilson had decided upon this step. Arrangements for conferences with the representatives of the two sides will be made at once.

Word was received by the national conference committee of the railroads this afternoon that the president had called a cabinet meeting to get advice on the question of running the railroads on the basis of military necessity.

Consideration was given by administration officials to possible drastic steps which might be taken to force the operation of the railroads in case the strike actually comes. One means suggested was for the government to ask for receiverships if necessary for the roads and undertake their operation. The discussion was entirely tentative, however.

BOTH AWAIT OVERTURES.

New York, March 16.—There were no surface indications this afternoon of any move either by chiefs of the brotherhoods of railway employes or the railroad managers to prevent the strike, which threatens to paralyze the transportation system of the country, scheduled to begin within less than 30 hours.

Both groups were in separate conference here today and each was apparently in readiness to receive overtures from the other but waiting for the other to make the first move.

Expect President to Act.

Both were expecting some action by the administration at Washington and were eager to hear the result of the cabinet meeting which President Wilson called to consider the situation.

A number of railroad today declared freight embargoes and more were expected to follow suit. The national conference committee of managers advised all the roads to declare embargoes on perishable freight.

W. G. Lee, spokesman for the brotherhoods, declared his belief that not more than one out of every 12 employes would refuse to obey the strike order.

After the cabinet had been in session 15 minutes Secretary Wilson said that Secretary Baker would issue a statement shortly on the railroad strike situation.

Hope was expressed that a strike paralyzing the commerce of the country could be averted. Secretary Wilson said that the action decided upon met with his entire approval.

The mediators speaking for President Wilson, will ask the brotherhoods and the railroads to postpone the strike if they cannot avert one on the ground of national emergency.

New York, March 17.—Both sides in the threatened railroad controversy expressed a willingness today to hold further joint conferences although the situation this morning was devoid of any suggestion that a compromise would be reached which would avert a nation wide transportation tie up.

Indications were unofficially that both the railroad managers and the brotherhood chiefs were marking time pending posible action by President Wilson and each group prepared to respond to overtures from the other side.

The sixth floor of the Grand Central terminal was being fitted up by the New York Central this afternoon with cots and other facilities for strike breakers and men who do not go on strike. It was learned that other eastern roads were making similar preparations.

RUSS IN ANOTHER GAIN.

Petrograd, March 16.—Russian troops have dislodged the Turkish forces from their fortified positions on the summit of Narleshkan to the west of Kermanshah, in northwestern Persia, says an official statement, issued today by the Russian war department.

A fine brick road now connects Tampa and St. Petersburg.

NEW REGENT, KNOWN AS PEOPLE'S FRIEND, LIVED LONG IN EXILE

Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch, younger brother of the czar, has lived in exile for a number of years in an isolated villa in southern Russia, because of his marriage to a woman who is not of royal blood. Michael has been for a number of years popular among the progressive Russians, and is well known as a radical and an opponent of any form of absolute government. He voluntarily gave up all his titles and position in the court, because of his desire to live as a plain citizen among his own people.

CZARINA, A GERMANIC PRINCESS, DISTRUSTED BY PEOPLE IN THE WAR

THE CZARINA,
Whose German sympathies made her subjects distrust her.

London, March 17—According to information received here the Russian people have been most distrustful, during recent events, of the personal influence of Empress Alexandria. She was supposed to exercise the greatest influence over Emperor Nicholas. It is stated that her whereabouts is not known, but it is believed she is in seclusion, fearing the population.

The Empress Alexandria, before her marriage to the emperor of Russia, in 1894, was the German Princess Alix of Hesse-Darmstadt.

PLANS VAST CHANGES IN GOVERNMENT

Duma Calls Grand Duke Michael to Throne as Regent Only Temporarily, to Prevent Anarchy.

TO CHANGE CONSTITUTION

Officials Take Offices Under New Rule Only on Condition of Full Political Amnesty.

Petrograd, March 16, (via London, March 17).—The old regime of conservatives has been supplanted by liberals. M. Kerensky, the new minister of justice, is a socialist. He accepted the portfolio on the stipulation that there should be absolute freedom of speech and of the press and full political amnesty. The cabinet has been chosen exclusively from present and past members of the duma. It was named by the executive committee of the duma in conjunction with other deputies and representatives of the working men and the soldiers which held an all night session.

Determined to Oust Czar.

Prof. Paul Milukoff, the new foreign minister informed the Associated Press that the new regime was determined on the elimination of Emperor Nicholas and the regency of Grand Duke Michael.

"We shall not change these demands," he said. "We shall have this or fall. We can accept nothing less."

The new cabinet contains men who led in the struggle against the old government and enjoyed full confidence of the country. Professor Milukoff and M. Shingaroff, the new minister of agriculture, have become especially prominent as champions of the rights of the people. It is due to Professor Milukoff that revelations regarding the political intrigue and corruption of the old reactionary government were brought before the public.

Only Temporary Plan.

While the duma and the working men's committee agreed upon the cabinet, they still remained somewhat at odds regarding the form the new government shall assume. The working men's deputies wished to leave this question undecided until after the holding of a constitutional assembly, which would be charged with revising the present constitution, desiring to call this assembly without delay. The duma group, fearing dangers to the country in the absence of a definite government, suggested abdication of the emperor and the regency of Grand Duke Michael. This would be a temporary arrangement pending the decision of the constitutional assembly.

London, March 17—A British torpedo boat destroyer of an old type hit a mine in the English channel yesterday and was sunk, says an official announcement made this afternoon. All the officers were saved. One man was killed and 28 sailors are missing. It is presumed these men were drowned.

COMMITTEE CLEARS GOVERNOR FERGUSON

Charges Against Texas Executive Declared Not Worthy of Impeachment in House.

Austin, Tex., March 17—Governor Ferguson was exonerated of charges preferred and investigated by the legislative investigating committee in a report submitted to the house by the committee. The house adopted a resolution holding the charges were unworthy of impeachment.

NONCOMMISSIONED OFFICER DISAPPEARS

Secret Service Man at El Paso Believes He Took Valuable Documents.

El Paso, Tex., March 17—A noncommissioned officer of the United States quartermasters' corps, disappeared from here on March 7, and secret service agents are making an investigation of any possible connection he may have had with the German government. Although enlisted under an American name, he was said to have had the appearance of a German, speaking English with a German accent.

His uniform was left behind, but every letter, paper and other document in his possession, was destroyed. He had more than $500 in the bank here. Officers say they believe he fled to Mexico.

STONE WITHDRAWS COLOMBIA TREATY

Strength of Opposition Makes Certain Effort to Frame New Pact With Small Neighbor.

Washington, D. C., March 17—The treaty with Colombia to pay $25,000,000 for the partition of Panama, was withdrawn from the Senate today on motion of Chairman Stone of the foreign relations committee and will not be acted upon at the present special Senate session.

Senator Stone's action was taken to foreshadow further diplomatic negotiations with Colombia for a new treaty which would not be received with such strong objections. An effort to frame a more acceptable treaty is expected before the congress which convenes in special session April 16, has adjourned.

"WE'LL WORK," RAIL MEN WIRE

Santa Fe Engineers Telegraph Their Chief Refusal to Obey Order to Strike.

New York, March 17—Reports received from various parts of the country by the railway managers indicated, they declared, an organized withdrawal by some of the roads' employes from the Brotherhood's agreement to strike.

The managers were informed that the engineers on the Santa Fe system had wired their grand chief they had withdrawn, and would refuse to obey the strike order.

The conductors and engineers on the St. Louis & Southwestern have withdrawn, according to word reaching the managers, and on the Illinois Central, the fireman have announced their intention to withdraw.

GENERALS AID DUMA IN PLEAS TO CZAR

Brussiloff Declares Doing It His "Duty to Emperor and Country."

London, March 17—The duma telegraphed the principal generals at the front to use their influence with Emperor Nicholas in support of the duma's appeal for a popular government, says Reuter's Petrograd correspondent. General Brusiloff, commander in chief of the armies on the southwestern front, replied.

"Your telegram received. I have fulfilled my duty to my emperor and my country."

Gen. Nicholas V. Ruzsky, member of the supreme military council, replied:

"I have carried out your request."

The following have been named as the "staff" of the temporary government.

Michael V. Rodziano, N. V. Nekrasoff, A. I. Konovaloff, L. I. Dmitrukoff, A. F. Kerensky, M. S. Pshkeidze, V. V. Shulgin, S. I. Shidovsky, Paul N. Miliuko, M. A. Makarauloff, V. N. Lvoff, V. A. Rjevsky, Colonel Englehard.

RED CROSS HOSPITAL BURNS.

Tokio, (by mail.)—The Japanese Red Cross hospital at Mukden was destroyed by a fire on January 6, according to a Mukden dispatch. After desperate efforts of the medical staff and nurses the patients were all removed to a place of safety.

RUSS IN ANOTHER GAIN.

Petrograd, March 16.—Russian troops have dislodged the Turkish forces from their fortified positions on the summit of Narleshkan, to the west of Kermanshah, in northwestern Persia, says an official statement issued today by the Russian war department.

PREMATURE BLAST KILLS MEN WHO TOOK BOMBS INTO BOSTON COURTHOUSE

Boston, March 16.—Two persons were killed by an explosion in the Suffolk county court house late today. The explosion occurred in a wash room on the second floor of the building. A big hole was torn in the floor. A police official said it was the explosion of a bomb.

The two dead men were believed, from pieces of their clothing picked up, to have been soldiers. Their bodies were torn to bits. Court Officer Richard Murphy, who was nearby, was struck by flying metal, but was not dangerously injured.

Judge Loring was holding a session of the superior court in a room adjoining that in which the explosion occurred.

The police admitted that their present theory was that there had been a premature explosion of a bomb or bombs in the hands of two men who were carrying them to the court with murderous intent. This theory would place the responsibility on the men who were killed.

President Appeals to Men and Managers to Avoid Strike in Crisis

Washington, D. C., March 17—President Wilson late today sent a personal appeal to the representatives of the two sides in the railroad controversy urging that they do everything possible to cooperate with the mediation committee.

The president's appeal follows:

"I deem it my duty and right to appeal to you in this time of national peril, to open again the questions at issue between the railroads and their operatives with a view to accommodation or settlement.

"With my approval a committee of the council of national defense is about to seek a conference with you with that end in view.

"A general interruption of the railway traffic of the country at this time would entail a danger to the nation against which I have the right to enter my most solemn and earnest protest.

"It is now the duty of every patriotic man to bring matters of this sort to immediate accommodation. The safety of the country against manifest perils affecting its own peace and the peace of the whole world makes a convention absolutely imperative and seems to me to render any other choice or action inconceivable."

Success of Revolt Means Russia United for War; Graft in Food Supply Ends

For those who have been closely watching the affairs in the Rusian empire, the new revolution did not come as a surprise. Since the defeat of the Russian forces in the Mazurian lakes, where the inability of the Russian generals was demonstrated before the entire world at such tremendous cost, a silent and deadly struggle has been going on between the democratic and government forces.

The democratic Russia, led by such men as Prof. Paul Milukoff and Rodicheff, was unwilling to lay aside its arms until a complete victory is won by the allied forces over Germany. But every attempt of the zemstvos and other industrial and agricultural Russian organizations to cooperate with the government was frustrated by the stupid measures of the high bureaucratic officials. On the other hand, the government, controlled by the autocrats, lost its footing. In its eager desire to maintain its power at any price, it has placed a number of autocratic leaders at the head of the government. Industrial undertakings were paralized by the multitudes of big grafters and petty officials.

In order to secure food for the city, the municipality of Moscow had to appropriate 100,000 rubles for the purpose of bribing the railway officials. With immense stores of grain, scores of communities were left without any food because of their failure to bribe the railways. The families of the soldiers sent to the front were left without means, and the inefficient government rendered very little help to them.

Join Constitutionalists.

And in the chaos of this struggle, cabinets were created and deposed, men sprang up over night to premiership, to banish on the next day. Sturmer was deposed as prime minister and Prince Golitzin, the least popular man in the empire, but a thorough Russian, appointed in his place. Rights of the duma were completely ignored and new taxes imposed without the saction of that representative body.

Even men like Purishkevitch, the blackest and most reactionary member of the Russian duma, the man, who supported the government for the last 10 years, broke his connection with the government and joined hands with the constitutionalists.

Conditions in Russia must have been bad indeed if such conservative men as M. Rodzianko, president of the duma, have placed themselves at the head of the revolutionary government. But should the dispatch, from abroad be true, that a new, representative and constitutional government has been established in Russia, then a new page in the world's history has been written. It means new Russia, a united nation with unlimited sources, ready to fight to the last man for the cause of the allies. It means a new, reorganized army, with a great united nation behind it, that is bound to perform wonders on the battle field. It may mean the bringing nearer of ultimate victory over the Teutons.

NEW RUSS CABINET ANNOUNCED BY DUMA

Minister of finance, M. Tereschtenko, deputy from Kiev.

Minister of justice, Deputy Kerenski, of Saratoff.

Minister of communications, N. V. Nekrasoff, vice president of the duma.

Controller of state, M. Godneff, deputy from Kazanu.

Minister of trade commerce, A. I. Konovaloff.

Procurator general of the holy synod, M. Lvoff.

Prince Lvoff, the new premier, is president of the central committee of all Russian zemstvo unions.

COSSACKS FRIENDLY WITH RUSSIAN CROWD

Authorities Fail to See Significance of Cheers Exchanged by People and Soldiers.

London, March 16.—Further details of the events preceding the revolutionary coup in Petrograd are given in a Reuter dispatch from the Russian capital.

The dispatch says that the working class has decided on "peaceful" street demonstrations on Saturday. Early on Saturday morning the police warned the citizens not to leave their houses as it was not safe. In other words, the food demonstrations were to be suppressed with an iron hand. Undeterred, however, by this warning, the people came out in such numbers that the Nevsky prospect and other main thoroughfares were thronged. The crowds were mostly from the middle classes as the roads from the labor district were barred. The people were so good natured and jovial that the authorities believed at first that the day would pass in peace. Nevertheless they took precautions by sending for reinforcements.

Patrol after patrol of Cossacks, mounted and foot soldiers and police lined the Nevsky prospect and the courtyards of the houses will filled with reserves. The crowd still good natured, cheered the troops and Cossacks warmly as the soldiers showed themselves appreciative. There was an unprecedented feeling of comraderie between the populace and the troops. Cossacks doffed their hats repeatedly to the cheerers and some groups of soldiers cheered back at the crowds. It was a sign of the times which the authorities have failed to read.

El Paso, Tex., March 16—Villa decisively defeated Gen. Francisco Murguia's command at the second battle of Rosario Durango, Saturday, according to information received here today by government agents. After leading the de facto troops into an ambush, Villa succeeded in capturing one of the three troop trains and killed and wounded 500 of the Carranza troops, according to this report.

ATTRACTING TRADE TO THE TOWN

The town that would grow and prosper must bear well in mind one important fact——it must put forth a determined and united effort to secure and hold the friendship and patronage of the farming interests of the sorrounding territory.

Occasionally we find a town which, by reason of manufacturing interests and other causes, is partially independent of neighborhood support, but such towns are the exception and not the rule.

The logical way to secure and hold the loyal support of the sorrounding country is by extending a similiar loyalty and by putting into practice a real community of interests.

The town that sees only the money to be gotten out of the farmers is due to wake up some morning and find that the farmer trade has been switched to some other point.

What we must learn is that the trade of any section of country will go, first, to the center that makes the best bid; and second, to the place that puts forth an effort to make conditions pleasant for the traders.

There are many ways in which a town can attract trade, and they are all combined under one general requisite——that we make conditions profitable, pleasant and comfortable for our customers.

Every town of any pretensions should have a place set apart as an assembly room, where customers from out of town can congregate and find shelter from the weather and warmth and comfort in winter. In fact, two such rooms should be provided, one for women and the other for men, and should be fitted with modern conveniences. If the town is not able to maintain two such rooms, by all means give preferepce to the women, as the men can more easily shift for themselves. It is also a good plan to have these rooms supplied with newspapers and other periodicals. In many towns are even installing respectable libraries in their rest rooms.

But right at this point is where the plan fails in some towns. The writer has in mind a [illegible] which has a splendid rest room, fitted up at considerable expense. But instead of being made a sanctuary for visitors who come in from the couutry and really need the conviences it [illegible] it is turned into a meeting and loafing place for all the idle boys and girls of the town, and out of town people are not made to feel that welcome which should be theirs. This objectional feature could be eliminated, however, through an iron clad rule against professional loafers of the town.

Another matter that should claim our attention is to see that every visitor is provided shelter for his team. True, the car has displaced the horse to some extent, but the latter is still largely in evidence in the country distrcts, and the average man would as soon suffer discomforts himself as to neglect his horse. Some town have abandoned the old hitching racks and have erected commodious public sheds and barns capable of sheltering almost any number of animals. And they find that it pays large dividends.

The main consideration is that we should regard every visitor as a guest and provide for his or her comfort while with us. We must make each one feel that he or she is not only welcome, but that their company is desired and appreciated as well as their business.

Such an effort, systematically put forth, and sustained, will create a feeling or cordiality and friendship that will link the entire community together in indissoluble bonds, and a true community of interests will be maintained.

In order that one may not bear more than his prorata share of the expense of such an undertaking, the expenditures of erection and maintenance should be made from the town funds, and the custodians should be appointed and paid by the local authorities.

Such evidences of thoughtfulness and consideration are bringing rich returns to other towns.

Why not to this one?

Congress wanted an extra session, and now they can have it. The president has summoned them to meet on April 16. We who remainat home and do the voting are hoping that they will reverse the prevailing order of things and do something instead of nothing. We are even expecting them to climb to the sublime heights of proving themselves statesmen instead of mere politicians. We are even wagering that at least a majority of them will evince at least a reasonable degree of loyalty to their own country. And for all of which, WHEN WE SEE IT, we will give thanks and send them back again.

The man who owns a vacant lot adjoining the one on which he lives and allows that lot to run to weeds is literally burning up money. If he is so eternally averse to gardening, he could easily keep a hundred or two laying hens thereon, and within a year or two retire with a million. But, then, only a cross eyed man can see the end of his nose.

Fellow dropped into the local bank yesterday, and after looking cerefully in every direction withdrew a valuable package from his pocket and shoved it at the cashier. "Put it in the safety vault, quick, and give me a receipt," he hoarsely cried. The cashier gingerely unwrapped the package, took one look——and fainted. It was a spud.

The secretary of agriculture says there is no food shortage The secretary is a gentleman, but if he will examine the editorial larder he will learn that he is the gol darnediest liar this side of purgatory. We couldn't tell a bigger one ourself.

Deserving Character.

"I saw a rather stout person out riding in your car yesterday afternoon who was a stranger to me. Have you a relative visiting you?"

"No. That was our cook. She has the use of our car two afternoons a week."

"I would consider that a downright imposition."

"You wouldn't after you had tasted one of her pies."

Proved an Alibi.

Dixon—I understand that Miss Overseven brought suit for damages against young Sapleigh for casting reflections upon her.

Hixon—She did—but lost her case.

Dixon—So? What was Sapleigh's defense?

Hixon—His attorney put him on the witness stand and proved to the satisfaction of the jury that he wasn't bright enough to cast reflections.

Her Manly Trait.

Knox—Mrs. Juno strikes me as being entirely too masculine for a woman.

Mrs. Knox—That's right. Why, every time she has an ache or pain she makes as much fuss about it as a man would.

OBLIGING.

Jimmy Hardnut—Yes, Earlie it's always customary in launching a new boat ter break a bottle over de bow, an' as dere ain't no persons of prominence around, I'll be kind enuff ter do de bottle-bustin' fer yer.

Just So.

The silence of a woman is,

Has gotten through with her.

Beginning of the Scrap.

He was a widower and she was a widow. They met—felt sorry for each other in their loneliness—and so they married.

"I'm sorry," he said one morning at the breakfast table, "that you can't cook as well as my first wife did."

"And I am sorry," she rejoined, "that you haven't the business ability my first husband had. He earned sufficient money to enable us to hire a cook."

Just Lazy.

"I thought some years ago that I detected in young Bilfur the earmarks of genius," remarked Mr. Twobble.

"Indeed?"

"But I have lately decided that he is merely one of those chaps who will eventually marry a woman competent to run a boarding house."

Eye to Business.

"So you've been touring South America?"

"Yes."

"How are the revolutions down there?"

"I made a lot of money out of 'em last year."

"Indeed?"

"Yes. I operated a merry-go-round."

There Are Such Cases.

"A forceful character."

"I'm not denying that," answered the motor enthusiast.

"But he doesn't seem able to make a success of anything."

"Yes. Many a man travels all his life 'on high' without getting anywhere."

Not Asking Much.

"I presume you hope fortune will smile on you some day," remarked the cheery individual.

"No," replied the pessimistic man. "I'm so tired of her frowns that I would be satisfied if she simply gave me a noncommittal look."

Up to the Bride.

"If you ever marry," said Wederly to his friend Singleton "will you go abroad on your wedding tour?"

"I certainly will," replied Singleton. "That is, if my bride can afford it."

The injured were: H. C. Larabee, Belle Plaine; W. H. Fowler, Pella; A. J Cole, Omaha; J. E. T. Johnson, Gowrie.

Ora E. Ray, seaman aboard the United States monitor Tallahassee, stationed at Pensacola, Florida, and Miss Mary Miley, Creston, Iowa, were married in Omaha, in the contagious ward of the city emergency hospital The groom, the minister and the witnesses, two convalescent patients, wore antiseptic robes. Miss Miley, critically ill of scarlet fever, was propped up in bed with pillows for the ceremony.

SYLVIA'S BREAKAWAY

By ERNEST A. YOUNG.

Sylvia Gale, up to her twenty-first birthday, had never enjoyed what most girls would call a good time. On that anniversary her Aunt Dorcas went with her to the city, made the rounds of the department stores, bought Sylvia a $7.98 ready-to-wear suit and a $2 48 hat, and ended the day's debauch by going to a moving picture play.

All through the following week Aunt Dorcas was kept in a panic because Sylvia Gale would talk of nothing else but that picture play.

"You can see for yourself Jonas," she told her husband, "that Sylvia has inherited a restless streak from her mother. We never oughter let her go to that play. It's stirred her all up."

The next time that they decided to visit the city they said nothing about it before the girl. She overheard them talking of their intentions and at the same time learned that there were to be no more such excursions for her.

Then she thought of Dr. Edson Brooks who had frightened her half out of her wits almost a year ago by asking her to marry him, when it never occurred to her that she was old enough to marry anybody.

"Doctor Edson must be crazy to think of marrying me," she had thought. But now, as she brooded over Aunt Dorcas' show of distress she recalled the doctor's attentions with quickened heartbeats.

The afternoon before the projected trip to the city Aunt Dorcas remarked to Sylvia:

"I was telling your Uncle Jonas last night we'd better get a new rug for your room."

The girl was looking out of a window and did not reply.

"Then," Dorcas Gale continued, "some new wallpaper, and two or three sort of cheerful pictures would brighten up your room."

The next morning Sylvia drove her aunt and uncle to the railway station, five miles distant.

"Hurry right back, Sylvia," admonished her aunt as they heard the whistle of the incoming train. "There's the chickens to feed and breakfast dishes to wash."

When she was out of sight of the station Sylvia laughed derisively. Then she consulted a pocket railway timetable.

"The 9:34 at Hale's Crossing may be flagged for passengers or express," she read from the folder.

A newspaper clipping in her purse gave the address, 27 Filmore place, where young ladies were wanted to drill for moving picture scenes.

But when Sylvia reached Filmore place she was disappointed to find it a dingy court shut in by cheap tenements.

Her ring at the door of No. 27 was answered by a young man with black, curly hair, black mustache, and a face that looked for all the word like that of a Corsican bandit in the picture play that had haunted Sylvia's memory.

"You come to drill for our great spectacular drama, miss?" said the man. "You will step in and register."

Sylvia's heart sank in sudden dismay. Was this the portal, she asked herself, by which she was to enter upon her career of fame and fortune?

"I—I don't think I will try it at all," she said. "You will have to excuse me. Good-day."

She spent the rest of the day following up advertisements for "Female Help Wanted," and found that the situations were either already filled, or that they were of a sort that she was too inexperienced to undertake. When evening came she slipped with weariness into a moving picture theater in the hope of soothing her tired nerves.

When she came out upon the crowded street she remembered that she had engaged no lodgings for the night. Somehow, in the chattering throng, she could not settle her mind upon anything, for she was used to thinking out her problems in solitude. So she made her way into a quiet side street.

As she did so a touring car glided close to the sidewalk curbing and stopped and the one who was driving it leaned forward and spoke. Without looking at him she knew who it was.

"Sylvia," said Dr. Edson Brooks, "hadn't you better ride with me? I'll take you wherever you say."

The beating of her heart seemed to time itself to the throb of the motor as she got into the car.

"Your aunt and uncle got home early," Doctor Ed told her in his strong, even voice. "They were worrying their heads off about you, so I undertook to fetch you home. By the way, Sylvia," and the tones became less even, "had you forgotten what I asked of you almost a year ago?"

"No, Doctor Ed, I hadn't forgotten," said Sylvia.

"Then mayn't I tell Aunt Dorcas to night that you answered 'yes' to me this time?"

"I think," said Sylvia, "you may tell Aunt Dorcas that."

After Dorcas and Jones Gale were in bed that night, both of them stark awake, Sylvia's aunt said: "I guess, Jonas, we'll put what it was going to cost to fix up Sylvia's room into her wedding things. We want her to have just as good as any of 'em—and then they won't be half as good as she deserves."

WOMAN NOW IN PERFECT HEALTH

What Came From Reading a Pinkham Advertisement.

Paterson, N. J. — "I thank you for the Lydia E. Pinkham remedies as they have made me well and healthy. Sometime ago I felt so run down, had pains in my back and side, was very irregular, tired, nervous, had such bad dreams, did not feel like eating and had short breath. I read your advertisement in the newspapers and decided to try a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It worked from the first bottle, so I took a second and a third, also a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Purifier, and now I am just as well as any other woman. I advise every woman, single or married, who is troubled with any of the aforesaid ailments, to try your wonderful Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier and I am sure they will help her to get rid of her troubles as they did me." — Mrs. ELSIE J. British Bar Excludes Women

The London bar recently voted down a resolution proposing that women be made eligible to the practice of law. At present the legal profession is entirely closed to English women. Holford Knight in proposing the resolution said that the opposition no longer lacked capacity. The war had disproved this assertion, he said. J. H. Menzies, one of the leading lawyers of the kingdom in objecting, said that the women might have proved their ability in trades but that the bar was no common business like any other, but a special and sacred profession, and that admission to it was not to be determined on mere commercial or economic grounds. If such a step as proposed were taken, he said, it would definitely raise the question whether the country were in the hands of the men or women. The vote against the resolution was overwhelming.

The Sign of Indian Prosperity.

The ownership of a motorcar may not always be a safe index of material prosperity. But in the case of John Lightfoot of Arizona, ownership of a car may at least be taken as a proof that the blanket Indian can succeed at dry farming. Mr. Lightfoot is said to possess such a machine, but it is safe to predict that he will not long be the only red man to enjoy this privilege.

"What you know about John Smith—naturally."

Waller started the deal for a new game.

"Look here! I don't know anything about any John Smith!"

Waller, his movements exceedingly languid, laid down the cards, pushed his hat back a trifle on his forehead, and, leaning forward, picked up his cane and struck the beady eyed man a sharp blow across the knees.

"Don't lie!" he said, languor still in his voice.

The man who had been struck jumped to his feet. As he gained the upright posture, the policeman sprang at him and thrust him back into the chair.

Waller laid down the cane and took up the cards.

"Oh, yes, you do," he said.

"I tell you I don't!" The purplish face assumed a mottled look. "And I am't going to stand for this! Coming in here with a cop and assaulting a man in his own room!"

Waller turned slowly toward the policeman.

"Flenner," he said, "show him the picture."

The policeman unbuttoned his coat and took from his breast pocket a photograph, which he held up so that the other could see it. It was a photograph of the beady eyed man.

"Where did you get that?" asked the original of the picture.

Waller answered:

"Out of a little room in a big, white, marble building at the corner of Pennsylvania avenue and fourteenth street, where police headquarters is located — out of the rogues' gallery."

The mottled face became perceptibly more puffy.

Waller's manner changed entirely. His languor and boredom slipped from him as if he had put off an outer garment. He became quick, lithe, sudden, as he slapped the cards down on the table and wheeled full face toward the beady eyed man.

"See here!" he said incisively. "Your name's Simpson, and you did time in California three years ago. Now don't try any funny business with us. Out with it! If you don't want trouble, tell it to me!"

Simpson grew sullen.

"Well, what is it you want to know?" he replied resentfully.

"You know what I want to know," Waller commanded him crisply. "Now tell it to me. What do you know about John Smith?"

"Nothing."

"Don't lie! What is it?"

Simpson, stirring in his chair until it creaked, glowered at Waller.

"Honest to God," he said roughly, "I don't know who you mean. I ain't never known any John Smith."

Waller leaned forward and laughed. There was in his laughter nothing but threat.

"The man you saw in Mannersley's committee rooms today! That's the John Smith I'm talking about. What do you know about him?"

"I've told you once," Simpson's shifty eyes looked at both Waller and the policeman. "Not a thing. That's honest."

Waller began to pump questions at him.

"Why did you come to Washington?"

"Well, I might as well be here as anywhere else."

"You're a mechanical engineer, aren't you?"

"Yes."

"Ever do any work?"

"Whenever I can get it."

"Where do you get your money? Where did you get the money to pay for this room?"

"I got it working in Bluefields, W. Va. That's where I got it!"

"When are you going away from here?"

Simpson defied him:

"Whenever I get good and ready!"

Waller laughed again.

"Oh, no!" he said. "You're going tonight if you don't tell me what you know about Smith. You knew him once. Don't lie! Tell it to me, here and now, or out you go tonight."

11

"Who's going to make me go?"

Waller jerked his finger toward Flenner.

"Suspicious character," said Flenner laconically.

Simpson's half pent rage burst forth.

"Then, by God!" he said hoarsely, "I'll go. I tell you I don't know anything about John Smith or no other Smith. You guys are crazy."

Waller examined the purplish face a long time. Then he rose, straightened his hat on his head, and stood meditative, swinging his cane in front of him slowly. All of a sudden his hand shot out and he rapped Simpson's knees for the second time.

"Tell me!" he thundered.

The voice, more than the blow, frightened Simpson.

"I would—if I knew," he said thickly. "Honest to God! But I don't know. You fly cops must be crazy."

Waller walked to the door and back.

"Flenner," he said at last, "out he goes tonight."

Flenner stepped over to Simpson, and, bending down, tapped him with his fingers on the chest.

"You're not wanted in this town—see? It's somewhere else or a cell. Get that now! If you're here at 6 o'clock in the morning, you'll go down to Occoquan, where they make you do a lot of work for very little food."

A whimper came into Simpson's voice.

"I guess I got to go," he whined.

Waller was already at the door.

"No guess about it!" cautioned Flenner. "You go!"

The policeman produced the key and unlocked the door. As he followed Waller out, he looked back to say:

"Get it right now! Go!"

When they had left the hotel, Flenner said:

"That was a long chance to take, Mr. Waller. If we didn't know you so well, we never could have done it."

The policeman was not entirely in Waller's confidence. He was wondering what it was all about.

"He knows," Waller said stubbornly. "I haven't a nose for news for nothing. I tell you he knows! Why else would he be here now? Why would he be following Albert Mitchell around? He knows. That's what makes the story complete."

"Well, suppose he does know," hazarded Flenner. "What do you think he knows?"

"Oh, a whole lot," Waller replied vaguely. "He knows, and I'll get hold of it yet."

CHAPTER FOURTEEN.

Congress had adjourned, and a week had passed since the publication of Cholliewollie's article describing in detail the plan for the prohibition "on to Washington" movement. Every newspaper in the country was carrying daily stories on it now. From Washington dispatches went out setting forth the tremendous amount of work Smith had to do in order to arrange for an unprecedentedly large demonstration which was only a little less than five weeks off. From other cities and the smaller towns came the stories of how the clergy and the aides of the men's and women's prohibition organizations were working hand-in-glove and with desperate enthusiasm to make the thing a success.

John Smith became the topic of conversation everywhere, in Washington, on railroad trains, and in hotel lobbies throughout the country. Railroad men checked up his calculation that he would use that $1,000,000 so as to bring to Washington approximately 780 people from each state in the union. This was based on the arrangements with the railroads, which meant that they would carry each passenger both ways for the price of one straight fare.

The experts examined the figures and found them correct.

Hotel managers figured on how many guests they could accommodate, and finally were persuaded that they would have to resort to the inauguration expedient of putting cots in the hallways. Boarding house keepers—those of the best class and those who spent the first part of each day in dingy wrappers—began their dreams of unexpected prosperity. The Washington chamber of commerce, through its various committees, went to work to get the matter of handling the crowd down to a system, prepared cards showing hotel and boarding house rates, and began to call for volunteers to help in entertaining and locating strangers who would come into the city without any knowledge of where to seek accommodations.

The police department announced that it would have to have the help of the organized militia of the District of Columbia in policing and patrolling the streets and avenues on the day of the parade.

At first the newspaper correspondents, assembling each evening in the National Press club where they say what they really think—confided to each other their conviction that the plan was impossible, and a few minutes later wrote long, serious dispatches, declaring that it would be the greatest thing of its kind ever done. But even their cynicism was short lived. It became too evident that, back of the movement, was a marvellous personality which produced results. The arrangements were going forward with machinelike precision. The things mapped out in the little suite of offices in the shadow of the capitol were being carried to fulfillment in Los Angeles, Kankakee, Galveston, St. Paul, Seattle, Baltimore—everywhere. It was impossible to believe otherwise than that the greatest army ever assembled for the purpose of championing a reform cause was coming into the national capital.

Leaders and representatives of the whisky interests were practically forgotten despite their success now and then in getting into certain papers articles reflecting on John Smith, questioning his past history, and, in one or two instances, boldly asserting that he had behind him a criminal record. But they could not stop the interest in John Smith. No matter what he had been, he was now the head and shoulders of a brand new thing. No matter what he had done, he was now doing something that had never been attempted in the United States. He had announced that he would throw against the doors of the capitol such a crowd as would persuade every legislator under the dome that the nation wanted and demanded the abolition of the liquor traffic. And, according to all signs and evidence, he was going to succeed.

Of course, through the chorus of comment ran the argument as to whether the demonstration would have the effect he desired.

"Can he get away with it?" was the question oftenest heard. "Will congress submit to what is, after all, a species of bullying?"

Chollewollie answered that.

"Get away with it?" he drawled. "Why, the thing's as good as done already. The whisky men talk about the men whom they control in the House. Well, you know, there's such a thing as losing control."

Smith's work was incessant. The splendid energy he possessed was utilized to the full. Always at his office by 8 o'clock in the morning, he seldom left it before midnight. There were several occasions when he stayed at his desk until much later. Waller put a stop to that.

"This thing's going to get heavier as the weeks go on, instead of lighter," he advised. "Take some care of yourself now. You won't later on. You must be in shape for the big show."

"I don't think I could ever break down," Smith answered.

"I doubt it myself," Waller agreed, "but you don't want to take any chances."

Chollewollie was of incalculable assistance to him in connection with the publicity given to the project. It was he who got together all the facts as they developed each day and distributed them to the corps of correspondents. Moreover, his knowledge of newspapers and their effect on the public mind enabled him to suggest what things should be printed and what should not be given out for publication. The volume of this sort of work in connection with an undertaking that affects every community in the country is vast. With the other things he had to do, Smith was bound to have his aid. Smith himself could not find time to give out to the various writers the interviews they called for. Finally, at Waller's suggestion, he made it a rule to receive them all in a body, once in the morning and once at 6 o'clock in the evening.

The agitator had not seen Edith Mallon since the day they had stood on the edge of the river and she had showed him so unmistakably that she loved him. Her letter—the "love letter"—he had not answered. He realized that she had meant it as a kind of temporary farewell, a parting message that she believed, that she had faith, an assurance that in the end the matters between them would come out as they should come out, and that, until then, she as well as he, would be patient.

Three days after he had seen her, he had called a messenger boy and had sent her a note. It had consisted only of the one line:

"Your face is ever before me."

She did not reply to that. He had not expected it. And afterward he had regretted sending it. He had done it on the impulse of the moment, yielding to the longing he felt to be in communication with her, to let her know that always, no matter what his business might be, his thoughts were with her and about her.

Waller had told him that the Mallons, like other senatorial households, had decided to stay on in Washington, since the late adjournment of congress made the term between the old and the new session so short. Mallon, not being up for reelection, had nothing to take him back to Ohio.

In his own heart Smith felt that, as Edith had written him, he was his own tomorrow.

"I shall go through with this work which is at hand," he told himself, walking to his apartment early one morning. "From that, there may come—who knows?"

He thought that success in the one might mean happiness in all things. Then he smiled as he remembered one of Chollewollie's remarks.

"All newspaper men and politicians are optimists. They have to be. If they weren't they would not be crazy enough to stick to their jobs."

CHAPTER FIFTEEN.

On Thursday of each week Miss Mallon put her forenoon at the disposal of "the girls"—girls who, for any reason, wanted her help or advice. She believed in personal charity—the right word at the right time, the revial of hope, the strengthening of purpose, the taking hold again of high ideals.

"If they want to find work," she explained, "I can often help them. If they are in search of consolation, I can always help them. Women are so brave, but they have so much to fight against. Theirs is never the short, sharp struggle, the doing of big and startling things. Their fate is the little drudgeries, the heartbreaking trifles. Girls, all girls, are wonderful."

Miss Mallon's "Thursday for girls" had become a Washington institution. No girl was refused admittance. None ever failed to see her.

Her first visitor on this particular Thursday was Mrs. Griswold Kane.

Mrs. Kane added a general fluffiness to the atmosphere—fluffiness and gossip. She knew everybody and everything. That, she frequently explained, was the essence of real living—that, and to know always that men were perfectly and absolutely unreliable.

"History," she confided to Edith, sinking into a chair so big that it accentuated in an absurd manner her chubbiness, "repeats itself in a most annoying way. Things began to happen in this part of the world when one John Smith came over here from England. Now, everything that happens in Washington revolves around John Smith."

"What have you heard?" asked Edith, recognizing the generality as an introduction to specific information.

"I have heard a most wonderful thing, my dear. It's complete in plot, detail and theme."

"What is it?"

"You are engaged to be married to John Smith, and, as your father dislikes him intensely, you see him only by stealth—at long intervals."

Edith looked troubled.

"I hope," she said seriously, "he will not hear it. It would be too bad for such gossip to disturb him at such a time as this when he needs all his thought and all his energy for his work."

"You hope it don't disturb him!" Mrs. Kane's eyes became very round with a real astonishment. "How about its disturbing you?"

PAYS FOR 160 ACRES OF LA

From the Crop of Wheat on Acres in Western Canada.

This story of paying for your l out of one year's crop is fully auth ticated by a great many farmers Western Canada.

And now, all that the farmer ma is velvet and you find it is going m extensively into stock raising for authorities agree that in short ti there will be a demand for live sto such as even will tax the vast sources of Western Canada. Th will go into stock raising because the adaptability of the soil to pr vide food and fodder for feedi grain if necessary. The wise farmer will go into stock and improve the quality of his herds. The wise farmer will install steam and hot water plants. In fact, many are now doing it. The will have automobiles, no matter in what districts there is not a good road but one. They will beautify their homes and erect fine barns until the whole country will be as attractive as many of the counties in the best states of the Union. But we started out to tell you of the farmer who paid for his acres of land from the crop of wheat off of 53 acres. The Holden district on the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific does not appear to the ordinary observer to be any better than many other districts along that line, and probably isn't. It was on this district that John Larcome, a settler, purchased in 1915 160 acres of raw prairie land. He broke and seeded 53 acres. His crop turned out well, and he sold the greater portion of it for $2,070. His land cost him $10.50 per acre, or $2,040. So that the crop from the 53 acres paid for the land and left a balance of over $300 which with part of the crop left over would just pay for the cost of operation. This is not really an unusual case hundreds of other farmers in Alberta and Saskatchewan having been able to do the same.

Sales of land are being reported from many districts in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta at good prices. And values are yet low but with the flow of any value that will take place after the war, no doubt they will be considerably increased. The homesteads in the Park sections which are to be had actually free are having the attention of a good class of settlers, who want to go into mixed farming.—Advertisement.

The Nature of Genius.

In an article contributed to the New York Medical Journal by Dr. A. A. Jacobson, are given what are termed "some possible clews to the nature of genius." Doctor Jacobson bases his theory on Freudian psychology, thus establishing it on somewhat firmer basis than many other theories which are purely speculative. He finds a relation between genius and so-called trance mediums in that both may be possessed of ideas per medium, the one inferior to the average, the other superior. The genius, according to this theory, works through a secondary, superior personality. He goes into a sort of trance and produces work which no other person can produce by the mere application of skill and labor.

"CASCARETS" ACT ON LIVER; BOWELS

No sick headache, biliousness, bad taste or constipation by morning.

Get a 10-cent box

Are you keeping your bowels, liver, and stomach clean, pure and fresh with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passageway every few days with Salts, Cathartic Pills, Castor Oil or Purgative Waters?

Stop having a bowel wash-day. Let Cascarets thoroughly cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour and fermenting food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will make you feel great by morning. They work while you sleep—never gripe, sicken or cause any inconvenience, and cost only 10 cents a box from your store. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never have Headache, Biliousness, Coated Tongue, Indigestion, Sour Stomach or Constipation. Adv.

Died of Premature Old Age!

(BY V. M. PIERCE, M. D.)

How many times we hear of comparatively young persons passing away when they should have lived to be 70 or 80 years of age. This fatal work is usually attributed to the kidneys, as, when the kidneys degenerate, it causes autointoxication. The more injurious the poisons passing thru the kidneys, the quicker will those noble organs be degenerated, and the sooner they decay.

To prevent premature old age and promote long life, lighten the work of the kidneys by drinking plenty of pure water all day long, and occasionally take Anuric (double strength) before meals. This can be obtained at drug stores. Anuric will overcome such conditions as rheumatism, dropsical swellings, cold extremities, scalding and burning urine and sleeplessness due to restlessness arising.

PERFECT HEALTH IS EVERY WOMAN'S BIRTHRIGHT

Omaha, Neb.—"After some very heavy lifting I had trouble with my kidneys, and also suffered with bearing down pains. I became very weak and was in distress all the time. I could not eat nor sleep, when I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It built me up in health and strength and I was once more able to do all my own work. I do recommend 'Favorite Prescription' to women who suffer. They will find relief in its use."—Mrs. M. S. JENSEN, 913 N. 28th Ave.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has been a favorite with women for nearly fifty years because it contains no alcohol or any narcotic. It is put up in both liquid and tablets and is to be found in any drug store. If you will send Dr. V. M. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., 10 cents, in stamps or silver, he will mail you a trial package of Favorite Prescription Tablets.

SAFE FARMING

A BUNCH OF SHEEP ON EVERY FARM

By P. G. HOLDEN.

IN GOOD farming allow nothing to go to waste.

On many farms every year grass and weeds around buildings, in barn lots, along fences and roads, in corn or stubble fields, go to seed and become waste material. These weeds could be turned to good account if there was a bunch of sheep to eat them.

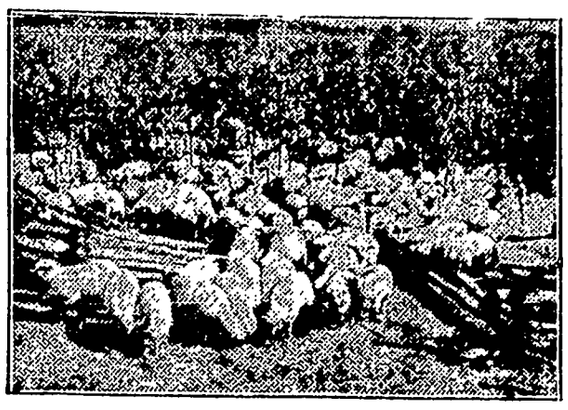
No farm animal will respond more readily to care and feed than sheep. They need but little attention if such as they require is given at the right time.

There is a world wide shortage of sheep. The consumption of mutton is on the increase. The wool supply of the world is about exhausted. Fat lambs and wool bring good figures. Not on account of the war, but from a genuine demand of the people. There is wonderful interest in sheep-growing everywhere, but the demand for mutton and wool is so great that producers cannot meet it. There should be sheep on every farm.

Sheep need a change of pasture. Turning them from one field into another furnishes this change and keeps the sheep healthy.

Expensive housing is unnecessary. Warm shelter is essential only when the lambs are very young. The roof is the important part of the sheep house. Keep the sheep dry during the winter season and the fleece will provide the warmth. A bunch of good ewes will return good profits. Their requirements are simple and their returns in fleece and fat lambs will surprise you.

There is no better winter feed for the ewes than good silage and alfalfa hay. A good ewe will give more milk for the feed consumed, than will the best dairy cow. Her lamb will do the milking and by converting the milk into fat lamb, the farmer can get much more per one hundred pounds for the ewe's milk than for the cow's, and in addition, the ewe furnishes a fleece each year to sell.



Western Lambs on Soy Bean and Corn Pasture.

Care should be taken not to feed sour or moldy silage to sheep. It will kill them. Large ewes raising lambs can be fed sweet silage up to four or five pounds per day, after they have become accustomed to it. During the winter before the lambs arrive, the ewes, if in good condition at the start, need only a light silage ration with alfalfa hay and corn fodder. Sometimes a feed of bright straw is relished by the ewes.

Sheep kept in muddy yards for long periods are almost sure to get sore feet. Give them dry footing and there will be no trouble.

Raising Lambs Profitable.

Select a bunch of rugged "mutton-shaped" ewes and mate them in the fall with a purebred sire of good form and fleece. Have the lambs born in March if there is plenty of good feed for the ewes and warm shelter for the lambs. Otherwise the lambs had better not arrive until later when the weather is warmer and the ewes can get some grass to increase their flow of milk.

Some farmers have the lambs born in January or February and fatten them for earlier markets. This necessitates much care, abundant feed and warm shelter, but it is a profitable business when well managed.

When the lambs are ten days old they will begin eating grain and hay. Fix a creep for them so they can have a trough apart from their mothers, give them some wheat bran and cracked corn and continue to feed them all they will eat while on pasture, if they are to be fattened and sold when three or four months old. The best time to sell the lambs is before they are one year old.

Some good farmers allow the ewes and lambs to graze during the summer with little or no grain, wean the lambs in August and turn them into the standing corn. There is no place where a lamb will fatten faster than in a cornfield eating grass and weeds and weed seeds and the lower blades of corn.

Lambs should not be kept on old pastures that have been grazed by older sheep. There is danger of stomach worms. However, if tobacco dust or stems are kept before the sheep at all times, they will not be troubled with internal parasites.

Three hundred farmers' reports give $3.69 as the average cost for keeping a ewe and lamb as against $10.15 as the average return in wool.

Nearly all good sheepmen keep a few of the best ewes each year to add to the ewe flock and take the place of the older and discarded ewes.

The Maintenance of America's Traditional Championship of the Freedom of the Seas.

Writing in 1916 on the traditions and historical constituency of the United States in its dealings with foreign nations on the question of the freedom of the seas to neutral commerce during a state of war, John Bassett Moore, the distinguished counsellor and writer on international law topics, said:

In maintaining the rights of neutrals fully to navigate the ocean in pursuit of innocent commerce the early statesmen of America while sustaining a predominant national interest, gave their support to a cause from the eventual triumph of which the whole world was to derive an incalculable benefit."

Distinguished statesmen and publicists have likened the present international situation from the standpoint of this country to the conditions confronting the United States in its relations with England and the Barbary states during the last years of the Eighteenth century and the early years of the Nineteenth century. With its vital interest in commerce with other powers during those days of turmoil in Europe and along the Mediterranean, the United States was the world's champion of the supremacy of neutral commerce over the exigencies of the interests of the powers at war, and our statesmen felt no hesitancy in challenging immensely superior forces for the purpose of the enforcement of the fundamental principle of the freedom of the seas.

The most glorious chapter in American history is that dealing with the aggressive, consistent and often unselfish position taken by this country, against superior odds, and at grave risks, whenever that principle was put in jeopardy.

After a long period of comparative inertia in the development and prosecution of international commerce, this country has for some years been developing this field of industrial activity until now it has reached a point where our industrial and financial fabric is more or less wound up with the preservation of the free use of the seas in the maintenance of commercial relations between our citizens and those of other powers.

The restraint thus far exercised by our government in dealing with the illegal acts of all of the belligerents is not a backdown from its former firmness; it must be taken to be the result of a desire to suffer temporary loss and inconvenience under the broad view of avoiding an increase in the frightful carnage of the present war, with the full purpose of throwing the whole weight of this country's influence and also its resources into the scales at the close of the war for the final settlement and establishment of the principle in question.

Unanimous Verdicts in State Courts Where Federal Statutes Are Involved.

From West's Docket.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the United States supreme court in Minneapolis & St. Louis Railway Co. vs. Bombolis and in St. Louis & San Francisco Railway Co. vs. Brown, 36 Supreme Court Reporter, 595 and 602, both of which involved the enforcement of rights under federal employers' liability act, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1913, § 8657.

The states of Minnesota and Oklahoma where the cases cited were originally considered, have adopted statutes permitting, under conditions, a less than unanimous verdict. The seventh amendment of the United States Constitution requiring that trials by jury be as at common law (by unanimous verdict) is held not to apply notwithstanding the federal statute involved.

The War Spirit.

If I must take my sword and shield, and go forth to the crimson field, to slay my country's foes, I'll slay with fierce, titanic zeal, I'll carve the foe-men with my steel and pile the dead in rows. I wish that bloody war might cease, I stand up strong for balmy peace, abhorring martial fuss, but when my stricken country calls, I don my bomb-proof overalls, and load my blunderbus. The trusty sword of Bunker Hill I take down from the window sill, where it has rusted red, and where the enemies are thick I travel on the double-quick, and stack up cords of dead. In times of peace it's well to roast the captain and his gory host, and say that war's a frost; but when our country calls "To arms!" we face the dangers and alarms, and never count the cost. I seize my lance and snickersnee, to meet the foe on land or sea, and from him spill the grease; and when the guns no longer roar, and I quit sloshing round in gore, I'll whoop again for peace.

Landing of the Pilgrim Fathers.

The breaking waves dash high
On a stern and rock-bound coast,
And the woods, against a stormy sky,
Their giant branches tossed;

And the heavy night hung dark
The hills and waters o'er,
When a band of exiles moored their bark
On the wild New England shore.

Not as the conqueror comes,
They, the true-hearted, came;
Not with the roll of the stirring drums,
And the trumpet that sings of fame;

Not as the flying come,
In silence and in fear—
They shook the depths of the desert's gloom
With their hymns of lofty cheer.

Amidst the snows they sang,
And the stars heard, and the sea!
And the sounding aisles of the dim woods rang
To the anthem of the free!

The ocean eagle soared
From his nest by the white waves' foam
And the rocking pines of the forest roared
This was their welcome home!

There were men with hoary hair
Amidst that pilgrim band;
Why had they come to winter there,
Away from their childhood's land?

There was woman's fearless eye
Lit by her deep love's truth;
There was manhood's brow serenely high
And the fiery heart of youth.

What sought they thus afar?
Bright jewels of the mine?
The wealth of seas, the spoils of war?—
They sought a faith's pure shrine!

Aye, call it holy ground,
The soil where first they trod.
They have left unstained what there they found—
Freedom to worship God!

More Pay Asked at Princeton.

Material increases in the salaries of professors at Princeton university are urged in the report of a special university committee. According to the report the average salary of the two hundred members of Princeton faculty is $2,180, although a full professorship pays at the present time an average of about $3,600. This represents an increase of only about 20 per cent in the past 12 years, whereas, according to the committee, the price of foodstuffs and other commodities has doubled in price during this period. The highest salary paid a professor at Princeton is $6,000, and the lowest paid half-time assistant's salary is $400 a year.

ANY CORN LIFTS OUT, DOESN'T HURT A BIT!

No foolishness! Lift your corns and calluses off with fingers—It's like magic!

Sore corns, hard corns, soft corns or any kind of a corn, can harmlessly be lifted right out with the fingers if you apply upon the corn a few drops of freezone, says a Cincinnati authority.

For little cost one can get a small bottle of freezone at any drug store, which will positively rid one's feet of every corn or callus without pain.

This simple drug dries the moment it is applied and does not even irritate the surrounding skin while applying it or afterwards.

This announcement will interest many of our readers. If your druggist hasn't any freezone tell him to surely get a small bottle for you from his wholesale drug house.—adv.

NOTICE TO FARMERS

You will find us at Bloom's old stand ready for business and to pay you the highest market price for your grain and [illegible] at all times

[illegible] are taking [illegible] by the standard weight for ats of 32 pounds to the bushel and you will find that we will give you a square deal at all times

If you have not yet bought your coal come in and see us A large supply at right prices.

Yours for business,
M O Hocum.

Not a Square Deal.

She—But it is a woman's privilege to change her mind, you know.

He—Yes, I suppose so. But it isn't a square deal, just the same.

She—Why not?

He—Because when a man changes his mind the woman in the case gets busy and sues him for breach of promise.

An Explanation.

Husband—Here's that old joke again pertaining to the difficulty of finding a woman's pocket. Now it's easy enough to find a man's pocket.

Wife—Well, that's as it should be. A man has no business with a woman's pocket, while a woman has with a man's—because she needs the money.

AN ABSOLUTE NECESSITY.

Volunteer—Hi, thar, chief! Didn't ye hear the fire alarm? The hull durn taown's a-burnin' up.

The Chief—Well, bing it, Susan's away and I can't find my red shirt nowhar.

His Fatal Error.

He tried to kiss her ruby lips,
At least, so I suppose.
But he forgot about the slips—
So she got it on the nose.

Coroner Is Called To Crystal Lake

Dr. Missman was called to Crystal Lake, Saturday, to hold coroners inquest upon the body of one John Griffen, a tiler, who had been working in a tiling camp near there for some time. The inquest brought out the fact that the deceased had been to town the night before and loaded up on bad booze of which he had received a shipment and upon arriving at the camp was so intoxicated that one of his fellow workers took him to his tent which contained a cot and put him to bed. He evidently fell out or attempted to get out afterwards for the next morning he was found lying on the ground, face downward which was buried in the water and mud and life was extinct. His parents were located at Fairmont, Minnesota, and directed his funeral at Britt.

Death of Simon Ruiter

As we go to press, we are very sorry to learn of the rather sudden death of Simon Reuiter. He had been ailing some all winter, when about a week ago typhoid fever with heart complications set in, and in spite of the best care and attention he passed away Wednesday evening about nine o'clock.

Simon was a young man about 18 years of age, and one of the best and most promising boys in the community. He will be sadly missed in the home and by all who knew him. The parents and family have the deep sympathy of all in this sad bereavement. Surely, the saying is again come true that "death loves a shining mark."—Meservey Register.

The young man is a nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Blank of this place.

Mrs. Pringnitz Dead

Mrs Frank Pringnitz, Sr. who has been very ill for some time with diabetes passed away Wednesday evening. The funeral services will be held from the home at one o'clock Saturday and interment made in Calvary cemetery. The opituary will be published next week.

THE GAUGE OF AN HONEST GATE

THINGS are not always what they seem. It is important to know about the tubing in steel gates. To see that it is full size is not enough. It may look the same outside and be too thin.

Only "IOWA" gates have the heaviest weight of high carbon steel tubing in the frame. Many other features make "IOWA" gates better.

A girl who has been growing for the last three years at a phenomenal rate and is now more than six feet tall, although she is only 12 years old, is interesting the physicians of Johns Hopkins hospital, who expect to see her become a giantess, without loss of normal mental powers. For the last three years the girl's growth has been phenomenal, surpassing all records at the hospital and cases known to the scientists there who are studying giantism. Until she was 9 years old she was simply a large girl. She now weighs 117¼ pounds and is above the average in intellect. Dr. William Thayer and Dr. Lewellys Barker, professors of clinical medicine, have made a study of the case. The girl's mother is stout and her father is larger than most men, but is not a giant

The rise in the price of wheat in the United States and Argentina has caused concern in Spain, where quotations are soaring in consequence. Until recently the Spanish committee of maritime transports has been able to import wheat at a rate which permitted bread to be sold at $0 0393 and $0 0409 a pound. Early in September the committee fixed rates on North American and Argentine wheat Arrangements also were made to use foreign vessels for importing wheat in case the capacity of the Spanish vessels was inadequate to bring the required quantity with celerity. Were it not for the increased price at the ports of origin the measures adopted by the committee would have kept down the cost, says a consular report.

Just when Scotland took up golf in unknown, but in 1457 it was already so popular, says the Britannica, that it interfered with the more important pursuit of archery In May, 1471, an act of the Scottish parliament was passed forbidding this sport "Futeball and golfe forbidden Item, it is statut and ordanit that in na place of the realme there be usit futeball, golfe or other silk unprofitable sports" It is rather curious that this is an edict of King James IV, who later became much attached to the practice of the 'unprofitable sport'—not only he but his daughter Mary Stuart.

The following formula of a whitewash containing lime, skim milk and salt is recommended Slake one bushel of good quicklime with not more than 12 gallons of water Slake the lime and keep the vessel covered until steam ceases to rise stirring occasionally to prevent scorching Prepare a second mixture containing two pounds of common salt and one pound of zinc sulphate in two gallons of boiling water Pour this into the slaked lime and stir in two gallons of skim milk Stir vigorously This makes an excellent weathering of whitewash, suitable for walls and ceilings

A recent tabulation as to the average number of people to every telephone gives Chicago and Albany in the lead, with 61 people to a telephone Los Angeles is next with 6 8 followed by Washington with 7 2 and Detroit with 7 8 Boston has 8 4, New York 8 5 and Philadelphia 11 5 Jersey City showed the least development, with one telephone to every 23 5 people Other cities are as follows St Louis, 12 7, Pittsburgh 11 5, Cleveland 11 9, Newark, 15 6; Buffalo, 12 3, Providence, 10 1, and Rochester 16.1 while the average of all of these cities was 11 2

The United States has a special "President's flag," just as every nation has a special standard for its sovereign or head The president's flag is carried at the main or naval vessels and on boats in which the president embarks It consists of a blue background in the center of which appears the seal of the United States. A new president's flag was unfurled over the White House when President Wilson was inaugurated, March 5, which shows on its blue background the American eagle grasping in its talons the symbol of peace and the weapons of war.

There was cut from the national forests in the fiscal year 1916, 604,920,000 board feet of lumber. Of this amount 119,483,000 board feet was cut under free use privilege, by 42,055 individuals. In all 10,840 sales of timber were made, of which 97 per cent was under $100 in value, indicating the extent to which the homesteader, rancher, miner, small milliman and others in need of a limited quantity of timber, draw upon the forests

The greatest of all linguistic geniuses was undoubtedly Giuseppe Mezzofanti, who died in 1849 Not only could the wonderful Italian read 50 or 60 different languages, besides many dialects but he could also speak and write them with astonishing fluency It was contended that Mezzofanti could converse with natives of practically every quarter of the globe.

One of the American pioneers in radio development has lately invented a tiny wireless receiver which makes it possible for a man in the streets to pick up messages sent out from any station in the immediate vicinity The device has the appearance of a fountain pen and is about the size of one Its interior arrangement is remarkably compact.

According to a report on the Cranbrook forest district, British Columbia it is estimated that the timber cut for 1916 will be from 150,000,000 to 160,000 000 feet. In 1912, which is the year in which the previous largest cut was made, it amounted to 148,000,000 feet.

The volume of the saline matter in the ocean is a little more than 4,800,000 cubic miles, or, according to the United States geological survey, department of interior, enough to cover the entire surface of the United States to a depth of 8,500 feet.

The use of zinc wire in Germany is a subject of much discussion at present in the electrical circles of Germany, due to the increasing scarcity of copper, and because iron wires are not always satisfactory.

The problem which arises when the delivery boy finds no one at the address to which he is to deliver a package has been solved by constructing a kitchen door with which has been combined a sort of cupboard

A modern hotel of 550 rooms, to cost approximately 10,000,000 francs ($2,000,000), has been planned for Lyon, and construction will begin at the termination of the war. The projectors of this hotel are anxious to get in touch with American manufacturers of everything pertaining to construction as well as furnishing the hotel.

The word "city" used to be applied in England only to places where there were cathedrals. Ely, though only a small place of about 8,000 persons, is always referred to as a "city," while until quite recently Birmingham and Liverpool were called "towns."

HOUSE FACTIONS DECLARE A TRUCE

Pitt-Johnston Forces Back Down on "Pot of Gold" Issue, and the Fight Goes On.

Des Moines, Ia. March 24—Peace was declared by the house factions today in the Nichols apology fight. The Pitt-Johnston faction backed down on its demand and withdraw a resolution demanding public apology to the assembly and a retraction for an editorial written by Representative Nichols in his newspaper the Hardin County Citizen, in which he made the inference that contractors had raised a pot of gold to back the Pitt-Johnston road bill

Nichols took the floor after the resolution of withdrawal and declared he never intended to intimate that the Pitt-Johnston men had divided a slush fund or that they ever received money to support the road bill The entire proceedings was expunged from the record, except the Nichols statement

NORFOLK HOMES ARE CUT OFF BY WATER

Elk Horn River Threatens Big Damage to Nebraska Town.

Norfolk, Neb., March 24—One of the worst floods in the history of this locality is threatening Norfolk The north fork of the Elk Horn river is out of its banks and is about a mile wide in some parts of the suburbs Hundreds of homes are cut off by water, which is several feet deep in some of the residence streets The city's energy is centered in building a temporary sandbag dike to keep the water from entering the business portion The water in the storm sewers is backing up and business men have moved their stocks from the basements. The enormous amount of snow which fell last week has choked the river from Pierce to Norfolk. The water was receding at Pierce this morning, but was rising at Norfolk.

At 2o'clock the flood waters at Norfolk reached the business portions of the city and the work on the temporary dike building was abandoned. The water was raising gradually and the city was in the grip of a flood which equalled that five years ago, which was the worst in the history of this vicinity. Among the buildings surrounded by water was the Norfolk News building.

WOULD FORCE ALIENS OF MAINE TO REGISTER

Augusta, Me., March 23.—A bill to compel the registration of the subjects of countries with which the United States is at war or with which war is imminent was introduced in the legislature. It provides that such persons shall register within 24 hours after the governor has issued a proclamation to that effect.

GERMAN PRESS SILENT.

Berlin, March 23 (via London).—The news of the calling of a special session of congress by President Wilson arrived here in the midst of such confusing reports concerning events in the United States that none of the Berlin papers is commenting on it.

MITCHELL WESLYANS ARE VICTORS OVER YANKTON.

Yankton, S. D., March 23.—The state intercollegiate debate was won here last night by the Wesleyans, who defeated Yankton college.

SUFFRAGE WINS FIRST ROUND IN SENATE

House Expected to Follow Upper Chamber on Resubmission—Reed Bill Passes.

Des Moines, Ia., March 24—Resubmission of the amendment to the state constitution granting full woman suffrage is practically assured by passage of the joint resolution for submission for the Iowa senate, 35 to 13. The house will in all probability take similar action within a week Chairman Klinker, of the house committee on constitutional amendments, said tonight that he would make an effort to get his committee together Thursday to report the suffrage amendment out to the house for a vote. A resolution to compel a report is on the calendar for Saturday.

The passage of the resolution by both houses will put it up to the next general assembly whether or not another election upon the suffrage question is to be held. The state constitution requires submission by two consecutive general assemblies before the question goes to the people

The following is the vote on the resolution

Yeas—Adams, Arney, Ball, Balkema, Coburn, Edwards, Enger, Fellows, Fleck, Foskett, Foster, Gibson, Grout, Haskell, Heimer, Holdoegel, Jackson, Kimball, Kingland, Laffer, Lacompte, Lindly, Lytle Mitchell, Newberry, Parker Ratcliff, Rule, Smith, Stephenson, Taylor, Van Alstine, Voorhees, White and Wilson—35.

Nays—Broxam, Byington, Caswell, Chase, Evans, Frailey, Greene, Hale, Henigbaum, Price, Schrup, Thompson and Whitmore—13.

Absent—Evermeyer and Proudfoot.

The house also refused to change the present plan of distribution of the motor vehicles fund to the different counties by killing four different proposals to alter the present plan, under which the division is made, according to the number of civil townships in each county.

The Reed bill, requiring railroads to furnish bunk cars on stock trains, passed the house, 80 to 9.

CLEAR LAKE, IA., LOVE AFFAIR ENDS IN JAIL

C E. Berthelson Has Man and Woman Arrested on Charge of Stealing $5,000.

Jacksonville Ill March 24—Charles A Clampit, and his wife known as Edith Harkey Berthelsen, were arrested here today charged with defrauding C Berthelsen, of Clear Lake, Ia out of a sum alleged to exceed $5,000 The arrests were made on request of the sheriff of Cerro Gordo county, Iowa Berthelsen alleges that he met the Clampits in Chicago, where the woman was introduced as Clampit's sister

Berthelsen says he became enamored of Mrs. Clampit, and they were married, Clampit acting as best man. The trio went to Iowa where they remained for some time when the Clampits disappeared and with them Berthelsen alleges, most of his money.

BIG GIFT CLEARS DEFICIT; SUFFRAGISTS ARE JUBILANT

Des Moines, March 24—A contribution of $2,400 to the Iowa Suffrage campaign fund, which was announced at state suffrage headquarters in Des Moines completes one of the most remarkable financial campaigns ever conducted by a state suffrage organization While the name of the donor has not been announced, it is understood that the subscription came from a former Iowan, who has been greatly interested in the success of the suffrage cause in her native state. This is the largest individual contribution made to the Iowa campaign fund and enables the suffrage association to clear up the last of the deficit remaining from the campaign which closed last June.

Suffrage leaders were unusually jubilant when they received word of the arrival of the check for $2,400, as this sum was all that was required to make up a deficit of approximately $10,000 in the campaign fund. The completion of this big money raising task within a period of eight months after the close of a campaign in which they were defeated is particularly gratifying to suffragists as it indicates that the suffrage cause has lost none of its strength as the result of the defeat of last June.

OLD COUNTY AUDITOR DIES AT DENISON, IA.

Denison, Ia., March 24—M J Collins, who has been deputy auditor and auditor of this county for over 12 years died at his home in this city Tuesday afternoon. He had been ailing for some time. Mr Collins was for some years postmaster and a business man at Aspinwall, on the Milwaukee road. Although an Irishman he became very proficient in German and thus had little trouble in being a popular candidate for office in this county where over half the voters are either of German or Irish decent. He was a painstaking official as auditor, and only failing health took him out of public life. Burial will be made at Manilla.

LEMARS—An important Plymouth county land deal was consummated recently when Dale Hunter and C. L. Knapp purchased the Lee Prather farm, which lies between their two places. Mr. Knapp takes the bulk of the land. Mr. Prather, who was one of the earliest settlers in that part of the county has taken up a new location in Montana.

MAX WEBER DIES.

El Paso, Tex., March 22.—Max Weber, German consul in Juarez, and one of the wealthiest resident of the Mexican border town, died in a local hospital here today. He was consul for the German empire in northern Mexico during the six years of revolutions, and at one time was in charge of all German diplomatic affairs in the northern part of the republic. His son, Max Weber, jr., is with the German army on the western front in France.

SPIES ARE SENTENCED.

New York, March 22.—Albert O. Sander and Charles N. Wunnenberg, who pleaded guilty yesterday to a charge of having sent spies to England from this county to gather information for the German military authorities, today were sentenced to two years in the federal prison at Atlanta and to pay a fine of $2,500 each.

END CAPITAL PUNISHMENT.

Springfield, Ill., March 22.—A bill to abolish capital punishment for murder passed the senate by a vote of 32 to 11.

TEACHERS BILL IS BEATEN IN HOUSE

Original Sum Cut From $150,000 to $90,000, But Fails to Save Pensions—Suffrage Is Up.

Des Moines, Ia., March 23—The house defeated the teachers' pension bill today by one vote, with 53 votes favorable and 54 against. The original Shortess measure provided for a $150,000 appropriation to start the fund. This amount was amended to make it $90,000, but this failed to save it.

When woman's suffrage came up in the senate, Senator Kimball proposed his resolution that women be permitted to say whether they wish to vote.

Lieutenant Governor Moore feared this would imperil the entire resolution and recess was taken until 2.30 p. m. to decide whether such would be the case. If so, Kimball will make his resolution separately from the resolution.

GUN WAS "UNLOADED:" YOUNG BOY IS KILLED

Luton, Ia., March 23—Levern Courtwright, 3 years old, was accidently shot and killed by George Sargisson, 12 years old, when the latter pulled the trigger of a shotgun which he thought was unloaded at the Courtwright farm, near Luton, Ia., on March 13. The full charge of shot struck the Courtwright boy in the leg, severing an artery He died before a doctor could be summoned from Salix.

Young Sargisson, a son of P Sargisson, of Luton, and his two brothers, were returning from a hunting trip near the Courtwright farm They stopped at the Courtwright home to rest.

George picked up his shotgun and loaded it with two shells. Later he removed one of the cartridges. As he thought the gun was unloaded he pointed the weapon at each of the members of the Courtwright family as if in play

"The gun isn't loaded," Sargisson said, as he pointed the gun at Leverne. He pulled the trigger and the full charge struck the boy

Leverne was the son of Mr and Mrs Milton Courtwright.

PLYMOUTH COUNTY DISTRICT COURT BEATS A RECORD

LeMars, March 23 Only one trial and that a court case, will be held during the March term of the district court here, which opened yesterday The remainder of the 31 civil suits assigned for trial have either been postponed or settled out of court. The petit jury will report today and be dismissed The one criminal case set down for trial, and which was continued was that in which James Smith of Sioux City, is charged with bootlegging Smith was arrested last summer in a house near the Woodbury-Plymouth county line It is alleged that a quantity of liquor was seized Smith is at liberty under bond The present term of the district court is the first in five years in which there was not a jury trial Judge William Hutchinson is presiding He will open court next Tuesday in Orange City

BUILD WING AND THEN A CAPITOL

Solons Appropriate Money for Addition and Plans for State House—Use Road Money of Government.

Lincoln, Neb., March 23—The house, by a vote of 67 to 28, ordered a new wing built to the state capitol to replace the dilapidated east wing, and appropriated $700,000 therefore Part of this money goes to buy plans for a complete new capitol to which this wing shall conform.

By a vote of 72 to 18 the house accepted the provisions of the federal aid road act and appropriated $640,000 to match the government appropriation of the next two years. The money goes into a fund to be used under the direction of the state highway commission on roads and bridges, to be distributed among the counties on the basis of area, population and rural delivery route mileage, one-third to each.

The house overturned the railroad committee that is recommending the killing of a senate resolution favoring government ownership of railroads, and placed it on the general file.

DRUG CURES BARRED.

Melbourne, (by mail)—Importation of all preparations purporting to be remedies for alcoholic or drug habits has been prohibited in Australia.

"BONE DRY" BILL KILLED.

Denver, Colo., March 21—The house of representatives of the Colorado assembly today killed the "bone dry" bill pending since early in the session.

Two brothers from Thessalonica, Cyrillus and Methodius, missionaries in Moravia in 863, are credited with the invention of the Slavonian alphebet and the beginning of the translation of the scriptures into that language Cyrillus died at Rome in 868. Methodius was the first bishop of the Slavonians

There is an account in the Bible of the origin of writing Writing is first distinctly mentioned in the fourteenth verse of the seventeenth chapter of Exodus. The connection there implied would indicate that it was not then employed for the first time but was so familiar as to be used for historic records.

BIG DELEGATION DEMANDS REPEAL

Manufacturers and Retailers Tell Senate Insurance Committee Insurance Combine Law Is Vicious and Harmful.

Des Moines, Ia., March 22—The Rogers' bill for the repeal of the Iowa anti-competition insurance law, similar to the Lytle senate bill, was called up in the house this afternoon and made a special order for March 27.

Des Moines, Ia., March 20.—Iowa will lose many of her manufacturing industries unless the legislature repeals the anti-discriminatory fire insurance law, declarod members of the State Manufacturers' association, who appeared before the senate insurance committee Monday afternoon to urge the passage of the Lytle bill, which would wipe the act off the statute books.

More than 40 manufacturers of the state attended the meeting, but the manufacturers were not the only ones to protest against the present law. H. G. Larimer, of Chariton, representing the Iowa Merchants' Retail association; J. R. Wischer, representing the Iowa Implement Dealers' association, and A. T. Bennett, representing Sioux City, were among the speakers.

Speaks for Sioux City.

Mr. Bennett, who was preceded by George Wrightman, secretary of the Manufacturers' association, pointed out the viciousness of the law in all its aspects.

"Sioux City, as everyone knows, has a future, but if the anti-discriminatory law is kept on the books it will interfere with her progress," said Mr. Bennett. "With almost prohibitive insurance rates charged, especially on sound fireproof buildings, the construction of high grade building will be hindered. I know, gentlemen, of buildings erected 40 years ago on which the insurance rates are as low as the rates on concrete buildings erected and in which the fire hazard is almost absent."

E. E. Dunkelberg, operator of a building loan association at Waterloo, told the committee that through his experience in home building for people of moderate means, he had learned that the poor man is not buying insurance cheaper now than under the old law as charged by the insurance interests. He cited numerous instances where the rate of insurance on concrete structures was far more than the rate on brick veneered buildings and structures erected years ago. He and others professed a failure to understand why the rate on new fireproof structures should be more than on buildings built at earlier periods and not according to the modern method

Mr Wischer declared that not only was he representing the implement dealers of the state, but also every member of the Leon chamber of commerce with the exception of three, and those three, he said, are insurance agents

"The insurance law put on the books two years ago is far more gigantic than the capitol extension," he informed the committee "It has cost the people far more money than the capitol extension tax"

William Schreiber, owner of the Schreiber Carriage company of Chariton pleaded for the repeal of the law on the ground that he otherwise would be driven out of the state

"I must compete with other carriage companies in my business and you may as well make it lawful for me to say what companies shall sell and what companies shall not sell in Iowa," he argued "My business is not so big as many other carriage companies and I can't stand the expenses they can I just want to tell you that unless you repeal the law I will have to move my business into another state"

H L. Litchfield, a Waterloo manufacturer accused Emory English, insurance commissioner, of fighting against the interests of the manufacturers.

IDA COUNTY RURAL CARRIER HAS BATTLE WITH WOLF.

Ida Grove Ia., March 22—Harry Conrad, a veteran rural mail route carrier out of this city, had a desperate encounter with a large female wolf within a mile of the city limits. He discovered the wolf as he drew up over a hill and also saw that she had been caught in a steel trap, the chain having been fastened to a post. The animal had passed through the barb wire fence and had shortened the chain length until it had but very little chance to move, and being without a weapon of any kind Conrad took the neckyoke from his buggy to use as a weapon. He struck the wolf once and she became unfastened from the fence and sprang at Conrad, her claws tearing a big hole in his clothing Uncle Sam's mail carrier, however, was a scrapper, and swinging another blow he succeeded in stunning the wolf and quickly finished her after that The wolf measured six feet, four inches in length and stood almost three feet high.

RAILWAY MAIL CLERKS PROTEST DEPARTMENT SHIFT

Cedar Rapids, Ia., March 22—Railway mail clerks who make this city their headquarters are "up in arms" over the recent order of the postmaster general in changing the mail system so that it will be necessary for them to live at Boone. Local business men also are aroused because mail for Chicago and eastern points which used to leave here on the Northwestern at 11:15 now does not get out until 2.30 the next morning and because of connections which this train must make at Omaha with the Union Pacific, it is frequently very late when it reaches this point, thereby putting the mail into Chicago too late to be delivered the same day. About 21 mail clerks are affected by the order and in the hope that it may be rescinded none of them will arrange to move to Boone until it is definitely learned that the change is to be permanent.

MAPLETON—Mrs. E. McVicker died at her home, south of Mapleton, in Center township, Saturday Mrs. McVicker had been in poor health for a number of years She leaves a husband, a daughter and a son The funeral was held yesterday At St John's Methodist church and burial was at Mount Hope cemetery.

CORRECTIONVILLE—Revival meetings started here again Sunday in a tabernacle erected last January. After running a week then they were closed because of a contagious disease. Rev. D. W. Hamilton, D. D., of Kansas, and Professor Gould, of Chicago, are in charge. The Methodist, Congregational and United Evangelical churches are uniting in these meetings.

CORRECTIONVILLE — Mrs. Horace Seeley, a pioneer resident of Correctionville, went to Council Bluffs to visit her daughter, where she took sick and died last Saturday The body was brought here for burial.

EARLY CALL FOR GUARD INTIMATED

President May Wait Until Congress Has Declared War, But Needs Not Wait for Authority.

CABINET TOLD OF SPEED

President Will Make It Clear That U. S. Has Used Every Honorable Means to Avoid War.

Washington, D. C., March 24—Strong intimations of an early call for the national guard are given in high quarters here. The president has authority to issue such a call without action of congress but is believed will not make it until congress recognize a state of war or declares war.

Washington, D. C., March 23.—President Wilson's address to congress will be taken up in the tentative form at today's cabinet meeting. While its exact nature will be determined by the developments of the next 10 days it is expected to be specific in character; probably will outline just what he believes congress should take to meet the warlike operations of German submarines.

Administration officials realize that during the period of waiting a sustained effort is being made in Germany to place the responsibility for war upon the United States. The hint of an offer of mediation is regarded as an added evidence of this movement, but the president and all his advisers are determined that if war actually comes it shall be clear to the world that it has not been of America's choosing.

The president, to keep in touch with army and navy preparations, cancelled practically all engagements today, except one with Governor McCall, of Massachusetts, who wantec to confer on ways in which the state might cooperate with the federal government.

Rushes Defense Plans.

The president received his first official reports on the incident early today. The news came in a cabled report last night from American Consul Mahin at Amsterdam after the president had retired. The consul reported that the vessel, which was unarmed, was torpedoes without warning off the coast of Holland on Wednesday

The president is devoting his almost undivided attention to preparation for national defense, and it is expected he will continue to do so in the interval between now and the convening of congress.

Washington, D. C., March 24—Sinking of the American steamer Healdton with loss of many lives has served not alone to increase the tension felt here over the German controversy, but points more clearly than ever to the probability of quick action by congress in recognizing the existence of war as a tantamount of a declaration of war.

While it is generally assumed that government will not in so many words declare war, it is probable that it will recognize that a state of war exists which means hostilities with Germany whenever an American armed ship and a German submarine get within sight and range of each other.

Pacific Elements Wavering.

Some elements in congress have hitherto not been fully convinced that a declaration of war or the recognition of a state of war was yet advisable. The importance of such an occurrence as that of the sinking without warning of the Healdton, in safe waters, is apparent under such circumstances. It will serve to sweep away whatever remaining sentiment there is in congress for watchful waiting and for restraining from taking the decisive plunge.

DUTCH PORTS CLOSED TO AMERICAN SHIP

Newspaper Says Holland Refuses to Follow Rules Germany Formerly Recognized.

The Hague, March 24—The Handelsblad, of Amsterdam, says today a rumor has reached it that Holland has refused the request of the United States for the admission of American armed merchantmen in Dutch ports and that consequently the Dutch harbors will be closed to American and British ships.

"The government," says the newspaper, "will assume a great responsibility whichever direction the decision may fall. The government seems to believe Germany would interpret as an unfriendly act any decision on our part by which we would come into line with international usages, the justice of which Germany recognized before the war."

Fear of reprisals by the United States or Great Britain during or after the war is expressed by the newspaper, and the Dutch government, it declares, must do only what justice and the interests of the Netherlands dictate.

GERMAN BREAD RATION AGAIN IS REDUCED.

Amsterdam, (via London), March 23.—The bread ration in Germany will be diminished one-fourth, beginning April 15. owing to the scarcity of wheat, according to a dispatch from Berlin to the Weser Zeitung, of Bremen.

The potato ration will be continued at five pounds weekly, and the meat ration will be increased to 250 grams weekly.

It is announced, adds the dispatch, that the curtailment in the use of wheat is necessary to insure the present stocks lasting until next harvest.

Prehistoric Canoe Found.

A prehistoric canoe has been found in Loch Kinellan, near Strathpeffer, and has been presented to the Fort George museum. The canoe was hewn by its builder—what was he like I wonder?—out of the trunk of an oak tree. It measures 24 feet from stem to stern, and is 2 feet 6 inches wide at its broadest part. In the course of centuries portions of the hard wood relic have rotted off, but the bottom and the curves of bow and stern are still in good preservation. It was discovered lying five feet below the surface.

CHILD CROSS, FEVERISH, SICK

Mother! If tongue is coated, give "California Syrup of Figs."

Children love this "fruit laxative." Nothing else cleanses the tender stomach, liver and bowels so nicely. A child simply will not stop playing when the bowels, and the result is that the liver gets sluggish, stomach becomes tightly clogged with sour bile, then your little one becomes half-sick, feverish, don't eat, don't act naturally, breath is bad, tongue full of cold, has sore throat, stomach-ache or diarrhea. Listen, mother! See if tongue is coated, then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system and you have a well child again. Millions of mothers give "California Syrup of Figs" because it is perfectly harmless; children love it, and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels. Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Adv.

Enough.

"Frank," said the teacher sternly, "you're late this morning."

"Yes'm," replied the boy, blushing to the roots of his hair. "I had to get up in the middle of the night and run for the doctor."

"Well, I excuse you this time, Frank, but I hope it will never happen again."

"That's what pa said, too," was the boy's fervent answer.

SAFETY SIGN SHOT AWAY; SHIP SUNK

Two Torpedoes Released After Shell Destroys Electric Letters Revealing Identity of Healdton.

FAINTING MEN ARE SAVED

Six of 13 Americans Known on Board Ship Rescued, Ship's Sinking Drowning Occupants of One Boat.

Rotterdam, March 24—The six Americans saved from the Healdton are Capt. Charles Christopher, of Brooklyn; J. Caldwell, of New York, chief engineer, and G. B. Embry of New Orleans, first assistant engineer, all landed at Ymuiden. C. C. Willerup, chief mate; Y. Swenson, second assistant engineer and S. L. C. Jensen, third assistant engineer, who landed at Terschelling.

SECOND BOAT RESCUED

The Hague, March 24—A second boat from the Healdton has been brought to Terschelling by a Dutch torpedo boat with eight men, including one badly injured. One Dutchman had jumped overboard, losing his life. The third boat, containing 19 men, was overturned when the ship capsized. All were drowned, making a total of 20 lives lost out of the crew of 41. Of the 13 Americans aboard only six were saved. Two Dutchmen also were among the victims, others of whom were Spaniards, Norwegians and a Finn.

Safety Sign Shot Away.

Detailed accounts of the sinking show that the Healdton, after considerable delay at Halifax on her way to Rotterdam, proceeded to Bergen, Norway, where she received orders to resume the voyage to Rotterdam. Nothing of especial importance happened until Wednesday at about 8 p. m. Notwithstanding the electrically illuminated words "Healdton, New York," between the masts the vessel was bombarded suddenly by an invisible submarine. It first shot away the illuminated name and thereupon without warning, twice torpedoed the vessel.

Fire broke out at once forward by an explosion in the machine room and the crew immediately sought safety in the boats, not having a minute to dress or collect any of their belongings.

Helpless When Rescued.

All efforts to save the 19 men in the overturend boats were fruitless. The boat with 13 men, including the captain, was sighted on Thursday by the steam trawler Live, which had just put to sea, but immediately returned to Ymuiden with the shipwrecked men. A number of these survivors were in their underclothes and all were terribly exhausted by the nights [illegible] exposure in the open boat to bitter cold and snow. They had not even enough strength to come along side the trawler, whose skipper had to apply his best seamanship to approach the boat without running it down. Once on board the trawler, some of the survivors fell to the deck in a faint from exhaustion.

According to the captain of the Healdton, one of the torpedoes hit his vessel in the stern and the other amidship. Dutch fishermen say they observed the glow of the burning steamer in the distance, at first believing it to be northern lights.

In a dispatch from Ymuiden it is stated apparently the Healdton was within or on the border of the German danger zone east of the free channel.

Nothing could be distinguished of the nationality of the submarine which fired without emerging fully and disappeared immediately. In addition to the illuminated sign the Healdton's nationality was indicated by the fact that she was flying the American flag and had her name painted on both sides. The Dutch cook was among the four survivors of a ship recently torpedoed.

Amsterdam, via London, March 24—The Handlesblad says there are only six Americans among the survivors of the Healdton.

SUNK WITHOUT WARNING.

London, March 23—The American steamer Healdton has been torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine.

A boat containing seven of the Healdton's crew has reached Terschelling (North sea), the dispatch adds.

The steamer Healdton is a tanker of 4,480 tons gross, and is owned by the Standard Oil company of New Jersey. She was built in 1908. The Healdton was last reported sailing from Philadelphia January 26 for Rotterdam.

13 MEN AMERICANS.

Philadelphia, Pa., March 24—The crew on the tanker Healdton included 13 Americans, according to the personnel as given out by the ship commissioner here early tonight.

They are:

Charles Christopher, captain.
I. Willerup, chief mate, New York.
W. Chandler, second mate.
C. F. Hudgins, third mate, Virginia.
S. W. Smith, able seaman, Chicago.
J. Caldwell, chief engineer.
G. W. Embrey, first assistant engineer, Louisiana.
John Emery, second assistant engineer, New York.
Emery Leveaux, oiler, Michigan.
John W. Steiner, messman, Pittsburgh.
R. S. Balzano, wireless operator.
George Healey, second cook, San Francisco.

WIRELESS OPERATOR SAVED.

Philadelphia, Pa., March 23—Herman Parker, the wireless operator aboard the Healdton, was saved, according to a cablegram received here today by his father, William Parker. The message was dated Terschelling, Holland. Mr. Parker said his son was 19 years old and a native Philadelphian.

U. S. LOSSES $499,000.

Washington, D. C., March 23.—The American tanker Healdton, torpedoed and sunk off the Dutch coast Wednesday night, was insured by the government's war risk bureau for $499,000.

Amsterdam (via London), March 23.—In its account of the sinking of the Healdton the Handelsblad says:

"The unreliability of the German assurances regarding the so called safe zone is shown by the reports of the crew of the Healdton and the crews of fishing boats.

INSOLENCE IN NORWAY SEEN BY GERMANS

Petrograd, March 24—Russian troops, pushing west from Kermanshah in Persia, have reached a point less than 45 miles from the Mesopotamian border. The war office announced today that after a Turkish army had been beaten in a 16-hour battle, outside of Kerind, the Turks had retreated to the vicinity of Kerind and made another stand there.

Another Russian column has attacked the Turks along the Shirwan river, a tributary of the Diala, about midway between Kermanshah and Sakkis, from which last point another Russian army has been pushing southwestward into Mesopotamia.

The Russians also have won a new success near Lake Van, in southern Turkish Armenia, capturing men and material.

Amsterdam, March 24—Indications of renewed tension between Norway and Germany are appearing in the German newspapers. The Cologne Gazette makes a feature of an editorial headed "Norwegian Insolence," in which it says:

"The press of Norway, in these days has assumed a tone of an insulting character, which Germany cannot tolerate. The Norwegians would do well to remember that their unbridled press campaign once before led to diplomatic tension. A sense of responsibility should have kept the papers from again singing the same tune."

RUSS ACTIVITY RENEWED.

Petrograd, March 24—The Russians are feeling out the Teutonic lines south of Galatz, on the Rumanian front, and have succeeded in driving out the garrisons of two stations near Vadeni, between Galatz and Braila, the war office announced today. German airplanes dropped bombs on Galatz.

By numerous counter attacks the Rusisans has repaired the breach made in their lines by the Germans near the Beresina river east of Lida, on the Russian front in a recent attack, the war office announced today.

Paris, March 24—A violent attack was made by the Germans last night north of St. Simon in the region of Ham. Today's war office announcement says the Germans gained some ground at the beginning, but were counter attacked immediately and driven back as far as Beraucort Le Grande, three miles northeast of St. Simon.

The French continued to advance north of Soissons. Fresh detachments crossed the Ailette.

The statement says details which had been received regarding the attack by the Germans on the Vregny-Chivres line, show that they suffered heavy losses. Two companies of French chausseurs, which were isolated for a moment from the remainder of the troops, cut their way through and brought back prisoners.

Report Heavy French Loss.

Berlin, March 24 (by wireless to Sayville)—Heavy losses were inflicted by the Germans yesterday upon French troops who had crossed the Somme-Crozat canal in the vicinity of St. Simon, army headquarters announced today. The French were repulsed and 230 prisoners and several machine guns were taken.

FRIENDLY PRESS TONE TOWARD U. S. ORDERED

Kaiser's Instructions in Treating of New Submarine Situation Intercepted by British.

London, March 24—An intercepted document issued from the German general command, dated Muenster, in February, advising newspaper writers how to deal with the new submarine war, which has been obtained from a responsible source, contains interesting paragraphers.

One reads "Toward America, it will be advisable to employ outward forms of friendliness. Unfriendliness would increase the danger of American coming in—the rupture of diplomatic relations, even active participation hangs in the balance. The attitude of the press must not increase this danger."

Other paragraphs assert that England's claims to having perfected a means of defense "are refuted by the good results of recent months, which are increasingly important because the mercantile marine is weakened and materially exhausted."

NEW RAILROADS AND BOMB PROOFS BUILT

Deported Civilians and Others Are Forced to Construct Defenses—Villagers Held.

Paris, March 23.—The last batch of repatriated French from the Somme region who have arrived here agree that the Germans have established a defensive line running through Cambrai, St. Quentin, Lafere and Laon. One of the refugees said:

"For several months past the Germans have been concentrating in the neighborhood of this line, particularly against St. Quentin, Cambrai and Guise.

"All civilians deported from northern France and Belgium were forced to carry out military work, feverishly constructed. They were compelled to labor under terrible threats. The Germans constructed a complete new system of railroads and dug deep shell proof shelters.

"Localities south of the line were systematically evacuated and the greater number of the inhabitants of the towns and villages were repatriated, only men and women capable of working being held. None of the people in St. Quentin or Laon were repatriated, however.

"On the contrary the Germans drew a cordon around these towns and the most severe measures were taken in recent months to prevent anyone from either entering or leaving them."

TEDDY FORMS BIG ARMY TO AID ENTENTE

Fighting American Organizing a Great Expeditionary Force of Veteran Troops Made Up From Many Armies.

RICH MEN BACK PROJECT

Allies to Release All U. S. Subjects Now Fighting in Their Ranks for Service With Stars and Stripes.

London, March 24—Private messages have reached The Hague that Emperor William is suffering from a severe nervous breakdown, an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from The Hague reports. The emperor's physicians are said to have ordered him to take the cure at Hamburg.

New York, March 24—An American expeditionary force of 100,000 men to fight in France under the leadership of Theodore Roosevelt has been organized and financed by a group of wealthy citizens in New York, according to trustworthy information.

A large number of the force is to be recruited from trained American soldiers. It is known that about 200 officers and privates in each militia unit in New York have been asked to join the expedition.

Allies to Release 50,000 Men.

The whole work of organizing the force has been going on in secret for several months, and it is understood that everything is in readiness for the signal to leave.

At least 50,000 American citizens, who are now fighting under the British and French colors, all of them highly trained soldiers, who have seen the rigors of actual warfare, have already signified their intention of joining Colonel Roosevelt's force.

It is understood that arrangements will be made with the entente government to discharge all officers and soldiers of American birth now fighting on the side of the allies.

Of the number in Colonel Roosevelt's potential fighting force who will join the entente against the central powers, a great many are believed to be with the Canadian divisions. One battalion of American citizens having been organized and mustered into the Canadian service several months ago.

To Mobilize in France.

The English, Scotch and Irish regiments, especially, have many Americans, and the foreign legion in France has many times conferred honors on soldiers born and trained in the United States. When these men are released from their present duties, it is believed that a giant mobolization camp will be placed either in England or France. From there the troops will be sent to the front to take up active service against the central powers.

Colonel Roosevelt will be in supreme command of the fighting force. Ever since the outbreak of the war in 1914 he has chafed under the circumstances which kept the United States at peace while France and England were avenging the rape of Belgium. On several occasions there have been rumors that he was determined to organize an American legion to fight on the side of the allies, and only recently he offered his services to President Wilson.

Couldn't Keep Out of It.

When it became a certainty that Germany did not intend to escape a war with the United States, Colonel Roosevelt set to work in a quiet way to organize a force which would be ready as soon as hostilities were started. As soon as it became known that the president believed that a state of war exists between Germany and the United States several wealthy friends of the ex-president got together and mapped out the plans for financing the expeditionary army of American citizens.

From trustworthy sources the information comes that very little difficulty has been encountered in getting together the force of 100,000 soldiers. Several militiamen, it is reported, have been approached by representatives of Colonel Roosevelt.

WORK ON MUDFLATS ROAD BEGINS EARLY

Salt Lake City, Utah, March 23.—The projected 22 miles of concrete roads across the mudflats of the Great Salt Lake desert, by which the Lincoln Highway association will make a boulevard of the only impassable stretch on the new route through this state was assured today when it was announced that $7,500, the first installment of the work, had been deposited by Henry B. Joy, president of the Lincoln Highway association, with the Utah State National bank.

Actual work on this stretch will begin as soon as weather permits.

HEALDTON COMPLIED WITH GERMAN RULES; WAS NOT IN SUB ZONE

Philadelphia, Pa., March 24—The loss of the Healdton, including cargo, approximates $2,150,000, it is said.

Up until two years ago the Healdton was known as the Purelight and sailed under German registry, but since then has sailed under the American flag.

The Healdton had an unusual voyage. After Germany had issued her notice of ruthless submarine warfare the Healdton picked up a wireless message off the coast of France ordering her to return at once to Halifax and await orders. She arrived there about February 8, and remained until about February 28, when she sailed again for Rotterdam by way of the Shetland islands route, which is out of the submarine war zone established by Germany. The decision of the Healdton to avoid the danger zone and not call at Kirkwall for inspection caused the British authorities to put the ship and crew through rigorous examination at Halifax. When the steamer left Halifax she had orders to call at Bergen and then proceeded to Rotterdam.

AGGRESSIVE WAR PROGRAM USING IMMENSE FORCES TO FOLLOW DECLARATION

Washington, D. C., March 23.—The American government has decided that steps to meet the situation with Germany shall include preparation for effective and aggressive warfare in addition to measures for the protection of shipping.

So far it was learned after today's cabinet meeting there has been no decision decision as to whether the sending of a military force to Europe shall be proosed, but the army as well as the navy and industrial resources of the nation are to be made repady for any demand that may be made upon them.

Washington, D. C., March 23.—After today's cabinet meeting it was indicated that the government was preparing for vigorous action once a state of war was declared by congress to exist. One of the first steps under consideration is the supplying of entente allies with money. Preparations also are being made to speed up the manufacture of munitions.

New Albany, Ind., March 23.—Six negro school children were killed and more than a score injured during a wind storm which swept a portion of this city late today.

New York, March 23.—The French line steamere Rochambeau arrived at Bordeaux safely yesterday according to a cablegram received here today from one of the passengers. Thee Rochambeau left New York on March 12, with 331 passengers. The Rochambeau left New York on March 12, with 331 passengers, of whom 107 were Americans.

Washington, D. C., March 23.—Several of the country's larger railroads filed a petition with the Interstate Commerce commission late today asking that they be permitted to increase their rates generally except on coal, coke and ore, and that the new tariffs be permitted to become effective in 30 days instead of being suspended for investigation.

Only the presidents of the eastern roads signed today's petition but similar action will be taken tomorrow by more than a score of western lines.

GERMANS SEIZE BOYS AND WOMEN

Compelled to Work in Trenches and Taken on Retreat—Helpless Sent Back—Butter Brings Joy.

With the British armies in France, March 23. (via London, March 24)—The real human interest in the great retreat of the Germans lies in the half ruined villages formerly occupied by them. The joy of the people over what they proclaim to be their liberation, is wonderful to see. A package of well buttered ham sandwiches, distributed among the children of one village, caused greater excitement than the evacuation of the Germans.

"It is butter!" cried several shrill little voices to show their mothers, grandmothers and grandfathers what they had received. Through the open doors could be heard such expressions as, "Praise God, there is butter again in France."

In penetrating the former German positions a lasting memory always is one of the endless chains of rusted barbed wire. This has been a most valuable means of defense for the Germans, and from the amount which may be seen stretching away in every direction, it would seem that all the German industrial plants had been turned to wiremaking. It is not the ordinary barbed wire known in America, but the barbs, long and stout, are attached to the wire at intervals of half an inch. If it had not been for the barbed wire this war would have been over long ago, a British officer declared.

In leaving the country recently evacuated, the Germans have taken away in addition to all strong men and boys above 16, all women and girls from 15 years upward who are able to work. A French official communication recently mentioned the taking of 50 women and girls from Noyon. On February 17, last, the Germans removed 423 from Nesle. It is said that all women capable of working in German factories or on German farms, who have no children dependent on them, must go.

In taking away the fit population the Germans are replacing these persons by sending back hundreds of aged or infirm men and women from St. Quentin and other places behind their new lines, saying frankly that the burden of supporting the old and infirm is thus placed on the French people.

BIG STEAMER IS ASHORE

Vancouver, B. C., March 24—The Grand Trunk Pacific steamer Prince Rupert, which left Prince Rupert B. C. last midnight, for Vancouver, is aground on Gonn island, east of Lawyer's island light, and is reported extensively damaged. The steamer ran ashore during a heavy snow storm. Assistance was sent from Prince Rupert and the passengers were taken off by tugs and returned to Prince Rupert.

CABINET TO ATTEMPT TO GIVE HOME RULE

In Debate in Commons Bonar Law Says Government Will Try to Solve Difficulty.

London, March 24—In the course of a debate in the house of commons on a resolution offered by Sir James Henry Dalzell, liberal, urging the government to make another attempt to settle the Irish difficulty, Andrew Bonar Law announced that the government already had decided to make such an attempt. The Dalzell motion was voted down.

OTHER "HIKERS" TO BE ARRESTED

Woman Suspect With Men Is Arrested, and Man at Chattanooga Ordered Held.

Atlanta, Ga., March 24—Federal officers today caused the arrest on suspicion of Mrs. A. T. Enden, a German young woman, who has been traveling with Valerian Johannes Johns Pieczynski, taken in custody here yesterday with Hugo Coutandin. The two men said they were walking around the world, Pieczynski on a bet and Coutandin as his time keeper. Suspicion that the trio might be German spies was the cause of their arrest.

Federal officers said they also had requested Chattanooga police to arrest A. T. Enden, who the young woman under arrest here, says she married in San Diego, Cal., after having walked there from Salt Lake City with Pieczynski. They said the arrest of others "hikers" in different parts of the country also had been ordered.

SPIES SHOOT U. S. SOLDIER

Portland, Me., March 24—Private John Poor, of the Third company coast artillery corps at Fort Williams, was shot and probably fatally wounded early today while attempting to capture two men who had made their way into the reservation despite the presence of a heavy guard and had reached a point near one of the batteries of the 12-inch guns. The men escaped.

Grapples With Two Men.

Because of the reported presence of suspicious strangers near the forts the guard force has been greatly increased and every precaution taken to protect government property.

Wednesday night shots were fired at a soldier on guard at Portland headlight. More experienced men were later detailed for duty at the forts and early today two men attempted to pass in the darkness. Poor grappled with them and was shot in the groin. At the post hospital it was said the chances were against his recovery. The bullet was from a pistol of large caliber.

CRANE TO SUCCEED GUTHRIE AT TOKIO

Man Recalled by Taft for Interview May Get Important Diplomatic Post.

Washington, D. C., March 24—Charles R. Crane, of Chicago, was understood today to be under consideration by President Wilson for appointment as ambassador to Japan to succeed the late Ambassador Guthrie. Mr. Crane was appointed minister to China in the Taft administration, but was recalled before he left San Francisco, because of a published interview dealing with far eastern questions.

SNOW BLOCKS TRAINS.

Laramie, Wyo., March 23.—Wyoming again is in the grip of a heavy snow storm, the Union Pacific railroad being blocked virtually all the way from Laramie to Green river, local officials of the road said today.

Several westbound trains are held in the yards here, and those eastbound are tied up at points beyond Rawlins.

GUATEMALA PROTESTS.

Guatemala City, March 23.—The Guatemalan government has handed to the German minister a protest against the recent German note on submarine warfare.

"TO H - - L WITH THE PEOPLE"

We are not mincing words in this article, but are stating facts exactly as we see them, without fear or favor.

"To hell with the people" seems to be about the attitude of both labor and capital. And, being of the people ourself, we object.

By the skin of our teeth we have just missed a disastrous railroad strike——missed it because the railroads themselves bowed to the demands of the brotherhoods as the country totters on the brink of actual war.

The railroad executives declared they would fight to a finish before they would surrender to the demands of the brotherhoods. In turn the brotherhood chiefs swore they would paralyze the railroads of the country in order to win their point.

In vain did the press and people of the country urge meditation, compromise, postponement, anything to avoid the calamity of a strike. But the pleadings of the people, the prospect of untold suffering, even the national danger itself fell upon deaf ears.

It was a case of "to hell with the people," with both sides joihing in the chorus.

But when the emissaries of the president of the Uhited States disclosed the national peril to the contestants, the railroad presidents threw up their hands and granted the demands of the brotherhoods, granted them because they knew the government would seize and operate the roads if they did not grant them.

It will cost the roads approximately $100,000,000 a year, but this will not come out of the pockets of the railroad corporations. No, indeed! The people themselves will pay the freight in the shape of increased charges on their freight.

We are not championing the cause of the railroads, nor are we pleading the cause of the brotherhoods, but we ARE asking for justice for the people, for those who foot the $100,000,000 bill. But where that justice is coming from we don't know.

Every where we turn it seems to be just a plain case of "to hell with the people."

Capital disregards them, labor disregards them, and even congress disregards them——after the vote is cast.

Prices are mounting up by leaps and bounds. Living conditions are becoming intolerable, and no one seems able to call a halt.

We have a congress which is sent to Washington to make laws that will insure just and equitable treatment for all of our people—for the capitalist, the laborer, and for the "people."

But congress shirks its plain duty. Apparently it does not even recognize that a duty exists.

It could regulate big business, it could regulate the brotherhoods and other organizations, it could fix maximum and minimum prices if it would.

But it don't It simply shoots hot air and hits nothing, and never intends to hit anything.

It encourages the existing conditions by its refusal to regulate. The favored ones win out and the people pay——as they have always done.

One side or the other must give in, and since neither is willing to pay the freight, the helpless people perforce must do the paying. And they do.

And it will always be so until the people wake up to the fact that they are the masters and not the servants.

It now transpires that while Count Von Bernstorff was shedding tears over the agony of parting from his good American friends, his fellow conspirators were as busy as bees in Mexico, getting control of the finances of that unhappy country and putting its munitions plant on a firm basis. A few thoughtful people foresaw some move of the kind, but as often as they opened their mouths in warning they were met with the parrot-like cry of "jingo"——the last defense of an indefensible position. Now we will pay the price of our folly.

If our forefathers could come back to earth they would want to get right off again. This is no place for them. High prices would bankrupt them, leg shows would blind them, political rottenness would stagger them, and the greed of gold would nauseate them. No, this is no place for our forefathers, good, honest souls that they were.

A few days ago he was Czar of Russia, autocrat of all he surveyed. Now he is just plain Nicholas Romanoff, shaking in his boots for fear they will not leave him even his worthless life. In time, perhaps, he may degenerate into "Old Nick," which, forsooth, might be quite as appropriate as any name he could bear.

A QUESTION OF DRESS

By EARL REED SILVERS.

"I wish I could take you over to the horse show in New York tomorrow night," said Jim Chambers, speaking with the frankness of an engaged young man to his worshiping fiancee. "But I can't. I'm dead broke."

Edythe Merritt sighed resignedly.

"If you only could," she suggested, "I would wear my green taffeta."

"Well, why not wear it to the club tonight?"

"I can't; it's an afternoon dress."

"What's it like?"

Edythe manifested a slight degree of interest.

"I'll let you see a picture of it if you care to," she said rising. "It's in the April Ladies' Star."

"Here it is," explained Edythe, opening the magazine and indicating one of three young ladies representing the very latest of spring styles. "And—well, isn't that strange?"

"Isn't what strange?"

"Why on this very page is the pattern for Doris Howard's evening dress."

Jim's eyes opened wide. A picture of the country club bazaar as his sister had described it flashed before him.

"Which one?" he asked.

"The one next to mine. My, but it's pretty."

"Not so pretty as yours. You have a new hat to go with the dress, haven't you?"

"Yes! Would you like to see it?"

"Sure; go up and put it on."

Edythe hurried upstairs; and as soon as she had disappeared, Jim seized the magazine she had laid on the table and looked long and earnestly at a picture of a dimpled young lady in blue satin, covered with silk net of the same shade. Then, hearing signs of activity from the room above, he hastily drew forth a pen-knife and cut picture and description of the girl from the printed page.

After supper that evening, before he took Edythe to the bazaar at the country club, Jim drew a slip of paper from his pocket and consumed 15 long minutes in learning, word for word, the detailed description of a certain evening gown. Reaching the club, he wandered around with seeming aimlessness, gradually drawing his companion toward a certain anteroom, over the door of which were emblazoned the words, "The Great Dress Description Contest."

"It's a guessing contest," the girl explained. "Doris Howard has on her new evening dress. Any man who thinks he knows anything about dresses is given five minutes in which to write a description of it. The one who writes the best description wins the prize of twenty-five dollars.

"I ought to know a lot about dresses, hearing you describe yours all the time," said Jim thoughtfully. "I guess I'll take a chance."

He entered the room and was seated at a table with paper and pencil before him.

Jim glanced at Doris Howard, who was standing on a slightly raised platform at the far end of the room. Smiling confidently, he set to work.

"This beautiful evening gown is of pink satin, silk net of the same shade and maize silk net bordered with gold spangles," he wrote. "The wide girdle and pointed skirt sections of satin are mounted over a lining-foundation, while the top of the bodice and sleeve sections are of gold net joined with the spangled guimpe. The skirt has a foundation of messaline, finished at the bottom with a flounce of lace."

His description finished, he rejoined Edythe outside.

They wandered about from booth to booth, chatting happily until midnight arrived, when the various prizes were awarded.

"The great dress description contest," the president of the club announced, "drew forth many responses, but by far the best description was given by our well-known fellow-clubman, Mr. Jim Chambers. This effort was a masterpiece." He paused.

Jim smiled broadly.

"What did I tell you?" he whispered to Edythe. "You can wear your new dress after all."

"But," the president continued, "although Mr. Chambers' description was a wonder, he described the wrong dress. Miss Howard's creation, the ladies inform me, is of rose-colored taffeta and pale pink chiffon cloth, while the dress described by Mr. Chambers was of satin, covered with silk net and bordered with gold spangles. Therefore, while we feel that Mr. Chambers should receive honorable mention, the prize must go to Mr. Harold Janeway, whose description, although less flowery, was more exact."

When he had partly recovered from the shock Jim drew Edythe to one corner of the room.

"Didn't you tell me this was Doris Howard's dress?" he asked, indicating the crumpled piece of paper he had drawn from his pocket.

Edythe glanced at it, burst into a stifled roar of laughter.

"You foolish, foolish boy," she said, when she could control herself. "That isn't the one; you cut out the wrong picture and description. The right one was on the other side of my dress."

"Well, I'll be jiggered!" Jim looked the picture of dejection, and the girl placed her hand impulsively on his arm.

"Never mind," she said softly, "I didn't want to go to the horse show, anyhow."

"CASCARETS" FOR SLUGGISH BOWELS

No sick headache, sour stomach, biliousness or constipation by morning.

Get a 10-cent box now.

Turn the rascals out—the headache, biliousness, indigestion, the sick, sour stomach and foul gases—turn them out to-night and keep them out with Cascarets.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never know the misery caused by a lazy liver clogged bowels or an upset stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse your stomach; remove the sour fermenting food; take the excess bile from your liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret to-night straightens you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from any drug store means a clear head, sweet stomach and clean, healthy liver and bowel action for months. Children love Cascarets because they never gripe or sicken. Adv.

He Ran Out of Ink.

A seven-year-old boy grew rather peeved at his eleven-year-old sister. He believed that diplomacy rests largely in note writing, so, instead of delivering his opinion by word of mouth, he retired to a safe and private place, where he took his pen in hand and wrote the following:

"Susie is a hobo.
"Susie is a bone head
"Susie is a skunk
"Susie is a wart hog
"Susie is a polecat.
"Susie is a hog.

"I could say more but I will not be too hard on her."

BOSCHEE'S GERMAN SYRUP

Why take ordinary cough remedies when Boschee's German Syrup has been used for fifty-one years in all towns in the United States, Canada, Australia, and other countries, for coughs, bronchitis, colds settled in the throat especially lung trouble. It gives the patient a good night's rest, free from coughing, with easy expectoration in the morning, giving nature a chance to soothe the inflamed parts, throw off the disease, helping the patient to regain his health, assisted by pure air and sunshine when possible. Trial size 25c, and 75c family size. Sold in all towns in the United States, Canada, Australia, and other countries.—Adv.

Victor Hugo's Grandson.

George Victor Hugo, the grandson of the great Victor Hugo, is now showing in Paris about 100 sketches which are attracting great attention. At the beginning of the war he was a censor, an occupation in which he appreciated too keenly the humor of exercising such a function by the grandson of his grandfather. So, in spite of his white hair he gave up the censorship and set out for the army. He did not become a general, but he is a lieutenant. After a year and a half at the front he has returned from Champagne with a hundred choice acquarelles, which all Paris is running to see. He has added somewhat to the splendor of the name of Hugo, as he has been twice in the course of the war cited in the orders of the day for meritorious conduct.

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF HAIR STOPS FALLING

Girls! Try This! Makes Hair Thick, Glossy, Fluffy, Beautiful—No More Itching Scalp.

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable luster, softness and luxuriance.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any store, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Adv.

The Man Who Forgot

A NOVEL

By JAMES HAY, JR.

GARDEN CITY NEW YORK
1915

"It doesn't at all."

"But I hear it everywhere! Mrs. Grover told me—and Colonel Grimshaw—and Mrs. Ellis—and that Miss—oh, what's her name? She's single, but at the same time doubleminded—Miss Tevers—Carrie Tevers. And Elizabeth Beaureman—and and the whole of Washington!"

This time Edith smiled.

"Really," she said, "it doesn't annoy me in the least."

"Edith Mallon, do you mean to tell me you'd think of marrying a reformer—this agitator?" Mrs. Kane's astonishment was stupendous.

"He hasn't asked me, Nellie." Editn gave her the information with a little laugh.

"But if he does ask you?"

"If I tell you, you won't tell?"

"No."

"If he asked me, I'd marry him tomorrow — this minute — any time."

"But you don't know who he is!"

"I don't care."

"And you love him?"

"Don't you think so?"

Mrs. Kane began to laugh, and changed her mind. She leaned far back in the ridiculously large chair and looked at Edith with a glance that, for once, was preternaturally solemn. Something like tears—something like the mist after rain—came like a curtain over the soft blue of her eyes. Then, impulsively, she sprang up and went over to Edith and kissed her.

"Anyway," she said, a little wildly, "I think you've more sense about it than anybody else in the world. My God! I get so tired of these imitation men with their money and these other men with their imitation money that I could scream! What I'd like to have is what I once had—some man to make me feel that he was the whole world, some man with real thoughts and real arms, somebody to laugh at me when I tried to tyrannize over him, somebody to make me know that I was nothing but a woman—for him!"

Edith, looking up at her, was tremendously surprised.

"Why Nellie," she said, taking one of her hands, "I never—I never dreamed you thought this way about—things."

Mrs. Kane laughed, to cover up the fact that she was ashamed of having shown so much real feeling.

"Oh, you're like all the rest," she jeered lightly. "You think because a woman's a widow she has solved the problem of how to turn her heart to stone! But you take my advice: The man's the thing. There isn't anything else in the world that matters that much." She snapped her fingers by way of illustration.

Edith patted the hand she held.

"Of course," she said, "you're right. And now you know why I don't like to think of his being annoyed by this crazy talk about an engagement."

Mrs. Kane went back to her chair and sat down. She wore an air of contrition, as if she had broken her code or infringed on her rules by exposing her own heart.

"Tell me," she asked, putting lightness into the query; "you think he's going to ask you to marry him?"

Edith laughed whole-heartedly.

"I feel very sure."

"Well," Nellie gave it as her critical judgment, "I don't know what the man's past has been, but I will say this: he has a glorious future ahead of him."

Wales lifted the hangings at the door.

"Miss Downey," he announced.

Elise made her entrance exactly as she had built it up in her own mind and rehearsed it before her own bedroom mirrow. There was in it only one flaw: something in her manner indicated vaguely that she regarded with awe the wooden-faced Wales. She was glad, it appeared, to get past him.

"I wanted to see Miss Mallon," she said, her concluding high note in perfect working order.

Edith went forward to meet her.

"I am Miss Mallon," she said, "and this is Mrs. Kane."

Elise shook hands with Edith and, in the midst of it, gave Nellie a bow slantwise.

"Glad to meet you!" She made the statement include both women.

Edith motioned her to a chair, which she took carelessly, not expecting the resilience of the springs, which let her down too far and bounced her back too high.

"I didn't come to ask for any help"—she began the conversation as she had intended beforehand—"fact is, I came to give some."

She looked at Mrs. Kane and turned again to Edith.

"Could I have a confidential talk with you?" she inquired blandly.

Her skirt was too narrow, and the unexpected action of the chair springs had resulted in lifting it too high. The lack of ease that she felt on his account hurried her to the main point.

Nellie rose at once.

"Why, of course," she said. "I'm going into the music room. Shall I play, Edith?"

"Yes, please."

Miss Mallon turned to Miss Downey with a look of inquiry. Nellie, in the music room, opened the piano and began on "Nights of Gladness." Elise tucked one of her blond locks back up under her little round hat and passed her hand over her right cheek. She was sure the purchased complexion was faultless.

"Suppose I make a little explanation first?" she suggested.

"Why, certainly," Edith agreed, really expecting some preliminary to a request for help of some kind.

"Then, I'll tell you"—Elise leant forward in her chair and became confiding—"I've a lot of heart. You know what I mean, don't you? I'm romantic. I mean I like real romance. It appeals to me. I suppose it appeals to any girl who's got real heart—don't you?"

"Of course." Edith was all encouragement.

"Well, that's me. I'm really romantic. I don't mean any of this mush the men try to hand you, but great, big heart events—the real things in life. They interest me. You take a girl with the right sort of feelings, and she likes love stories and things like that, don't she?"

"Naturally." Miss Mallon was thinking that Miss Downey was paraphrasing in her own language some of the things Mrs. Kane had said.

Elise's words flowed more and more freely. Miss Millon, she decided, was like all other girls—with heart.

"And you can't fool a girl who's like that, can you? I mean her ideas and her intuitions. I've got heart and I've got intuitions. And I know I'm right. Intuitions make up some of this story I've got to tell you. You believe a girl who has real deep feeling knows things, don't you?"

"Yes."

Elise was completely satisfied.

"I knew you would! From all I'd heard about you, I knew you were all right. That's why I came that, and I do love real romance! My name's Elise Downey, and I'm a stenographer in Congressman Mannersley's offices when he's in town."

"Mr. Mannersley's?"

For some reason which she could not explain then or afterward, Edith's attention was caught by the girl in a remarkable manner. She felt at once that what she was about to hear concerned herself nearly.

"Yes, Mr. Mannersley's. That's why I'm here. You know, I know now, just as soon as I've looked at you, there ain't anything to that story about your being in love with him. There ain't—is there?"

Elise's evident and deep concern took out of her question all its impertinence.

Edith smiled.

"No, nothing," she answered.

"I'm so glad!" Elise sighed audibly. "It shows I was right. I tell you, a girl who has heart is almost always right. Now, I'll tell you — there's somebody in this town trying to ruin that Mr. Smith—you know the man they say you're in love with."

"How do you mean — ruin him?" Edith asked the question very slowly.

"There's somebody that knows something about his past."

"Who knows it?" This time it was the older woman who leaned forward.

"A horrid man—a man named Simpson."

"What does he know? Tell me, child, what does he know?"

Elise gave her opinion.

"It's something awful," she said, her doll like eyes looking like moons.

Edith got up and went over and sat down beside her.

"Something awful?" she questioned.

"So awful that it's going to ruin Mr. Smith."

Edith unconsciously grasped her by the arm.

"Tell me! Tell me!" she said, a little fiercely. "What is it?"

While Edith clung to her arm, Elise elaborated her story.

"Mr. Simpson was up in the office looking for Mr Mannersley. He said he had something important to tell Mr. Mannersley. Then he ran into Mr. Mitchell, the whisky man, and I heard him tell Mr. Mitchell he knew who Mr. Smith was. I couldn't hear much because I was over at my desk in the corner and they talked low. Mr. Mitchell looked around in a minute and saw I was listening. So they went into the committee meeting room and had a talk, and then Mr. Mitchell left the Simpson man in there while he went in to talk to Mr. Mannersley. It was the day Mr. Smith came up there—and Mr. Waller was there, and——"

"You say Mr. Waller was there—when?" Edith's brows were drawn together. She was trying to visualize everything Elise was saying.

"Mr. Waller didn't hear any of the conversation. He came in a little ahead of Mr. Smith, but he saw the funny look Simpson gave Mr. Smith when he met him on his way out."

Edith still had hold of the girl's arm.

"Tell me!" she said tensely. "What is it you think this man Simpson knows?"

"It's something about a woman—something disgraceful." Elsie made the statement positively.

"Why do you say that? Tell me! Why do you say that?"

"I caught the word 'woman' and something about 'left' before they went into the next room," Elise explaining how she had worked out her theory. "And—and the rest was intuition—woman's intuition, you see.

For a moment Edith was suspicious. It flashed into her mind that, for some reason, the agitator's enemies wanted to discredit him with her.

"Why have you come to me with this story?" she demanded, shaking Elise's arm.

Elise looked at her in unfeigned amazement.

"Why"—she took a great flight into the high notes—"you and Mr. Smith love one another, don't you?"

Edith still was avid of information.

"And that's why you came to me?"

"Why, of course! Didn't I tell you I liked romance, real romance? Ain't I got a heart, deep feelings, and all that? Everybody knows you're crazy about him. And I don't blame you. His eyes are just dears! And I said to myself you ought to hear this story—and I couldn't go to him. But with you, being a woman, it was different."

"Yes, of course," Edith agreed dully. She was groping for ideas, some thought of what to do or say.

"I know it's important," Elise insisted, "because Mr. Mitchell came to see me day before yesterday and took me out to dinner last night. He bought me three cocktails and wanted to buy me some more, but I wouldn't take 'em. I ain't been under the influence of alcohol—that is, strictly speaking—in all my life."

"What did he want?"

"He wanted to find out what I had heard, how much I had heard, of that talk in the office that day between him and Mr. Simpson. But I was too wise for him. Indeed, I was. You see, as soon as he began talking about it, I knew it must be important. So that made me shut up. I let on that I hadn't heard a word. I thought, as it was important, I ought to tell it to you because you love the man. See?"

"Yes, oh, yes, I see."

It did not occur even in a remote way to Edith to deny or discuss her love for John Smith. All she sensed was that the girl before her had told her a story which might mean his ruin, and here the destruction of their hope of happiness. And blindly, vaguely, the pity of it came home to her. It was as if she had heard the story of a plot to stab a man in the back, to strike him from the dark—a great, strong man who, at that moment, was doing a thing which commanded the attention of the whole country, a thing that must result beneficently for the nation.

"You think," she said, "it is about a woman?"

"Yes. And I think they're going to show him up. That's what I think."

"It may be. It may be."

"I'll tell you why. When I wouldn't tell Mr. Mitchell I had heard anything, he was awful impolite about it, real rude. He said I thought I was awful slick about it, not to tell him everything I'd heard, but there wasn't any use in me thinking I could help anybody else with it. He said if I tried to interfere, it wouldn't matter, because they had the goods on Smith. That was what he said."

Edith took her hand from Elise's arm.

"I think I know what to do," she said, with no great show of confidence. "I think I do. You won't—of course you won't say anything about this to anybody else—anybody else at all?"

The insinuation hurt Elise's pride.

"Don't ask me that!" she answered indignantly. "Have I said anything about it? Didn't I come up here with it because I knew the man loved you, and you loved him?"

"Forgive me," Edith begged anxiously. "I didn't mean that—really."

Elise was mollified.

"It's all right," she smiled. "I'm glad I could do you the favor. I thought you'd know what to do. You know, you can't fool a girl that's got heart—and intuition."

Edith already was making up her mind as to what she should do.

"You don't know where I could—where this Simpson could be found?" she asked.

"No. I haven't seen him since. You might find him in some saloon, I reckon. Maybe Mr. Waller might get hold of him."

That, Edith said, "was what I was thinking."

CHAPTER SIXTEEN.

Bishop Rexall, the head of the biggest diocese of a great church, had been glad to receive Mr. John Smith.

Tell me," he said, "what is it you wish?"

His thin, sensitive lips moved slowly, as if he had learned long ago the power of all spoken words. He drummed lightly on the arm of his chair with his long, slender fingers, and his clear, gray eyes, as he looked at the agitator, were eloquent of wisdom and understanding. In spite of his white hair and his great age, he was strong. His strength was evident even as he sat far down in his chair, so that he seemed to rest on the small of his back, his legs crossed, his right foot moving slowly up and down with the regularity of a pendulum. His benevolence was upon him like a mantle. Any one, upon seeing him, sensed it and knew it, almost as if it had been a tangible, visible thing.

It was within three weeks of the date set for the "prohibition parade"—this being the name the public had given the demonstration. Smith, his wonderful vivacity undiminished by the work he had done and was doing, had come into the room with his accustomed flamelike ardor — and this had suggested to the bishop the atmosphere of youth that always was about John Smith. The older man marvelled that one who seemed so young could have accomplished so much, or could have persuaded others to go with him into the undertaking.

"It is very simple, what I have come to ask," Smith explained. "I am very anxious to have you lead the multitude in prayer, up there on the east steps of the capitol at noon on December 10."

The bishop put the tips of his slender fingers together so that, with his elbows resting on the chair arms, they made a gable over which he looked at the agitator. He smiled gently.

"There will be prayer?" he asked.

"Why, certainly!"

The bishop moved his hands slowly so that the gable divided and then shut again.

GREAT DEMAND FOR CANADIAN LAND

Americans Are Buyers and Coming Settlers—Anxious to Get Cheap and Productive Land.

Reports are to hand that there will be a large influx of settlers from the United States into the Canadian West during the coming Spring. For a time there has been a falling off, on account of the fear of conscription, which of course was not possible, and which the Canadian Government gave every assurance would not be put into operation. In any case it would not affect the American settler, and more than that the man who was working on the farm, helping to produce the grain that goes to feed those who are at war would not be affected.

The excellent yields of the West Canada crops, and the high prices secured is having its influence on those looking for homes. The authentic reports that have been sent out from time to time that this farmer and that farmer had paid for their entire farm holdings out of one crop has reached the ears of the man looking for a farm. When he hears that G. H. Beatty of Nanton, Alberta, had 679 bushels of wheat from 12 acres or an average of 56½ bushels to the acre, he becomes interested. When he learns that Sidney E. Phillips of Beddeford, Alberta, threshed ten hundred and fifty-two bushels of wheat, the average being 52½ bushels per acre, his interest is further aroused. Thos. Long of Lethbridge had 120 bushels of oats to the acre from a field of 25 acres, Jas. Quinn of Milk River had 6,094 bushels of wheat from 100 acres, an average of 60 bushels per acre, and Robt. Tackaberry of Nobleford makes affidavit that he had an average of seventy-six bushels of wheat per acre from a field of 10.63 acres. Thos. Boulton of the same place makes affidavit that from fifty acres he had a yield of fifty-three bushels of wheat per acre. Newell Noble's affidavit of getting 54 bushels per acre from 1,000 acres stands out most strongly as evidence of what the wheat grower can do. This affidavit is strengthened by a paragraph stating that he had 122 bushels and 30 lbs. per acre from 394.69 acres. Mrs. Nancy Coe makes affidavit that on her farm at Nobleford she threshed six thousand one hundred and ten bushels of wheat from one hundred and fifteen acres, or fifty-three bushels and eight lbs. per acre, and from a flax field (stubble field) she got 20 bushels and 38 pounds per acre.

It cannot be said that these were freak yields because so many had such great success. When these reports are read, the man looking for a farm becomes convinced.

These are only a few of the reasons that will cause a large influx of American farmers into the Canadian West during the coming Spring.

The farmers now resident in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta are purchasing additional lands. Prices are low and Free homestead land can be had in many districts and the homesteader is welcome.—Advertisement.

Buddha—One of the ten gates which keep man out of heaven.
Everybody Else—Love.

YES! MAGICALLY! CORNS LIFT OUT WITH FINGERS

You say to the drug store man, "Give me a small bottle of freezone. This will cost very little but positively remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet.

A few drops of this new ether compound applied directly upon a tender aching corn relieves the soreness instantly, and soon the entire corn or callus, root and all, dries up and can be lifted off with the fingers.

This new way to rid one's feet of corns was introduced by a Cincinnati man, who says that freezone dries in a moment, and simply shrivels up any corn or callus without irritating the surrounding skin.

If your druggist hasn't any freezone tell him to order a small bottle for you from his wholesale drug house for you.

To his surprise, Pupley called round with 42 eggs as the result of his hens' first week's exertions. An hour or two after the tradesman had retailed the first of the eggs, he called round on Pupley.

"I'd like to see your hens," he said; "there's something I can't understand about them."

Pupley piloted him down the garden. "There they are," he remarked; "splendid strain. I've given them a good run, you see, but this wet weather they get into a frightful pickle!"

"Oh, that accounts for it," answered his visitor.

"For what?"

English Army Privates Tell of Wonderful Work of American Men in Scaling Wall of Peking During Boxer Rebellion of 1900—Corporal Cude's Story.

(By Harvey Bone.)

Stories of what Americans of the past have accomplished when put into open competition with men of other nations and races, desire for travel, which seems a part of the very being of those born in the great new republic of the west; determination to get away from the restrictions that surround even the most model community life and the spirit of freedom which will not be gainsaid actuate men of the United States to strange things.

It is a far cry from the level, sun kissed plains of southeastern Missouri to the Great wall of ancient China; from the work a day life of the small village of the central west to the mysticism of ancient India; the multi-colored, multi-scented market places of Port Said and Singapore, or Barcelona, yet the trip has been made and the traveler has returned with a great fund of information in his mind, an education that could be secured only through travel, with a portfolio filled with pictures from more than 20 nations; with an independence of action, a bearing that marks for distinction in any gathering, and the mark of knowledge and stability in every movement.

Ease of Traveler.

Today I talked with a young man of 28. He met me with a frank expression a firm grip of the hand, ease of acquaintanceship with many men, and a distinctive personality.

"Cude's my name," was the way he said it, and that expression marks the army man. The civilian usually puts it, "My name is Smith!" or whatever it may be. Not so the army man, he knows what the essential thing in that statement is and acts accordingly.

And so I talked with Corporal Bert Cude, of the Fifteenth United States infantry and I learned more about China, Japan, the Philippines and Hawaii in the next 30 minutes than I had gathered from histories in as many years. Cude had seen and he knew how to tell of what he had seen. He had lived a portion of the events about which he bulded his story and the items were personal to him. They were a part of the great life of a soldier under the stars and stripes.

The army records merely show that Bert Cude enlisted as a private at Fort Leavenworth, and give some meager information concerning his ancestry and where to locate his relatives.

The Records Differ.

The record of achievement tells of Bert Cude traveling in foreign lands, as a soldier of Uncle Sam, helping to maintain the peace and dignity of the world; they tell of him with others guarding a long line of railroad from Tienstein to Chin Wang Tea; of protecting the lives and property of missionaries in the Celestial kingdom; of doing his duty in a blazing sun and doing it cheerfully knowing that eventually comes the reward of labor, or cool nights in the most perfect climate of the world, or recognition of a department of the United States government that never overlooks efficient service and rewards faithful performance of duty.

This is the story of the life of the average man in the United States army. Also it is the story of Bert Cude now attached to the army recruiting station in Sioux City, under Sergeant Charles A. Butler.

"I left the Thirteenth infantry," said Cude, "and went to the Philippines. There I was transferred to the Fifteenth in order to get a chance to see China. I landed in that country in January, 1912 and was there for two years. During that time I served with the armies of a dozen nations that patroled this 180 miles of railroad to the sea keeping it open for traffic at all times."

Sights of Horror.

There were many interesting phases of this work of the soldier. There were trips to the Great wall of China; visits to marble palaces, the steps of anyone of which would furnish sufficient marble to pave the entire length of Fourth street in Sioux City; sights that make the blood run cold, such as the beheading of looters at Tientsin, for the American soldiers were there during the rebellion and looting of 1912 and Cude has seen the freedom possible in few other places than the United States army.

Ask any of these travelers in kahki what they think of the army and men of the armies of other nations and they will tell you of days of riotous pleasure in foreign fields, seldom speaking of the dreary side of life. Somehow they seem to escape all this in the intensity of their love for the service. That is, the successful ones do. The disgruntled, who may be found in all fields of activity, have their customary knocks.

Americans Honored.

It was at Tientsin that Cude found best opportunity to mingle with the men from other nations. First of all, he said he found that these men gave the Americans credit for being the equal of any soldiers on earth, and then he recalled the story of how when the Greek commanders sent their report of the battle of Marathon, they all took first credit and gave second place to Miltiades. When the senate received these reports they declared that Miltiades must have been first.

"Repeatedly we heard the men from these other armies, and especially the Englishmen," said Cude, "speak of the action of the Americans during the Boxer rebellion and they always declared the men from the United States had surpassed all others in that time of trouble. They never tired telling of how a young American had climbed the wall at Peking, in face of what appeared to be certain death, and planted the stars and stripes on the very top, and then leaped back to safety.

Excelled in Athletics.

"While we were together we had athletic competition, at one time a three-day contest, and the Americans won every point. They had badly beaten the English in the tug of war and were pitted against the Italians for the championship. The English naturally rooted for Italy and several fights ensued, but when it was over it was forgotten. The best friends we had in China was an Irish regiment.

In a rifle contest between picked men from the different nations at Tientsin in 1912 Cude was present when the match was pulled off and saw sharp shooters from the United States take the first 19 places. Cude has been awarded the sharpshooter's medal for his ability.

One feature of the life in China that impressed the American soldiers was that two of them could pool their expense and secure a Chinese coolie to do their camp work for $4.50 a month, American money. There were many instances where the soldiers of Uncle Sam were waited upon by men who had university educations but who, through the customs of their native land, could never be anything but menials.

"What was the most remarkable thing I saw in China?

"The great wall! I started where this wall begins at Shan Hai Kuan and followed it for miles. It is still intact in nearly every particular and is of a construction that now is among the lost arts."

To learn if this travel had the educational value claimed for it and whether men enlisted merely for adventure and travel, I questioned Cude and discovered that his mind was alert for information at all times.

"Chop Suey" American.

He told me of how on getting to China he had discovered that "chop suey" was not originally a Chinese dish at all, but that it had been first put on the market in San Francisco, although the discoverer was a Chinaman. The name is meaningless enough, signifying merely meat and water.

"A Chinaman of China very rarely tastes beef," said the corporal. "Not only is the religious influence of the Buddhist against the eating of any beast of burden, but there is not enough grazing land in the empire to make it possible to raise this animal for consumption.

"Another peculiar thing is that most travelers rank the Chinaman as second to the French in preparing good things to eat. In the ability to prevent waste, the Chinaman is without a rival anywhere. Of course, the peasantry of China does not share in this cooking triumph. A peasant is glad to get the meat of a donkey, horse, dog, or camel, nor does he scruple to know just when, where or how the animal died. Any animal which has died of old age is considered most wholesome.

No "Bone Dishes."

"At a Chinese dinner I was surprised to see that the Chinaman beside me had no bones in front of him, and while I was wondering how he had learned to digest them, I discovered that he had been putting them on the floor behind him. When I saw this I proceeded to empty the pockets where I had been storing mine.

"Among the delicacies of China are almonds, parched watermelon seeds, spare ribs covered with a coating of molasses sugar, chicken liver and century eggs. The restaurateur could prove the eggs were 100 years old, but a conservative estimate would have placed them at 4 or 5.

Preserving Eggs.

"These eggs had been prepared originally by being slacked in lime. This preparation was left around them until they were ready to serve and prevented any decay. Both the yolk and white were green when served and the white was transparent. They tasted very little different from ordinary boiled eggs.

"The Chinese have many peculiarities. Once when I attempted to photograph one of them he hid behind his pile of wood and never would have come to the surface had I not desisted and passed on."

In four years of time Corporal Cude has been in Japan, China, Guam, the Philippines, Singapore, Port Said, the Greek archipelago, Malta, Gibraltar, Barcelona, Plymouth and other points in England and back to the United States.

Should war come Cude believes the number of enlistments would be such that it would surprise even the most antagonistic to the present military system. He sees visions of a great army, rising over night to enter the service of the country, to go to any length, to perform any duty, and to make any sacrifice for the U. S. A.

URGE LANGUAGE STUDY.

London, (by mail).—The London newspapers are again urging British politicians and lawmakers to "learn to speak a few foreign languages." It is remarked that one serious disqualification of Premier Lloyd-George at the Rome conference was his inability to speak French.

"It is simply a necessity for British statesmen and diplomats to extend their linguistic attainments," says the Globe. "It has been made painfully evident that as a nation we are not educated up to the continental standard in this matter. Knowledge of tongues will become increasingly necessary if we are to take our proper place in the affairs of the continent."

Sandbagging the "Dry" Amendment.

From the Minneapolis Journal.

The prohibition question is a big, vital question. The people of Minnesota are entitled to a chance to settle it alone, without the intrusion of other controversional matters. The legislature has voted to submit a "bone dry" amendment to the people at the election of November, 1918.

Now comes the house, and by a heavy majority votes to submit also the suffrage amendment. The significant thing about this proceeding was the affirmative vote of a number of members who are known to be opposed to both prohibition and suffrage.

The plot is plain enough. The liquor interests are hoping to kill off prohibition with suffrage. They know that submission of both amendments means a complication of questions and a hurt to both causes. They hope in this way to put off the day still farther when Minnesota will cast out the saloon.

But the people of Minnesota are getting mighty tired of the liquor interests' inveterate habit of meddling underhandedly with public affairs.

The house has been fooled, but the senate will vote with its eyes open. It should postpone suffrage submission, so that the prohibition issue may be simple and clean-cut.

This is what the wiser of the suffragists want, and the stand of the Minnesota Equal Suffrage association relieves those senators who are committed to suffrage from the necessity of helping the saloon scheme along.

All Mixed Up.

They were dancing the one step. The music was heavenly. The swish of her silken skirts was divine. The fragrance of the roses upon her bosom was intoxicating.

"Ah," she smiled sweetly, with an arch look up into his face, "you remind me of one of Whitman's poems."

A sudden dizziness seemed to seize him. It was as if he were floating in a dream. When he had sufficiently gained his breath he spoke:

"Which one?"

"Oh, any one," she replied. "The feet are mixed in all of them."

Preparedness.

Healthy Skin Depends On Kidneys

The skin and the intentines, which work together with the kidneys to throw out the poisons of the body, do a part of the work, but a clean body and a healthy one depends on the kidneys. If the kidneys are clogged with toxic poisons you suffer from stiffness in the knees in the morning on arising, your joints seem "rusty," you may have rheumatic pains, pain in the back, stiff neck, headaches, sometimes swollen feet, or neuralgic pains—all due to the uric acid or toxic poisons in the blood. This is the time to go to the nearest drug store and simply obtain a 50c. package of Anuric (double or triple strength), the discovery of Dr. Pierce of Buffalo, N. Y. Then drink a cup of hot water before meals, with an Anuric Tablet, and notice the gratifying results. You will find Anuric more active than lithia.

For Hang-on Coughs, Colds

Omaha, Neb.—"All of last winter I was just about down and out with a heavy cold on my lungs that the old-fashioned home remedies I had been accustomed to taking did not seem to touch. I was just about to send for the doctor when my brother advised me to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I only took the one bottle, but it certainly did give me wonderful relief and I believe saved me from a siege of pneumonia. My people have used Dr. Pierce's remedies for more than twenty years and consider them to be most reliable."—MRS. CORA E. JOHNSTON, 2406 I St.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery contains no alcohol, no narcotic. Is put up in both liquid and tablets and is to be found in all drug stores.

If not obtainable at your dealer's send $1.00 to Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., and he will mail large package of tablets.

His Move Next.

A woman in a railway waiting room the other day had a great deal of trouble with one of her children, a boy of seven or eight, and a man who sat near her stood it as long as possible and then observed:

"Madam, that boy of yours needs the strong hand of a father."

"Yes, I know it," she replied, "but he can't have it. His father died when he was six years of age, and I've done my best to get another husband and failed. He can't have what I can't get."

Cross Andes in Balloon.

The mighty Andean mountain range of South America, the highest in the western hemisphere, has just been crossed by aeronauts for the first time. The feat was accomplished by two men in a balloon. The aeronauts left Santiago, Chile, on the Pacific side, and descended five hours later in Mendoza, on the eastern slope of the range, in the Argentine Republic. They reported a very difficult trip, and had to rise to a great height to catch a favorable air current. So far the Andes have not been crossed by airplane.

You Can Make Excellent Cake With Fewer Eggs

Just use an additional quantity of Royal Baking Powder, about a teaspoon, in place of each egg omitted.

This applies equally well to nearly all baked foods. Try the following recipe according to the new way:

CREAM LAYER CAKE

Old Way	New Way
1 cup sugar	1 cup sugar
½ cup milk	1 cup milk
2 cups flour	2 cups flour
2 teaspoons Royal Baking Powder	4 teaspoons Royal Baking Powder
2 eggs	1 egg
½ cup shortening	2 tablespoons shortening
1 teaspoon flavoring	1 teaspoon flavoring

Makes 1 Large 2-Layer Cake

DIRECTIONS—Cream the sugar and shortening together, then mix in the egg. After sifting the flour and Royal Baking Powder together, two or three times, add it all to the mixture. Gradually add the milk and beat with spoon until you have a smooth pour batter. Add the flavoring. Pour into greased layer cake tins and bake in a moderately hot oven for twenty minutes. This cake is best baked in two layers. Put together with cream filling and spread with white icing.

Canada Offers 160 Acres Free to Farm Hands

Bonus of Western Canada Land to Men Assisting in Maintaining Needed Grain Production

The demand for farm labor in Canada is great. As an inducement to secure the necessary help at once, Canada will give

ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY ACRES OF LAND FREE AS A HOMESTEAD

and allow the time of the farm laborer, who has filed on the land, to apply as residence duties, the same as if he actually had lived on it. Another special concession is the reduction of one year in the time to complete duties. Two years instead of three as heretofore, but only to men working on the farms for at least six months in 1917. This appeal for farm help is in no way connected with enlistment for military service but solely to increase agricultural output. A wonderful opportunity to secure a farm and draw good wages at the same time. Canadian Government will pay all fare over one cent per mile from St. Paul or Duluth to Canadian destination. Information as to low railway rates may be had on application to

Uncle Sam Will Not Steal

The goverment of the United States thru its constituted authorities, has announced that bank deposits belonging to foreigners will not be seized. The announcement says, "the government o the United States will, in no circumstances, take advantage of the state of war to take possession of property to which international understanding and the recognized law of the land give it no just claim or title. It will scrupulously respect all private rights alike of its own citizens and of the subjects of foreign states."

Many Germans living in the United Staes, knowing what the German Imperial government has done with deposits in Belgium, have had great fears lest the government of the United States be guilty of what the Imperial government of Germany has been guilty

All Germans and all other people will discover that when Uncle Sam fights he fights with clean hands. He does not confiscate bank accounts. He even permits aliens to abuse him in his own country.

This war may show the differences between a republic and an autocracy like the Imperial government of Germany, when it is a question of human rights —Capital.

Roll of Honor

Following are those who have paid their subscription to this paper since the last report was made. While the list may seem quite large it is not satisfactory to us and in order to keep our list from getting more delinquent should contain twice as many names. There are a large number on our list who are in arrears and we kindly ask them to call in and settle or mail us their remittance at their earliest convenience. We heartily thank those who have responded. Surely with the present high prices of products our farmers are able to take care of this account. Remember that the high prices effect us as well as you.

He Had a Good Sale

The man who had the biggest sale of the season anywhere in Calhoun or Pocohontas counties, came into this office one day last week with $148.30 for the advertising and printing he had done at this office to give publicity to his sale. He remarked that he was well pleased with both the advertising and the printing and would have been willing to pay more for it, as "it did the business and that's what I was after." Success in merchandising of any kind, can only be obtained by using printer's ink.—Manson Democrat.

Potatoes

The lowly "spud" is posing in the center of the spotlight these days and become a topic of all-absorbing interest. Also the subject of much conjecture and mis-statements galore. One can hear the most extravagant tales of alleged stocks of potatoes in storage at various places in the country, held by the unscrupulous speculator for the purpose of forcing prices to still higher notches. It is perfectly safe to brand all such chimerical tales as counterfeit, utterly without foundation.

The fact is—as repeatedly pointed that the immutable law of supply and demand is alone responsible for the potato situation today. It has been three years since Uncle Sam's great potato fields turned out a normal crop of tubers. And in the meantime the nations of Europe have been too busy shooting each other up to hoe potatoes and pick potato bugs. All of which means a marked reduction in the world's supply.

A few days ago A. R. Corey, secretary of the Iowa Department of Agriculture, received a telegram from a committee appointed by the mayor of New York City to investigate the food supply, asking for the names of Iowa growers of potatoes having large stocks on hand. The sceretary could not comply with the request for the good and sufficient reason that there are no large stocks of potatoes in Iowa.

Ordinarily Iowa's potato crop amounts to ten million or twelve million bushels. That might be called a normal yield. The average for the last twenty years is 10,000,500 bushels. The last normal crop was harvested in 1912, and amounted to 12,904,500 bushels. The following year, 1913, it dropped to 5,532,170 bushels. The crop of 1914 and 1915 were 9,540,000 and 8,002,000 bushels respectively, while last year the yield slumped to 4,287,000, the lightest in twenty years or more. The fact that the same condition of below-normal crops prevails in all the states that grow potatoes on a large scale is sufficient reason for the abnormal situation and soaring values. If ever the country needed a favorable year for potatoes it is this year of 1917.

Our Sentiments Too

The Herald is informed that it is to lose some subscribers for standing for pure unadulterated Americanism. The subscriber that would cancel a subscription in this time of strife because the paper stood up for the United States, not for the Kaiser, is little short of a traitor. If there is in this grand and noble land any individuals who are in love with the Kaiser or any other foreign ruler, king, czar, emperor or sultan, then we say, cancel your subscription and take the first boat for the country to which you pay allegience. The Hearld is not pro-Ally, nor it it pro-German. It is purely American, first last and all the time. It will follow the Stars and Stripes against any fanatic who attempts to make light of it, no matter what end, and the simpleton that wants to cancel a subscription for this is welcome to do so but not without having "TRAITOR" attached to their name.—Murray County Herald.

EVERY IOWA MAYOR TO AID RECRUITING

"Big Drive" Is Begun to Bring Iowa's Quota of Troops Into Ranks.

Des Moines, Ia., April 7.—Every mayor of Iowa went on recruiting duty today to increase the enlistment of the Iowa National Guard by 4,000 more men, at the request of Gov W L Harding

A letter signed by the governor went to 700 mayors in as many cities, calling upon them to rally their officials and patriotic citizens about them and hold meetings and aid in every way possible so that the ranks of Iowa's guard may be quickly filled and the state send its first line troops into the field for active service

The letter to 700 mayors last night is in addition to the call on 24 mayors in towns in Second and Third regiment territory which was sent out by the governor Tuesday It will make every city and town in Iowa a rallying point for recruits

To avoid confusion the mayors of the cities and towns in Second and Third regiment cavalry and artillery, territory have been asked to communicate with the nearest mustering officer a list being furnished with the governor's letter

Mayors in other territory have been asked to get the signatures of recruits on informal lists to be sent to the adjutant general at Des Moines who will then instruct the mayors where men should report for muster in

Not since the civil war and perhaps not even then has there been such a drive for troops as has been started by the adjutant general's office and it is estimated that the mayors by prompt action can fill the ranks of the guard in a very few days

It is emphasized that the call is for prompt immediate action Preliminaries are to be dispensed with Meetings are to be held in every city and town in Iowa big enough to have a city or town government and the young men asked to enroll Local speakers will explain the needs of the hour local musicians will furnish patriotic music The mayors or their representatives who preside at the meeting will call for recruits who will then be sent to the nearest recruiting officer to enlist

Quick prompt action is expected and as it becomes generally known that the Iowa guard and the regular army will be first in the field the only trained troops the nation has for first line defense hundreds of young men will rally to the colors

IOWA RISK CONCERNS WILL HOLD MEETING

Seek Exemption From Liability on Soldiers—Use "War Rider" Plan

Des Moines, Ia., April 7.—Presidents and other representatives of the life insurance companies with home offices in Des Moines will meet at the chamber of commerce today to consider war measures and the adoption of a uniform "war rider" to be added to all policies issued during the war

So far none of the companies are issuing regular war riders with the policies Several however, place a condition upon the validity of the insured that he shall not go to war within one year of the date of issuance

The step contemplated by the local companies is in accord with that taken by most of the eastern companies Most of the latter are now requiring that the insured shall not go to war or enter the war zones without the permission of the company and that this permission shall be given only upon payment of an increased premium.

Others are making no restrictions upon military service for applicants who are civilians at the time of the issuance of the policy but for militiamen are requiring the payment of two years premiums in advance and accepting them as risks only up to $2,500 No disability benefits are given on these policies

2,000 Ames Students May Start Training on Campus

Ames, Ia., April 7.—Ames student troops which could easily number 2,000 in a day, want permission to go into training camp here on the campus so they can finish the college year

Adjutant General Logan will grant permission to organize two troops of cavalry and a company of engineers. Seniors enlisting before commencement will get diplomas Greater vigilance regarding the powerful wireless station here and all military property of the state is urged by Commandant Lincoln

Great Enthusiasm Is Shown at Fort Dodge

Fort Dodge, Ia., April 7.—Enlistments here are rapid Twenty-five hundred people attended a big rally in the armory Wednesday evening Mayor John Ford and Robert Healy urged enlistments Thirty Fort Dodge boys joined the colors The only son of Mayor Ford has enlisted There was much enthusiasm and flags every place The German school and all German merchants are flying American flags.

Webster City Will Hold Big Rally Saturday Night

Webster City, Ia., April 7.—Mayor R. G Clark, of this city, today issued a proclamation calling for a mass meeting at the armory Saturday night. It will be a patriotic meeting for the purpose of stimulating enlistments. A half dozen or more local men will speak. Enlistments are going forward here very satisfactorily.

Iowa Bank Is Robbed by Yeggman Single Handed

Creston, Ia., April 6.—The police are searching for a robber who late yesterday entered the First National bank at Dingonal Ia, and after forcing the cashier and his wife into the vault fled with more than $600.

Good Roads Boosters to Lay Out New State Trail

Pierre, S. D., April 6.—Representatives from 21 towns are here boosting good roads in general and the Black and Yellow trail in particular. T. B. Roberts, of Pierre, has been elected chairman and O M Phelps, of Huron, secretary of the organization. A resolution to incorporate the Black and Yellow Trail association, with headquarters at Pierre, was adopted. This trail is a general highway through the central portion of the state west from Chicago through Huron, Pierre and Rapid City

EVANS BOOK BILL IS KILLED BY SENATORS

Measure to Permit Townships to Select Text Books Laid to Rest.

Des Moines, April 7.—The Evans bill to establish a system of township selection of school books, was defeated in the Iowa senate yesterday by a vote of 34 to 8.

The bill was attacked on the ground that it would do away with county uniformity of school books now established in about 58 counties of Iowa Opponents of the bill charged that the bill would throw the state open to the school book trust Friends of the measure charged that the present system operates to the advantage of the trust.

Senator Evans made a strong appeal for a change in the present system of selecting school books. He declared that the township rural schools are discriminated against at present. He said that a town school district might select its own school books, while a rural district with twice the number of pupils as the town, can not have the same privilege.

Opponents of the measure amended the bill so as to permit county uniformity to remain in the counties where it is now in effect Then to make the work more effective, the senate killed the bill entirely

Farm Committee Named by Governor Harding

Des Moines, Ia., April 7.—Governor Harding yesterday announced the personnel of the committee of 12 under the direction of Pres. R A Pearson, president of the Iowa State college, to have charge of the campaign in Iowa to increase food production as a measure of preparedness.

The appropriations committees of the Iowa senate and house are already considering the recommendation of the farm conference held in the governor's office Tuesday, that an appropriation of $100,000 be made for 1917 and a similar amount for 1918 to be used in promoting the food production campaign in Iowa

The committee announced by the governor yesterday is composed of the following

President Raymond A Pearson, of Ames chairman

J F Deems, of Burlington first district

J O Shaff of Camanche second district

Peder Pederson of Cedar Falls third district

D H Culver of Clear Lake fourth district

George Burgess of Mount Vernon fifth district

I N Taylor of Oskaloosa sixth district

Henry Brady, of Perry seventh district

W. H Buck of Mount Ayr eighth district

C W Hunt of Logan ninth district

War Fever Brings Many Recruits at Webster City

Webster City, Ia., April 7.—The total of new enlistments for Company C of the Second regiment in this city have reached 20 Five young men from the best families of Radcliffe enlisted in a body today Major Philpot of Fort Dodge, who was here today says enlistments in Webster City are far ahead of most other towns Only 16 more men are now needed to bring Company C up to the required strength

Harding Turned Down on Rail Valuation Fund

Des oMines, Ia., April 7.—Governor Harding's request of the legislature for an appropriation to be expended under his direction to check the valuation of Iowa railroads which the Interstate Commerce commission is making was turned down by the senate appropriations committee yesterday.

The original request of the governor was for $100,000 Recently he has appeared before both house and senate appropriations committees and stated that he had decided $40,000 was enough

COUNCIL BLUFFS.—Mrs Beesh Copp, wife of the publisher of the Mondamin Enterprise, is in a local hospital receiving treatment for a fractured skull Mrs Copp was a member of a party who were driving from Mondamin to Omaha in an automobile Mrs Copp alighted to recover her hat and in the darkness was run over by the automobile, which was being backed up

CEDAR RAPIDS.—The grand lodge Degree of Honor now in annual session at Shenandoah, has decided to remove headquarters from Shenandoah to Cedar Rapids The news caused great clatter in business circles This place won out by over a two-thirds vote

DUBUQUE.—A few weeks ago Dubuque voted to issue bonds in the sum of $50,000 to build a new high school A technical error has been found requiring another election which is being arranged for to be held as soon as possible The measure carried overwhelmingly

MARSHALLTOWN.—So anxious was William J O'Brien aged 19, to enlist in the regular army that he walked all the way from Boone to this city and made application before the local recruiting station He was accepted

FONDA.—At a meeting of the school board here Supt. Charles H. Tye was reelected as superintendent of the Fonda schools for the coming year, at an increase of $100 per year

SANBORN.—Mayor J. H McNeill is making inquiry with the view to purchasing discarded army rifles for drill purposes for the troops that are being organized in Sanborn

MOST AMERICANS OUT.

Washington, D. C., April 5.—Practically all Americans desiring to leave now are out of Germany. Minister Stovall at Berne, Switzerland, reported that only a few relief workers submitting to the stipulated news quarantine and the German-Americans who have stayed by choice are left under German authority. This does not take into account, however, the American sailors taken to a German port by the raider Moewe and held as prisoners of war.

The darkness "over all the land" (Mathew xxvii. 45), attending the crucifixion, has been attributed to an eclipse.

Cinnamon was imported into Palestine by the Phoenicians and Arabians. It is now found in Sumatra, Borneo and China, but of the best quality in Ceylon

No historical account of an eclipse of the sun occurs in the bible, but there are passages in the prophets which contain manifest allusion to this phenomenon.

SENATE WOULD STOP CAPITOL EXTENSION

Upper House Votes to Cut Out Tax—Would Divert Money to War Fund.

Des Moines, Ia., April 5.—An appeal for economy in taxation in view of war conditions, presented to the Iowa senate by Senators Whitmore and Ball yesterday afternoon, shifted the equilibrium in the senate on the capitol extension tax questions, and brought home enough votes to repeal the capitol extension tax for improvement of the capitol grounds

The bill got 26 votes, just the number necessary to pass.

It now goes to the house, where, unless conditions change materially as a result of the war, it is doomed to defeat A similar proposition has already been defeated in the house.

Senators Whitmore and Ball led the attack upon the capitol extension tax while Senators Kimball and Newberry defended the levy

In answering Newberry's argument that the erection of a new temple of justice was necessary to properly protect the state law library Senator Ball called attention to the more urgent necessity of making provision for national defense

"Where are the libraries of Belgium?" he asked We are now here while armed guards pace the walks before the capitol defending us from any such disaster as that which occurred at the Canadian capitol at Ottawa only a year ago when the building was dynamited while parliament was in session"

The roll call on the bill was as follows

Ayes Ball Brosam Chase Coburn Foster Frames Gibson Greene Hale Haskell Holdoegel, Kingland Laffer Lecompte Lindly Lytle Mitchell Price Ratcliff Rule, Schrup Smith Thompson Voorhees White Whitmore 26

Nays Adams Arney Balkema, Byington Caswell Edwards, Enger Evans Fellows Fockett Grout Helmer, Henigbaum Kimball Newberry, Parker Proudfoot Stephenson, Taylor VanAlstine Wilson 21

The senate has already passed a bill providing for the construction of a temple of justice from the funds raised by the capitol extension tax Both bills will be up for action in the house soon, and a lively scrap is in prospect

Asks $100,000 to Press Food Crop Production

Des Moines, Ia., April 6.—Record production that the Iowa legislature make an emergency appropriation of $100,000 for 1917 and an equal amount for 1918 to be used in the campaign to increase the food production of Iowa under the supervision of the extension department of the Iowa State college was made by the conference of leading men of the state held at the state house yesterday at the call of Governor Harding

President R A Pearson of the Iowa State college was named chairman of a committee which will consist of one member from each congressional district the committee to organize the farmers of the 99 counties in the interest of food conservation and increased production

Torrens Land Title Act Passed by Iowa Senate

Des Moines, Ia., April 6.—Passage of an optional form of the Torrens title registration law by the Iowa legislature seems probable following action of the senate yesterday in passing the Torrens bill presented by the committee on land titles

The vote was 37 to 9 A strong sentiment in favor of the bill has developed in the house where the bill has so far been held up in committee

As passed the measure would permit the individual counties to put the Torrens plan into effect

Instead of following the present abstract system, a certificate would be granted by the district court declaring that the title to the property in question was good and all future transfers would be based upon this certificate instead of by an abstract The certificate in itself would be evidence of the validity of title

U. S. READY FOR CONFLICT OFFICERS SAY

Washington, D. C., April 7.—Actual and potential resources which, all told, probably never have been equaled by any other nation in the history of the world, are brought into the great war under the American flag.

Into the balance against Germany are thrown a navy in strength and efficiency among the foremost afloat, an army comparatively small, but highly efficient, backed by a citizenry of upward of 20,000,000 capable of military duty, industrial resources incomparably the greatest in the world, already mobilized for public service, and the moral force of more than 100,000,000 Americans awakened to their country's peril and united behind their president with a patriotic fervor reincarnating the spirit of 1776

Although much remains to be done, officials believe the nation's destinies are secure now, no matter how stubborn or prolonged may be the pressure of German militarism or how wide the scope of German intrigue The slowly maturing preparedness sentiment has borne fruit in military naval and industrial preparations which have already put the United States on a defense basis not even hoped for two years ago

Navy Strong, Growing.

The navy, always the first line of defense has cleared its decks of antiquated incumbrances has added new units modernized to meet the German tactics and the patriotic cooperation of ship and motor builders is hurrying to completion other mighty fighting craft that will be the last word in power and efficiency

Authorized but 10 days ago to recruit to the full war strength of 87,000 men, the navy already has almost attained the total To provide additional officers a class of midshipmen has been graduated three months ahead of its time.

A newly organized coast patrol of submarine chasers is on duty and hundreds of small craft to augment it are under construction

Army and Navy Plans.

Democratic Leader Kitchin and [illegible] Jeanette Rankin, the new woman member from Montana were two of the [illegible] who voted negatively After failing [illegible] arrive to the calling of her name [illegible] on the first roll call Miss Rankin [illegible] on the second roll was [illegible] obviously badly frightened and with [illegible] sob in her voice declared:

"I want to stand by my country, but I cannot vote for war."

Still she did not formally cast [illegible] vote, and half a dozen of her colleagues, wearied by the protracted debate, demanded "vote." In response to the voice connection with the [illegible] into her seat, Miss Rankin whispered [illegible] Jerry Sloth, chief clerk went to her seat to corroborate her vote.

A majority of those who opposed the resolution, including Mr. Kitchin, declared that once it was passed they would support it without reservation The House will not meet again until Monday next.

Woman Member Cries.

Miss Rankin, of Montana, the only woman member of congress, when through the first roll call with bowed head, failing to answer to her name twice called by the clerk

On the second roll call she rose and said in a sobbing voice "I want to stand by my country, but I cannot vote for war." For a moment then she remained standing, supporting herself against a desk, and as cries of "Vote, vote," came from several parts of the House, she sank back into her seat without voting audibly She was recorded in the negative

Those Against It.

GERMAN SUB POLICY IS WARFARE AGAINST MANKIND, WILSON TELLS CONGRESS IN DEMANDING ACTION

Washington, April 3. President Wilson has asked congress to declare a state of war existing between the United States and Germany. While the news of the submarining of the steamer Aztec the first American armed ship to sail into the war zone was being told from mouth to mouth in the capitol, the president, appearing before the House and Senate in joint session, asked congress to recognize and deal with Germany's warfare on America.

The president said war with Germany would involve practically cooperation with the governments now at war with Germany, including advances of financial credits. He urged the raising of 500,000 men, and universal military service. The president made it clear that no action was being taken against the Austrian government and the other nations allied with Germany.

President Wilson spoke as follows:

"I have called the congress into extraordinary session because there are very serious changes of policy to be made, and made immediately, which it was neither right nor constitutionally permissible that I should assume the responsibility of making.

"On the 3rd of February last I officially laid before you the extraordinary announcement of the imperial German government that on and after the first day of February it was its purpose to put aside all restraints of law or of humanity, and use its submarines to sink every vessel that sought to approach either the ports of Great Britain and Ireland, or the western coasts of Europe, or any of the ports controlled by the enemies of Germany within the Mediterranean.

"It has seemed to be the object of the German submarine warfare earlier in the war, but since April of last year the imperial government had somewhat restrained the commanders of its undersea craft in conformity with its promise then given to us that passenger boats should not be sunk, and that due warning would be given to all other vessels which its submarines might seek to destroy when no resistance was offered or escape attempted, and care taken that their crews were given at least a fair chance to save their lives in their open boats. The precautions taken were meager and haphazard enough, as was proved in distressing instance after instance in the progress of the cruel and unmanly business, but a certain degree of restraint was observed.

"The new policy has swept every restriction aside. Vessels of every kind whatever their flag, their character, their cargo, their destination, their errand, have been ruthlessly sent to the bottom without warning and without thought of help or mercy for those on board, the vessels of friendly neutrals along with those of belligerents.

"Even hospital ships and ships carrying relief to the sorely bereaved and stricken people of Belgium, though the latter were provided with safe conduct through the proscribed areas by the German government itself, and were distinguished by unmistakable marks of identity, have been sunk with a reckless lack of compassion or principle.

"I was a little while unable to believe that such things would in fact be done by any government that had hitherto subscribed to the humane practices of civilized nations. International law had its origin in the attempt to set up some law, which would be respected and observed upon the seas where no nation had right of domination and where lay the free highways of the world. By painful stage after stage has the law been built up with meager enough results, indeed, after all was accomplished that could be accomplished, but always with a clear view, at least, of what the heart and conscience of mankind demanded.

"This minimum of right the German government has swept aside under the plea of retaliation and necessity, and because it had no weapons which it could use at sea except these, which it is impossible to employ as it is employing them, without throwing to the winds all scruples of humanity or of respect for the understandings that were supposed to underlie the intercourse of the world.

"I am not now thinking of the loss of property involved, immense and serious as that is, but only of the wanton and wholesale destruction of the lives of noncombatants, men, women and children, engaged in pursuits which have always, even in the darkest periods of modern history, been deemed innocent and legitimate. Property can be paid for; the lives of peaceful and innocent people cannot be.

WAR AGAINST MANKIND

"The present German submarine warfare against commerce is a warfare against mankind. It is a war against all nations. American ships have been sunk, American lives taken, in ways which it has stirred us very deeply to learn of, but the ships and people of other neutral and friendly nations have been sunk and overwhelmed in the waters in the same way.

"There has been no discrimination. The challenge is to all mankind. Each nation must decide for itself how it will meet it. The choice we make for ourselves must be made with a moderation of counsel and a temperateness of judgment befitting our character and our motives as a nation. We must put excited feelings away. Our motive will not be revenge or the victorious assertion of the physical might of the nation, but only the vindication of right, of human right, of which we are only a single champion.

SUBMARINES OUTLAWS.

"When I addressed the congress on the 26th of February last, I thought that it would suffice to assert our neutral rights with arms, our right to use the seas against unlawful interference, our right to keep our people safe against unlawful violence. But armed neutrality, it now appears, is impracticable. Because submarines are, in effect, outlaws, when used as the German submarines have been used against merchant shipping, it is impossible to defend ships against their attacks as the law of nations has assumed that merchantment would defend themselves against privateers or cruisers, visible craft, giving chase upon the open sea. It is common prudence in such circumstances—grim necessity, indeed—to endeavor to destroy them before they have shown their own intention. They must be dealt with upon sight, if dealt with at all.

"The German government denies the right of neutrals to use arms at all within the areas of the sea, which it has proscribed, even in the defense of rights which no modern publicist has ever before questioned their right to defend. The intimation is conveyed that the armed guards which we have placed on our merchant ships will be treated as beyond the pale of law and subject to be dealt with as pirates would be. Armed neutrality is ineffectual enough at best! in such circumstances and in the face of such pretentions it is worse than ineffectual; it is likely once to produce what it was meant to prevent; it is practically certain to draw us into the war without either the rights or the effectiveness of belligerents.

"There is one choice we cannot make, we are incapable of making: We will not choose the path of submission and suffer the most sacred rights of our nation and our people to be ignored or violated. The wrongs against which we now array ourselves are not common wrongs; they cut to the very roots of human life.

"With a profound sense of the solemn and even tragical character of the step I am going to take and of the grave responsibilities which it involves, but in unhesitating obedience to what I deem my constitutional duty, I advise that the congress declare the recent course of the imperial German government to be in fact nothing less than war against the government and people of the United States, that it formally accept the status of belligerents, which has thus been thrust upon it, and that it take immediate steps not only to put the country in a more thorough state of defense, but also to exert all its power and employ all its resources to bring the government of the German empire to terms and end the war.

ASKS HUGE ARMED FORCE.

"What this will involve is clear. It will involve the utmost practical cooperation in council and in action with the governments now at war with Germany and, as incident to that, the extension to these governments of the most liberal financial credits, in order that our resources may, so far as possible, be added to theirs. It will involve the organization and mobilization of all the material resources of the country to supply the materials of war and serve the incidental needs of the nation in the most abundant, and yet the most economical and efficient way possible. It will involve the immediate full equipment of the navy in all respects, but particularly in supplying it with the best means of dealing with the enemy's submarines. It will involve the immediate addition to the armed forces of the United States already provided for by law in case of war, of at least 500,000 men, who should, in my opinion, be chosen upon the principle of universal liability to service, and also the authorization of subsequent additional increments of equal force so soon as they may be needed and can be handled in training.

"It will involve, also, of course, the granting of adequate credits to the government sustained, I hope, so far as they can equitably be sustained, by the present generation by well conceived taxation I say sustained so far as may be equitable by taxation, because it seems to me that it would be most unwise to base the credits, which will now be necessary, entirely on money borrowed. It is our duty, I must respectfully urge, to protect our people so far as we may against the very serious hardships and evils which would be likely to arise out of the inflation which would be produced by vast loans.

"In carrying out the measures by which these things are to be accomplished, we should keep constantly in mind the wisdom of interfering as little as possible in our own preparation and in the equipment of our own military forces with the duty—for it will be a very practical duty—of supplying the nations already at war with Germany with the materials which they can obtain only from us or by our assistance. They are in the field and we should help them in every way to be effective there.

MAKES MOTIVES CLEAR.

"I shall take the liberty of suggesting, through the several executive departments of the government, for the consideration of your committees, measures for the accomplishment of the several objects I have mentioned. I hope that it will be your pleasure to deal with them as having been framed after very careful thought by the branch of the government upon which the responsibility of conducting the war and safeguarding the nation will most directly fall.

"While we do these things, these deeply momentous things, let us be very clear, to all the world what our motives and what our objects are. My own thought has not been driven from its habitual and normal course by the unhappy events of the last two months and I do not believe that the thought of the nation has been altered or clouded by them.

WORLD FREEDOM INVOLVED.

"I have exactly the same things in mind now, that I had in mind when I addressed the Senate on the 22nd of January last, the same that I had in mind when I addressed the congress on the 3rd of February and on the 26th of February. Our object now as then is to vindicate the principles of peace and justice in the life of the world against selfish and autocratic power and to set up among the really free and self governed people of the world such a concert of purpose and action as will henceforth insure the observance of those principles.

"Neutrality is no longer feasible or desirable where the peace of the world is involved and the freedom of its peoples; and the menace to that peace and freedom lies in the existence of autocratic governments backed by the will of their people. We have seen the last of neutrality in such circumstances.

NO QUARREL WITH PEOPLE.

"We are at the beginning of an age in which it will be insisted that the same standards of conduct and of responsibility for wrong done shall be observed among nations and their governments that are observed among the individual citizens of civilized states.

"We have no quarrel with the German people, we have no feeling towards them but one of sympathy and friendship. It was not on their impulse that their government acted in entering this war. It was not with their previous knowledge or approval.

"The war was determined upon as wars used to be determined in the old unhappy days when peoples were not consulted by their rulers and wars were provoked in the interest of dynasties or little groups of ambitious men who were accustomed to use their fellow men as pawns and tools.

CITES CUNNING AGGRESSION.

"Self governed nations do not fill their neighbor states with spies or set courses of intrigue to bring about some critical posture of affairs which will give them a chance to strike and make conquest.

"Such designs can only be worked under cover and when no one has the right to ask questions.

"Cunningly contrived plans of aggression, carried, it may be, from generation to generation can be worked out and kept from the light only within the privacy of courts or behind the carefully guarded confidence of a narrow and privileged class. They are happily impossible where public opinion commands and insists upon full information concerning all the nation's affairs.

CAN'T TRUST AUTOCRATS.

"A steadfast concert for peace can never be maintained except by a partnership of democratic nations. No autocratic government could be trusted to keep faith within it or observe its covenants. It must be a league of honor, a partnership of opinion. Intrigue would eat its vitals away; the plottings of inner circles, who could plan what they would and render account to no one would be a corruption seated at its very heart. Only free people can hold their purpose and their honor steady to a common end and prefer the interest of mankind to any narrow interest of their own.

SEES HOPE IN RUSSIA.

"Does not every American feel that assurance has been added to our hope for the future peace of the world by the wonderful and heartening things that have been happening within the last few weeks in Russia?"

"Russia was known by those who knew it best to have been always in fact democratic at heart, in all the vital habits of her thought, in all the intimate relationships of her people that spoke their natural instinct, their habitual attitude towards life.

"The autocracy that crowned the summit of her political structure, long as it had stood and terrible as was the reality of the power, was not in fact Russian, and now it has been shaken off and the great, generous Russian people have been added in all their naive majesty and might to the forces that are fighting for freedom in the world, for justice and for peace. Here is a fit partner for a league of honor.

"One of the things that has served to convince us that the Prussian autocrat was not and could never be our friend is that from the very outset of the present war it has filled our unsuspecting communities and even our offices of government with spies and set criminal intrigues everywhere afoot against our national unity of council, our peace within and without, our industries and our commerce.

REVIEWS SPY PLOTS.

"Indeed it is now evident that its spies were here even before the war began and it is unhappily not a matter of conjecture, but a fact proved in our courts of justice that the intrigues which have more than once come perilously near to disturbing the peace, dislocating the industries of the country, have been carried out at the instigation, with the support, and even under the personal direction of official agents of the imperial government accredited to the government of the United States.

"Even in checking these things and trying to extirpate them we have sought to put the most generous interpretations possible upon them because we knew that their source lay not in any hostile feeling or purpose of the German people towards us (who were no doubt as ignorant of them as we ourselves were) but only in the selfish designs of a government that did what it pleased and told its people nothing. They have played their part in serving to convince us at last that the government entertains no real friendship for us and means to act against our peace and security at its convenience. That it means to stir up enemies against us at our very doors the intercepted note to the German minister at Mexico City is eloquent as evidence.

NO SECURITY FOR U. S.

"We are accepting this challenge of hostile purpose because we know that in such a government following such methods, we can never have a friend, and in the presence of its organized power, always lying in wait to accomplish we know not what purpose, there can be no assured security for the democratic governments of the world.

"We are now about to accept the gauge of battle, with this natural foe to liberty; and shall, if necessary, spend the whole force of the nation to check and nullify its pretensions and its power. We are glad now that we see the facts with no veil of false pretense about them, to fight thus for the ultimate peace of the world and for the liberation of its peoples, the German peoples included; for the rights of nations great and small, and the privilege of men everywhere to choose their way of life and obedience. The world must be made safe for democracy. Its peace must be planted upon the trusted foundations of political liberty.

"We have no selfish ends to serve. We desire no conquest, no dominion. We seek no indemnities for ourselves, no material compensation for the sacrifices we shall freely make. We are but one of the champions of the rights of mankind. We shall be satisfied when these rights have been as secure as the faith and the freedom of the nations can make them.

"Just because we fight without rancour and without selfish objects, seeking nothing for ourselves but what we shall wish to share as free peoples, we shall, I feel confident, conduct our operations as belligerents without passion and ourselves observe with proud punctilio the principles of right and of fair plan we profess to be fighting for.

"I have said nothing of the governments allied with the imperial government of Germany because they have not made war upon us or challenged us to defend our rights and our honor. The Austro-Hungarian government has indeed avowed its unqualified indorsement and acceptance of the reckless and lawless submarine warfare adopted now without disguise by the imperial German government, and it has, therefore, not been possible for this government to receive Count Tarnowski, the ambassador recently accredited to this government by the imperial and royal government of Austria-Hungary, but that government has not actually engaged in warfare against citizens of the United States on the seas, and I take the liberty for the present, at least, of postponing a decision of our relations with the authorities at Vienna. We enter this war only where we are clearly forced into it because there are no other means of defending our rights.

"It will be all the easier for us to conduct ourselves as belligerents in a high spirit of right and fairness because we act without animus, not in enmity towards a people nor with the desire to bring any injury or disadvantage upon them, but only in armed opposition to an irresponsible government, which has thrown aside all considerations of humanity and of right and is running amuck.

FRIENDS OF GERMANS.

"We are, let me say again, the sincere friends of the German people and shall desire nothing so much as the early reestablishment of intimate relations of mutual advantage between us—however hard it may be for them, for the time being to believe that this is spoken from our hearts. We have borne with their present government through all these bitter months because of that friendship—exercising a patience and forebearance which would otherwise have been impossible.
